World Day of Prayer Service March 2 - 7:30 p.m.

The "World Day of Prayer" service in the Riverdale community will be held Friday, March 2, at 7:30 p.m. The service will be held at St. Mark Evangelical Lutheran Church in Saint Joe.

Women from churches of the community have joined in planning the local service. Represented are the United Methodist and St. Peter Evangelical Lutheran churches of Spencerville, Newville United Methodist Church, Concord United Methodist Church and Saint Joe Church of Christ, as well as the host congregation.

"Spirited Growth" is the World Day of Prayer theme and was written by students in the Pan-African Leadership Course For Women at Mindolo Ecumenical Foundation in Kitwe, Zambia. Each year women in a different nation are asked to write the World Day of Prayer service based on themes chosen by the International Committee For World Day of Prayer.

The annual service dates back to 1887. This year women in 140 countries and 33 islands will unite in prayer on the historic day.

The women of Africa send this message: "Our warm greetings to all the Christians around the world who are coming together from different places for the World Day of Prayer, 1979. We hope the voices of the Pan-Africa Leadership Course at Mindolo can be heard in solidarity with the voices of women in the world as we pray together on World Day of Prayer, 1979."

Lady Blazers Edged In Tourney

A strong point of the Lady Blazers of DeKalb Eastside High School, making their free throws, became their weak point against Bellmont in the semi-state basketball tourney at Northrop High School at Fort Wayne. And the Ladies were eliminated from further tourney competition by a 53-48 score.

Both teams had 21 field goals. But Bellmont came up with 11 free throws to only 6 for the Ladies. The locals missed several in the first half while Bellmont didn't miss in the closing minutes. And that made the difference.

The Lady Blazers ended the season with a 19-4 won-lost record. It marks the end of the high school careers for Lithe Lisa Johnson, Adorable Amy Hampel, Super Sunda Obendorf and Runt Jo Baughman. All four have been on the sectional championship teams for the past three years plus this year's regional crown. The fifth member of the Ladies' original "iron-man" five, Curvy Connie Oberlin, graduated last year after being on two sectional championship teams.

The fifth spot on this year's team rotated early in the season between Paula King and Laurie Culler. However, late in the season Leapin' Laurie became a starter and gave indications that she will be the key member of next year's squad.

Against Bellmont, the "scoring twins" of Eastside, Lisa and Amy, each came up with 18 points. Sunda proved to be "super" under the boards with 20 rebounds. Laurie had 10. Jo Baughman, despite her low scoring, proved once again to be a key, perhaps "the" key, in the Ladies' defense in addition to her playmaking ability.

The game was very "physicall," rough and rugged with a lot of contact allowed by the officials. Several times a player or players sprawled on the basketball court in a scramble. In one such instance, there were four players strung out in a chain-reaction effort for possession of the ball. A Bellmont player took an especially hard fall late in the game and was motionless, face down, on the floor, as the Ladies tried to take advantage on rebounding of their missed shot. But the ball just wouldn't go in before Bellmont got possession and play was stopped. The Bellmont player was helped from the floor and apparently did not suffer serious injury.

In addition to missed free throws, the Lady Blazers saw several shots roll in and out in the first half. The ball appeared to be overly "live" off the rim and it had to be "right in" to bring a score.

The hard-fought game between two well-matched teams is indicated in the close scores at the quarters—13-12 Eastside, 23-all tie, and 35-all tie, before the final period when Bellmont had an 18-13 advantage due to free throws as the Ladies were forced to foul in trying to gain possession.

On defense this time, Lisa prepares to come around from the back for an attempted steal as Laurie Culler blocks an onponent's path to the basket.

'Balanced Family' Is Series' Theme

The Spencerville United Methodist Church has set up a series of meetings under the theme, "Balanced Family."

A "kickoff" meeting Sunday, March 4, at 2:00 p.m. will provide for community discussion on family communication. Rev. Terry Rhine, pastor of the congregation, is leading the series of meetings which are open to the public. Future monthly meetings will present topics to be chosen by questionnaire at each meeting for discussion at the following meeting.

Baby-sitting will be provided for those parents needing such service. Light refreshments will be served. Donations will be accepted.

All ages are invited to attend and participate—and "communicate."

Benefit Auction

Concord United Methodist Church members are planning a benefit potluck for the Jordan family of Garrett. Twins were born to the Jordans in December. However, health problems required hospitalization of the babies for several weeks. As a result some $20,000 in medical expenses have been incurred and family insurance covers only $3,000 of the medical bills.

The Concord church will serve the potluck Saturday, March 17, starting at 6 p.m. Residents of this area are urged and invited to bring a prepared dish and table service to the supper and help the Jordans with a donation.

Dr. David Pepple's office can provide additional information about the situation, should anyone wish to inquire. The phone number is 925-1205.

Dean Mishler

Funeral services were held February 22 for Dean Mishler, 43, of R1 Saint Joe who died at Parkview Memorial Hospital in Fort Wayne early Tuesday morning. Death was due to acute leukemia and complications arising from the leukemia. He had been a patient at the hospital three months.

There is no known cure for the disease, also known as cancer of the blood. Chemotherapy can in some instances stop the spreading of the disease for a limited time. Such treatment is itself difficult to bear physically and therefore becomes an additional burden on the afflicted. Mr. Mishler had been receiving chemotherapy at first. It was stopped when complications arose, then undertaken again. But the physical drain was then too much and death resulted.

Born June 2, 1935, in Greenville, Michigan, the son of Ray and Ruth Schrider Mishler, Mr. Mishler was employed as a truck driver by Neuhouser & Kryder Poultry Company of Crystal, Michigan. On May 5, 1962, he and Julie Sisson were married.

Survivors include his wife; a daughter, Julie Ann; two sons, Raymond and Joel; and his mother.

Funeral services were held at Coburn Corners Church of Christ with John Paul Hill officiating. Burial was in Alton Cemetery.

Ladies Lit'y Club

—Fern Carr, reporter

The Ladies Literary Club met at the home of Mrs. Carl Perkins February 14.

Mrs. Forrest Bevington, president, called the meeting to order and the collect and pledge to the flag were given in unison.

The lesson was on poetry with all members participating. Roll call was answered by seven members. Receipt was received for blind material sold, for $109.00.

Since the March 7 meeting is on fine arts, members agreed to dispense with the regular meeting and attend as a group a Histroical Society program on March 11 at 2 p.m. at Eckhart Public Library in Auburn.

Entertainment was by Mrs. Carl Perkins.

Gentlemen's Evening will be March 21 with Mrs. Robert Musser and Mrs. Harvey Carr serving as the committee.

Critic's report was given by Mrs. Roy Baker.

After adjournment, the hostess served a very delicious lunch.

Newville Twp. Homemakers

On Valentine's Day, hostesses Bivere Brush and Doris Ball entertained the Newville Township Home Ec Club in the Hicksville Bank rooms.

After a delicious potluck dinner, President Zella Collins led the collect. Judy Morrison read several Valentines by Helen Steiner Rice, also the story of Jack Benny providing for a perfect red rose to be sent to his wife every day of her life after his death.

17 members gave a Valentine verse for roll call. They also made Valentines for their secret pals. Kathy Kiesler was a guest.

Lois Guiff led the club in the song of the month, "Let Me Call You Sweetheart." Get-well cards were signed for Doris Ball and Edna Kilpatrick.

"Happy Bithday" was sung to Bivere Brush, also to Ruth Phillips who was absent in January.

Dorine Singer had bingo for entertainment.

The March 14 potluck will be held at the home of Elva Hood at 231 East High, Apartment 4, in Hicksville. Annabelle Culler will be co-hostess and roll call will be "my pet peeve."

TO THE EDITOR—

Dear Mr. Haberkorn:

Thank you for your letter regarding Senate Bill 392 and House Bill 1144. I could not agree more that elected officials should run our state and local government and not union bosses. We do need to set up a two-way communication program that would be satisfactory to both with good employer and good employee definitions and rules.

Thank you for your interest in good government.

Sincerely,

The DeKalb Eastside Blazers closed their regular season with a 66-56 win over Carroll on "Senior and Parent Night" at the Butler gym.

The game was tied at the end of one quarter. Then Carroll took a 4-point lead at the half.

The Blazers then outscored Carroll 15-5 in the third period to take a 44-38 lead. They also led the scoring in the final period for the win.

Gary Rinard had 22 points to lead Blazer scoring. Ed Moughler had 17 and Rex Buell 12.

The DeKalb Eastside Blazers resorted to stalling tactics in their sectional tourney game against the DeKalb Central Barons. It worked for most of the first quarter. But turnovers ruined the strategy and the Barons rolled to an easy 62-34 win.

The game was scoreless for the first few minutes before the Blazers led 3-2. But bad passes and other errors allowed the Barons to gain an 8-3 lead at the end of the first quarter.

The Blazers pulled up to 8-7 in the second period. But then the Barons took complete control of the game.

Ed Moughler was the only Blazer to score in double figures with 12 points.

Penitential Season Of Lent Begins

The season of Lent began in the local Lutheran parish this week. The season has traditionally been one of quiet contemplation of the events leading up to the crucifixion of Jesus Christ and His resurrection. In recent years, thought has been given to other matters, such as social mission and the part other Biblical personages have played in the development of the Christian faith.

Shrove Tuesday (February 27) was observed at St. Peter Lutheran Church at Spencerville with the serving of a pancake supper.

Then the beginning of the Lenten season was observed Ash Wednesday (February 28) at St. Mark church in Saint Joe with Rev. Wilbur Miller leading the "Services of Ashes."

In this service, those attending presented themselves at the altar singly or in pairs to receive the sign of the cross, marked on the forehead by the pastor whose fingers had been dipped in ashes. The ashes came from the burning of palm leaves from Palm Sunday of last year. The solemn service is a reminder of the inevitability of death ("ashes to ashes, dust to dust"). Receiving the mark of the Cross on the forehead with ashes serves as a reminder of the need for dedication to Godly purposes and an inspiration from the anticipation of the joy found in the Easter festival season.

Lent is a season of forty days (not counting Sundays). Church altars in those congregations and denominations observing the season are comparatively barren, a reminder of the lone figure on the Cross. "Doing without" certain things is a further self-discipline of many in the Christian faith. The token "sacrifice" serves them as a continuing reminder of the sacrifice on the Cross.

In the "Handbook of Christian Feasts and Customs" by Francis X. Weiser, the historical background of the use of ashes is described:

"The use of ashes as a token of penance and sorrow is an ancient one, often mentioned in the Scripture of the Old Testament (for example, in Jonah 3: 5-9 and Jeremiah 6:26 and 25:34). Christ, too, refers to this custom, in Matthew 11:21. The Church accepted it from Jewish tradition and preserved its original meaning. The early Christian writer, Tertullian (third century), mentions the imposition of ashes as one of the external marks of public penance. Persons who had committed serious public sin and scandal were enjoined on Ash Wednesday with the practice of 'public penance.' The period of this penance lasted until Holy Thursday, when they were solemnly reconciled, absolved from their sins, and allowed to receive Holy Communion. Since it extended through 40 days, its observance was called "quarantine" (forty). This word was also accepted into general use to denote a separation or expulsion from human contact in the case of infectious diseases."

The serious nature of the early church is found in the following further comments from the handbook:

"Public sinners approached their priests shortly before Lent to accuse themselves of their misdeeds and were presented by the priest on Ash Wednesday to the bishop of the place. Outside the cathedral, poor and noble alike stood barefoot, dressed in sackcloth, heads bowed in humble contrition. The bishop, assisted by his canons, assigned to each one particular acts of penance according to the nature and gravity of the crime. Whereupon they entered the church, the bishop leading one of them by the hand, the others following in single file, holding each other's hands. Before the altar, not only the penitents but also the bishop and all his clergy recited the seven penitential psalms. Then, as each sinner approached, the bishop imposed his hands on him, sprinkled him with holy water, threw the blessed ashes on his head, and invested him with the tunic of sackcloth.

"After this ceremony the penitents were led out of the church and forbidden to re-enter until Holy Thursday (for the solemn rite of reconciliation). Meanwhile they would spend Lent apart from their families in a monastery or some other place of voluntary confinement, where they occupied themselves with prayer, manual labor and works of charity."

The severity of Ash Wednesday supplication for certain erring individuals changed in the 11th to 12th centuries and became a universal observance of the need for penance by every Christian. Thus the some 55 who attended the Ash Wednesday service this week were not girded in sackcloth and were not banished from fellowship for the 40 days of Lent. But they did leave the service each with a cross marked on their foreheads with ashes.

Wednesday night vesper services will continue in the Lutheran parish during Lent. Pastor Wilbur Miller will present a "historical guest" each Wednesday night.

The schedule of Lenten services and the "guest" is as follows:

March 7, St. Mark, Jeremiah the Prophet.

March 14, St. Mark, John the Baptizer.

March 21, St. Peter, Peter the Fisherman.

March 28, St. Peter, Judas the Betrayer.

April 4, St. Peter, Thomas the Doubter.

At the April 12 service (Maundy Thursday) at St. Mark, the evening vespers will include Holy Communion.

"Maundy" is the ceremony of washing the feet in commemoration of Christ's washing of the disciples' feet at the Last Supper.

The April 13 (Good Friday) vespers at St. Peter will be the "Service of Tenebrae." The altar will be stripped and the nave darkened as a reminder of the crucifixion.

Easter morning sunrise service at St. Peter church will begin at 6:00 a.m. with Holy Communion to be received. A fellowship breakfast will follow at 7:00 a.m.

The "Festival of the Resurrection" will be held at St. Mark church at 10:30 a.m. with the celebration of the Holy Eucharist.

All evening vesper services during Lent start at 7:30 p.m.

Penitents are invited to attend any and all services.

Cub Scout Paper Drive

Cub Scout Pack 3172 will conduct a paper drive in the Riverdale area Saturday, April 7, starting at 9 a.m.

While there will be a door-to-door solicitation, those who have papers to donate may call the following to bedefinitely scheduled for pickup:

Adult officer and den leader Merle and Ruth Delagrange at 337-5054; Cubmaster Bob Tejan at 337-5505; or den leader Leo Steffen at 238-4627.

If it will be more convenient for pickup before April 7, donors may call any of the above numbers for advance pickup.

Benefit Potluck

Concord United Methodist Church members are planning a benefit potluck for the Jordan family of Garrett. Twins were born to the Jordans in December. However, health problems required hospitalization of the babies for several weeks. As a result some $20 000 in medical expenses have been incurred and family insurance covers only $3,000 of the medical bills.

The Concord church will serve the potluck Saturday, March 17, starting at 6 p.m. Residents of this area are urged and invited to bring a prepared dish and table service to the supper and help the Jordans with a donation.

Dr. David Pepple's office can provide additional information about the situation, should anyone wish to inquire. The phone number is 925-1205.

Nutrition Program Too Costly

I am certain there are those who sigh in resignation at those times when I "spout off" about this or that government program involved in what I call welfare but others call "aid to the needy" or something like that.

One of the programs is that concerning "senior citizen nutrition." I imagine a lot of people think I am "against" the elderly when I criticize such programs. They overlook the facts in the matter and often accept as gospel the "good things" publicized by those engaged in administering the program.

(Also forgotten is that I myself am just a step away from the "senior citizen" category.)

I am all for seeing to it that the elderly who cannot provide proper nutrition for themselves (because of finances or physical incapability) are provided with proper nutrition. However, there is one basic thing wrong with the senior citizen nutrition program. I wonder how many recognize this mistake which in effect marks ALL senior citizens as incapable of providing for their own proper nutrition.

I am not making this up; it is a part of the program specifically pointed out by a top administrator of the program in a recent radio interview. Here it is:

Every citizen 60 years of age and over is eligible to partake of the daily noon lunches. There is no limit as to income, as is the case with receiving Social Security benefits.

What does this mean?

First, it means that every citizen over 60 is considered needy with regard to nutrition. Thus, the "dignity" which social planners say they are attempting to preserve for the elderly in the "senior years" is taken away; it is not preserved. Every senior citizen who eats those meals is doing so at the taxpayers' expense. The amount charged for the meals in no way can cover the cost of those meals; it wasn't intended to. The difference between the cost of preparation and the amount paid by the senior citizen is made up with federal funds — and that means taxes.

Further, it means that despite the ability of the vast majority of senior citizens to take care of themselves, the federal government has exercised ITS judgment and has promoted the idea that, when you reach the age of 60, you are in need of someone else to tell you what to eat. You can have a million dollars in the bank and have no financial need at all—the government (and those administering the program) still take the attitude that you need to be taken care of.

Second, due to the fact that ALL citizens over 60 are entitled to "low-cost" meals regardless of income, those who really are in need do not have as much assistance as they possibly should have. Funds being used to feed the free-loaders should be used to give MORE assistance to the truly needy senior citizens.

The most damaging indictment of the senior citizen nutrition program lies in the fact that it is an indication of the subtle but effective way that our citizens, senior and not so senior, are being indoctrinated into socialism. Whenever you place ALL citizens in the category of "needs assistance at the age of 60", you have set in motion the destruction of self-sustenance, you have set aside an American principle of self-reliance.

Just think of it. Thousands of retired citizens are enjoying the sunny climes of the south during the winter, every winter. And if they want, they can go to the nutrition center and get a low-cost meal — while thousands of younger families face the task of stretching the budget but lose the race with inflation and higher taxes.

This is not an easy thing to write about. Paul Fetters of Saint Joe is president of the county nutrition committee. He and I have discussed the matter a few times in the past couple of years. I am of the opinion that, if he were not the stubborn, independent cuss he is, the nutrition program might not be county-wide in scope—and that scope is still somewhat limited.
He doesn't take everything as "gospel" and is usually the one to ask the all-important question — "why?" — when he himself has doubts or reservations.

But even his "watchdog" efforts do not eliminate the fact that the nationwide senior citizen nutrition program is costly because the administrative organization exists and must be paid for by taxpayers whether you have 20 or 200 senior citizens enjoying the meals.

In the statistics given to me by Mr. Fetters, published in the previous issue, it is indicated that 1658 meals were served in January (homebound meals, site meals and box lunches). The average amount of money received from those enjoying the meals was 67 cents, which is one-half the cost of preparing the meals according to Mr. Fetters. The other half presumably is paid for by the taxpayers.

The bus used to provide transportation of citizens to the Heimach Center or to deliver homebound meals logged a total of 2,048 miles. That comes to 68 miles per day. If the bus made a daily circuit-trip to Waterloo, then to Butler, then to the Riverdale area, that would be about right.

But it doesn't. Those miles include stops in Auburn and near Auburn. The service provided through the Heimach Center is, therefore, confined to a considerable degree to those close to it. Thus, all taxpayers are helping to pay for a program which is useful on a daily basis to a certain area.

No, I'm not proposing that they get another bus (that suggestion would probably come from the higher-ups in the Council On Aging). I'm suggesting that we can't afford a program which is restricted to a certain area within a larger area supposedly benefitting from the program. I don't believe one trip a week for senior citizens in the Riverdale area, to get a nutritious meal, is going to sustain them for the other six days of the week. I'm suggesting that ALL senior citizens are being classified as "needy" in order to have the program in the first place. (I wonder if that's how they classify themselves?) I'm suggesting that when you reach the age of 60, you are automatically considered to be incapable of feeding yourself properly and thus become a member of the welfare rolls.

I think it's fine that the center was named for an outstanding Auburn citizen, a clergyman who died in the prime of life. But I don't surrender to the emotionalism which has surrounded the local senior citizens program, including the meals served under the nutrition program. A lot of good people are volunteering their time from the ranks of the senior citizens. But a lot of other people are being paid by taxpayers' money to administer and plan senior citizens' activities with the outlook that our older citizens are just sitting around and wasting away.

Looking around the Riverdale area, I don't see such conditions existing at all. I see elderly people whose churches, families and neighbors are providing as much attention as the elderly will accept. For the most part, they lived independently during their earlier years and, by golly, that's the way they want to stay. The problem isn't that they are mentally incapable; the problem is that taxes and inflation MAKE them dependent.

An article in the county daily indicates that the "meals on wheels" effort desperately needs volunteers for drivers. That may be — I said "may be," not "is" — an indication of how comparatively small the need is for a government-based program for senior citizens.

Before the government stepped in, Auburn had a "meals on wheels" program through volunteer workers of a church or churches. And it appeared to be serving a basic need of certain senior citizens.

In the Riverdale area, the "Fifty Plus Club" has had success for an average attendance of over 40 (meetings disband in the winter months due in part to the weather — and about half the members are in Florida!). The club does not have a daily "meals on wheels" program; it is a monthly pot-luck and social affair and those senior citizens run their own show.

I'm curious. How many senior citizens do you know who are not able to buy or prepare enough food for their good health or are almost totally "abandoned" when it comes to contacts with the outside world?

Did you know-

—that Ruth Ellen Johnson of R1 Saint Joe and Roy Eugene Searcy of R4 Mt. Vernon plan a May 19 wedding at the Butler United Methodist Church.

—that Marie Cupp of R1 Saint Joe was admitted to DeKalb Memorial Hospital this week.

—that MM Steve Fuller of Hicksville are parents of a daughter born February 27 at DeKalb Memorial Hospital.

—that Cheryl Lynne Melchi of Spencerville and Larry Dale Kummer of Waterloo plan a summer wedding.

—that Wednesday and Thursday mornings were "bad days" in town for automobiles. Wednesday a car skidded into two other cars at the Lynn Duke residence and Thursday two cars tried to occupy the same space at Washington and Fourth streets.

—that Hillsdale College in Hillsdale, Michigan, already employs 122 women to 103 men. But chairman Joseph Califano of the federal Health, Education and Welfare Department is attempting to force the college into a government-funded "affirmative action" plan to give women an even break. Such a move would make the college subject to more bureaucratic interference with private education. The school has kept the principle of self-control for more than a century.

—that entries are limited to 200 animals for the 1979 Hoosier Beef Show to be held October 3 at the saddle horse barn at the state fairgrounds.

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

The slowly climbing temperatures plus some sunny days have brought thoughts of baseball and church league softball. Along with them came the realization that last fall's announcement of financial support for the church league's new lighting fixtures did not contain one name. So this is to acknowledge a $250 donation from Frank Sechler for Sechler's Pickles.

Someone asked about the "blockhead" fund-raiser I had late last summer for a new concession stand. Well, when the weather breaks and we find an experienced block layer who will help us out, the stand will go up. The fund totals around $250.

It isn't pleasant to face the task—and responsibility—of reporting such things as the drug trafficking article in this issue.

But I think it's long past time to realize that the talk we hear about drugs in the schools is not just talk.

The problem exists in every community, in every school system. And I have a hunch that the lack of more anti-drug activity by our law enforcement agencies is due to the reluctance to bring hurt and grief into the homes of friends and neighbors.

When I "tore down" the last issue, I noted that the story of the benefit potluck was headlined "Benefit Auction"—and no one told me about it.

Whatsamatter? Ya give up??

Harry and Lois Strong found a bunch of keys lying on the road at Dick Crow's place. Lois says one of the keys is for a Subaru. The owner can claim them by calling the Strongs.

John Graham

Injuries suffered in an accident January 31 proved fatal for John L. Graham, 62, of R1 Waterloo, former sheriff of DeKalb County. He died Tuesday in Parkview Memorial Hospital in Fort Wayne.

The injuries occurred when Mr. Graham was operating a road grader and drove into the path of a Chessie railroad engine. He had been in serious condition due to multiple injuries but appeared to be improving until Tuesday's heart attack or stroke.

Mr. Graham became sheriff in 1973 when he completed the term of Jim Sims who was named chairman of the Indiana Alcoholic Beverage Commission that year. He was re-elected sheriff in 1974 and did not seek re-election in 1978.

In 1976 Mr. Graham was named "Outstanding Law Enforcement Officer" in Indiana by the Indiana Council of Fraternal Veterans and Social Societies. He servved in the past on the DeKalb central school board three terms. He was a member of the Bible Baptist Church, the Waterloo Lions Club, the Auburn American Legion Post and the state and national sheriffs' associations. He served in the Marines during World War II.

Funeral services were set for Friday at 2 p.m. at the Bible Baptist Church with Rev. Wayne Smith officiating and Rev. Robert Seigrist assisting. Burial will be in the Waterloo Cemetery.

Drug 'Bust' Gets Local Man

Dick Kagey, 22, of R1 Saint Joe was released on $5,000 bond last weekend following his arrest on drug trafficking charges. His arrest was made in conjunction with the arrest of ten people in Hicksville Friday night.

Kagey's home arrest came after the alleged sale of marijuana to an undercover agent.

Arrested at Hicksville were Paige Craig, 18, trafficking and drug abuse; Jeffrey Hull, 24, trafficking; Timothy O'Coners, 24, trafficking; Karen O'Coners, 22, trafficking; Harold "Bo Bo" Blankenbeckler, 18, (Defiance), trafficking; Michael Waldron, 22, complicitv in trafficking and permitting drug abuse; Allen Singleton, 23, trafficking; Judith Elliott Hull, 22, complicity in traffick ng; and Jack Wright (Bryan), 24, pe mitting drug abuse. Kimberly Snell, 18, was arrested for obstructing official business and a 16-year-old was charged with trafficking in drugs.

A 23-year-old undercover agent was placed in Hicksville High School. During a six-week period he became acquainted with the drug trafficking activities, posing as an 18-year-old high school senior.

A party at the agent's apartment was set up Friday evening and a raid implemented. In addition, there were three homes visited for additional arrests.

Confiscated by law enforcement officers were quantities of marijuana, hash, pills, suspected cocaine and LSD, drug paraphernalia such as pipes and syringes, and several weapons.

Benefit Potluck

Concord United Methodist Church members are planning a benefit potluck for the Jordan family of Garrett. Twins were born to the Jordans in December. However, health problems required hospitalization of the babies for several weeks. As a result some $20,000 in medical expenses have been incurred and family insurance covers only $3,000 of the medical bills.

The Concord church will serve the potluck Saturday, March 17, starting at 6 p.m. Residents of this area are urged and invited to bring a prepared dish and table service to the supper and help the Jordans with a donation.

Dr. David Pepple's office can provide additional information about the situation, should anyone wish to inquire. The phone number is 925-1205.

Cub Scout Paper Drive

Cub Scout Pack 3172 will conduct a paper drive in the Riverdale area Saturday, April 7, starting at 9 a.m.

Adult officer and den leader Merle and Ruth Delagrange at 337-5054; Cubmaster Bob Tejan at 337-5505; or den leader Leo Steffen at 238-4627.

If it will be more convenient for pickup before April 7, donors may call any of the above numbers for advance pickup.

Andy Crow New Board Member

Andy Crow of R1 Saint Joe was sworn in Monday as a member of the DeKalb eastern school board. He replaces the late Earle Kelsey.

Mr. Crow and his brother, Pat, are partners in the operation of Crow's Rainbow Farm Center, Inc., in Saint Joe.

The new board member is married to the former Margie Fetters of Saint Joe. They are parents of two children.

Mr. Crow is active in Coburn Corners Church of Christ activities and is a member of the Saint Joe Lions Club, having served as president of the club in the past.

In other school board action, the driver education fee for each student was left at $30. School funds pay some $5,000 and the remainder of the total cost of $14,000 for a year is paid by the state. 109 students took driver training last year.

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

When Julie Mishler brought in her letter of thanks appearing in this issue, she was obviously touched by the response from the community. She noted that when the Mishlers came to Saint Joe, they were told that people here were rather cool and not too friendly. She said, "Don't anybody ever say that again because I know better. Everyone was so wonderful and helpful."

Lenten Services

March 7, St. Mark, Jeremiah the Prophet.

March 14, St. Mark, John the Baptizer.

March 21, St. Peter, Peter the Fisherman.

March 28, St. Peter, Judas the Betrayer.

April 4, St. Peter, Thomas the Doubter.

At the April 12 service (Maundy Thursday) at St. Mark, the evening vespers will include Holy Communion.

"Maundy" is the ceremony of washing the feet in commemoration of Christ's washing of the disciples' feet at the Last Supper.

The April 13 (Good Friday) vespers at St. Peter will be the "Service of Tenebrae." The altar will be stripped and the nave darkened as a reminder of the crucifixion.

Easter morning sunrise service at St. Peter church will begin at 6:00 a.m. with Holy Communion to be received. A fellowship breakfast will follow at 7:00 a.m.

The "Festival of the Resurrection" will be held at St. Mark church at 10:30 a.m. with the celebration of the Holy Eucharist.

Benefit Potluck

Concord United Methodist Church members are planning a benefit potluck for the Jordan family of Garrett. Twins were born to the Jordans in December. However, health problems required hospitalization of the babies for several weeks. As a result some $20,000 in medical expenses have been incurred and family insurance covers only $3,000 of the medical bills.

The Concord church will serve the potluck Saturday, March 17, starting at 6 p.m. Residents of this area are urged and invited to bring a prepared dish and table service to the supper and help the Jordans with a donation.

Dr. David Pepple's office can provide additional information about the situation, should anyone wish to inquire. The phone number is 925-1205.

Cub Scout Paper Drive

Cub Scout Pack 3172 will conduct a paper drive in the Riverdale area Saturday, April 7, starting at 9 a.m.

While there will be a door-to-door solicitation, those who have papers to donate may call the following to bedefinitely scheduled for pickup:

Adult officer and den leader Merle and Ruth Delagrange at 337-5054; Cubmaster Bob Tejan at 337-5505; or den leader Leo Steffen at 238-4627.

If it will be more convenient for pickup before April 7, donors may call any of the above numbers for advance pickup.

'Singspiration' March 25

Believing what James declared in James 5:13: ". . . is anyone happy? Let him sing songs of praise," the Saint Joe Church of Christ meeting on Jefferson Street is planning an evening for the singing of praises to God. This time of singing will be Sunday, March 25, at 7 p.m. in the church building.

Everyone who loves the Lord and wishes to raise their voice in song with other people of God are invited to attend. Al Holman has arranged for special music by members of the Saint Joe congregation, much of which will be by family groups. This evening is planned as an expression of love to God for the blessings He has given to us as His people.

"We will be looking for you. Won't you come and help us lift our voices in praise to God?"

'Wizard' At EHS

An anouncememt has been made of the forthcoming production, "The Wizard of Oz," by the DeKalb Eastside High School Drama Department.

The musical will be presented April 6 and 7 at 8 p.m. at the high school.

Advance ticket sale prices are $2.25 for adults and $1.25 for students. Prices at the door will be $2.50 and $1.50, respectively.

Melanie Myers of the high school faculty is director.

4-H Dog Club

Youth of the county are reminded that enrollment for the DeKalb County 4-H Dog Club will be held Monday, March 19, at 7:00 p.m. at the Exhibit Hall in Auburn.

Those who wish to join are invited to attend. However, no dogs should be taken to the meeting which is devoted primarily to enrollment and presentation of information about club activities.

Tapes Document Barons' Brilliant 78-79 Season

The DeKalb Central Barons were defeated 70-49 by Harding Saturday night to end the Barons' quest for the state championship. They had gained an impressive 26 0 won-lost record up to the Harding contest.

The spectacular season was marked by many last-second and overtime wins, which led WIFF broadcaster Bob McNary to dub them the "Cardiac Kids."

The Barons defeated Westview 68-60 Saturday afternoon to gain entry into the championship game. But an injury to one of their starters affected their overall play Saturday night. And hot shooting by Harding helped to end the win streak of the Barons.

For those fans who wish to have a memento of the past season, WIFF radio has prepared a cassette tape of the closing minutes of those close-win contests. Produced and narrated by Phil Haberkorn of WIFF, the tapes are available at DeKalb Central High School for $5.00. Proceeds go to the Baron athletic department.

The tape replays, which took some 10 hours to prepare and edit, contain a running narrative and suspense-creating background music to bring continuity to the highlights of the Barons' outstanding season.

Troy Emerson Is Top Speller

Troy Emerson, son of MM Dean Emerson of R1 Saint Joe, won the Riverdale Elementary School spelling bee last week.

Twenty-four fifth and sixth grade pupils began the contest with Troy finally defeating Bruce Stahl to win. Bruce is the son of MM Verlyn Johnson of R1 Auburn.

Troy now advances to the DeKalb County contest at the J. E. Ober Elementary School in Garrett April 17 at 7:30 p.m.

The spelling bee is sponsored by the Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette.

Michael Now On 'Cuts-Curls' Staff

Kay Smith has added another dimension to hair care service available at "Family Cuts and Curls" in Saint Joe.

Michael Jones is now the fourth member of the staff headed by Kay. He is providing women's and men's cutting, styling and permanent waving and adds "the male touch" in creating the type of hair styling which complements each individual's particular type of hair and general physical characteristics.

Michael is a graduate of North Side High School in Fort Wayne and attended college for one year, planning on an engineering career. He then abandoned his early plans and obtained employment in a cosmetics supply house. It was during this employment that he became interested in professional hair cutting and styling.

Michael then attended the Four Winds Academy of Hair Design at Fort Wayne and is a licensed cosmetologist.

The staff of four at "Family Cuts and Curls," Kay, Michael, stylist Cindy Culbertson and receptionist Carol King, attended a trade show in Chicago March 5.

Kay then attended a four-day Redken seminar in Louisville. In April she will be certified for teaching the use of trichoanalysis, a hair analysis service developed by Redken and available at "Family Cuts and Curls." Such training and teaching is part of Redken's research and development program.

Michael is a full-time member of the staff and is available by appointment for men's and women's hair cutting, styling and permanent waving.

In Appreciation

From Julie Mishler:

The Dean Mishler Family would like to express their deepest love and gratitude to all of those people who were so kind and helpful to us during Dean's long illness and at his passing.

Thank you for all of the prayers, cards and visits at Parkview and a special thanks for the trust fund that was set up in our behalf at the Coburn Corners Church of Christ by the St. Joe Lions Club, and everyone who contributed to it. Also to Neuhouser-Kryder Poultry and its employees at Leo for their total support and concern.

We also wish to thank Dr. Gabrys, Dr. Myer and all of the wonderful nurses on 4 East at Parkview Memorial Hospital for their care and concern.

Also MM Johnson, Rev. John Paul Hill, Larry McKown, Lois Strong and Coburn Corners church for the services and lovely meal afterward.

Dean was truly honored to have so many friends in his time of need and it has made our loss so much easier to bear knowing that he is resting in God's care now.

God bless each and every one of you for your response to our needs.

Lack Of Information Hurts

The band uniform purchase project has been mishandled from the very start. Secrecy has surrounded certain parts of the project. Lack of adequate information for those who foot the bill—taxpayers and homemakers who purchase items in fund-raising efforts—has created a number of questions which are unanswered.

Notice of last week's meeting and this week's meeting was given on such short notice that advance announcement could not be made in the school district's two newspapers. Thus school patrons knew of the meeting after it was held, for the most part. Neither the Saint Joe News nor the Butler Bulletin could reach their mail subscribers before the Wednesday meetings.

It is unfortunate that a "hassle" has arisen in the matter. It is, in some instances, getting down to "the north v the south" rivalry several years ago during the "site fight." The matter should be concerned only with the positive points, if there is going to be any success at all in getting the community behind the project.

The Wednesday night meetings were on short notice and also came on the same night that many churches utilize for mid-week services and others are using for services during the Lenten season. Some parents who would have gone could not.

The word "mishandled" used above is appropriate for the following reasons:

The original announcement of the project, reportedly made to band member parents by letter, called for 200 uniforms at $200 each, a total of some $40,000.

The selection of the style of uniform and colors was stated to some parents as having been made by "they." But "they" have not been definitely identified, according to reports coming from last week's meeting. "The kids" have been referred to as the ones making the decisions, but some of "the kids" have no knowledge of a meeting at which they could express their choice.

The only report of finances given this paper has been that the Band Boosters have $3,500 in their treasury. If there is a larger amount, no announcement has been made to inform the public.

The number of uniforms was reduced from 200 to 130 or thereabouts and the total cost estimated at $25,000. But no one seems to know who made the reduction.

Even with the reduction, $25,000 is a lot of money and those who now say that adults are causing all the trouble or that no tax money is involved just aren't realizing what they are saying.

The school board can match the funds raised by the Band Boosters. But there has been no indication that the board has agreed to do so. In fact, there is no indication that the board has even been approached officially to find out if the board can and will match Band Booster funds.

The meetings held Wednesday of this week and last week and announced only two days before came "after the horse was out of the barn." Such meetings should have been announced with adequate time in advance and held at the very start of the project.

One school board member is reported to have stated that there is no money available in school funds for uniforms. But that overlooks the privilege the board has to transfer certain unused funds into a band uniform fund. It's being done elsewhere.

The whole thing has been bungled and it's too bad because the uniforms probably are needed and the community and the school board could provide them.

When, oh when, are some of the folks in the district going to recognize that 40% of our enrollment in the district comes from the Riverdale area. And we "down in the valley" would like to know what is going on—to go along with being asked for money for school purposes.

Town Board 'Self Pay Raise' Is Illegal And Unethical

—by The Editor

To some people, it may seem unnecessary to be overly concerned with the manner in which town affairs are handled and the finances related to those affairs. After all, compared to an annual federal budget of over $500 billion, our town's total budget of $46,000 for 1979 is peanuts. However, it IS tax money and, regardless of the smallness of a taxing unit, the manner in which public funds are used IS important.

$46,000 — that's the total budget for 1979 as proposed last August. Just for comparison, the total budget in 1971 was advertised at under $23,000 (that was the final year in my last four-year term on the town board). So, in nine years the town budget has doubled. That does not mean there is more purchasing power to use in more places. It does mean, however, that there is a continuing need for knowledgeable and careful use of those tax dollars.

Late last summer, I commented on the present town board's proposal to increase its own pay. Further comments appeared recently. It doesn't seem right to destroy the nature of serving in a small-community office by raising one's own pay. Going from $150 a year to $500 a year is a big jump. And the board members who proposed the hike are far from "needy," yet they asked the taxpayer to pay more.

The pay raise put in the budget for 1979 is illegal. Indiana statutes prohibit these elected officials from raising the pay of their office during their term in office. The only pay increases the town board can make are for those appointed or hired by the board. They can lower their pay if they want to, but they cannot increase their pay.

If anyone asks (as I did), "How did the illegal pay raise get by state examiners?", the answer is: the examiners did not get into the actual budget itself. When it was noted at the outset that the budget had not been properly advertised (that is, placed in a second newspaper, a technicality which is questionable in relation to small towns), no further examination was made. Thus, the pay raise was not noticed.

Since an additional appropriation was made thereafter in order that the town might pay its bills after January 1, 1979, the pay increase will be part of the additional appropriations when the additional appropriations come up for review in the near future.

While the amount of money involved is important in this matter, there is another part of the picture which is more important, and it doesn't have a dollar sign in front of it. That part is the moral and ethical attitude. Small towns never have paid town officials in relation to the time involved or the services rendered. The pay has always been a token amount. It has been "willingness to serve" and not the pay that has characterized the quality of small town officials.

There will be those who say, "Yes, but the cost of living and inflation should be considered." The answer to that is: inflation and the higher cost of living are partly due to "more pay" everywhere you look. "Everybody's doing it" is not the moral and ethical approach.

The town board recently advertised for bids on cemetery and park care. At the March 5 meeting of the board, one of those contracts was given to a member of an immediate family of the town board. That is prohibited by Indiana statutes. There were other bidders for the contract, so it was not a case of having no one else available.

And further—Indiana statutes REQUIRE the publication of town receipts and expenditures in an annual report in the newspaper (or newspapers) published in the town. There has not been an annual report in the Saint Joe News for three years—or there had not been until this week when the annual report for 1978 was brought in. Thus, town residents do not know how tax money was spent for two years, and during those two years there was quite a bit spent. It should be noted that the proposed budgets for those years WERE published in this paper. But those are merely proposals and do not adequately inform the public. The annual report tells the actual use of tax money for the previous year.

Saint Joe has experienced an instability in town administration during the past eight years never before experienced, according to one long-time resident and former town board member. Those elected in 1971 did not complete their term. Of those elected in 1975, only one is still in office. There have been 13 people in office, some of them appointees replacing appointees! Only one, the most recent board appointee, has had longtime business experience in the town, and that kind of experience is essential to really appreciate where money "comes from" and how to use it most efficiently and productively.

On occasion there has been a virtual defiant attitude in the manner in which town affairs have been handled. There has been no consistent effort to keep the public informed on town matters. It was even suggested recently by a board member (when a question was asked about the approximate per-household cost to hook up to the proposed sewage treatment facility) that the inquirer contact the engineering firm to get an answer. This indicates a lack of understanding of the function of the town board in "serving" the public.

The same question was presented at a board meeting last year with no results.

Republican and Democrat party caucuses will be held in August at the latest to select candidates for the November election of town officials. It is not too early to begin thinking about potential candidates and their qualifications, their past overall interest in the community, their motivation, their experience. And those who might be asked to serve should keep in mind that these small town offices mean "giving" from the very beginning, or the community suffers for it.

'Singspiration' March 25

Believing what James declared in James 5:13: ". . . is anyone happy? Let him sing songs of praise," the Saint Joe Church of Christ meeting on Jefferson Street is planning an evening for the singing of praises to God. This time of singing will be Sunday, March 25, at 7 p.m. in the church building.

Everyone who loves the Lord and wishes to raise their voice in song with other people of God are invited to attend. Al Holman has arranged for special music by members of the Saint Joe congregation, much of which will be by family groups. This evening is planned as an expression of love to God for the blessings He has given to us as His people.

"We will be looking for you. Won't you come and help us lift our voices in praise to God?"

'Hilarious Auct'n' Held At Concord Benefit Potluck

The benefit potluck dinner at Concord United Methodist Church Saturday brought in $285.00 for the Jordan family of Garrett who have some $20,000 in medical bills incurred at the birth of twins who required special medical care.

The Concord church set up the benefit potluck to help out. Part of the receipts came from the auctioning of baked goods by Nolan Johnson whose antics were described as "hilarious."

So, those attending not only provided financial help for a young family, they also enjoyed some unexpected entertainment.

TV Program For Teen Juveniles

—by Linda Cleveland, student in a course on Juvenile Justice Administration at the Indiana University campus at Fort Wayne)

There is a program coming to Fort Wayne which I as a juvenile justice major strongly recommend to parents of the community to view with your teenagers especially if you feel that your child is drifting away from you and having an "act for getting in trouble."

On March 16 selected members of the Allen County juvenile division escorted 12 juveniles to Raw-Way prison in New Jersey. These kids were in all kinds of trouble and were literally stripped down with harassment by the "lifers" at the prison itself.

The session was taped for television and will be shown April 4 from 9 to 11 p.m. on Channel 21 Fort Wayne. This program is full of vulgar language and gestures. To give the full impact of the confrontation, no editing has been done. As a result, viewing is NOT for small children but is very effective for juveniles of any kind.

If any parent in the Saint Joe area would like to have their teenager watch this show but doesn't want smaller children in the family to watch, I would like to extend an invitation to my home to those teenagers. My number is 337-5436. I will be more than happy to answer any questions.

I repeat—this program is VERY effective and I strongly recommend it.

April 28 Is Town 'Clean-up Day'

At the March 5 meeting of the Saint Joe Town Board, action was taken to set up Saturday, April 28, as a "clean up day" for the town. Residents are asked to make a particular effort to improve the appearance of their property and rid the town of the accumulation of debris which comes with the long winter months.

Those who have an unusually large yard to clean up should contact the board if help is required. Ron Beard has been hired by the town and has heavy-duty equipment with which to render assistance, according to the report from the town board.

Any large projects that have not been cleaned up by April 28 will be assumed by the town and billed to the property owner.

The announcement concludes with, "Let's keep St. Joe a nice place to live and visit."

'Wizard' At EHS

An anouncement has been made of the forthcoming production, "The Wizard of Oz," by the DeKalb Eastside High School Drama Department.

The musical will be presented April 6 and 7 at 8 p.m. at the high school.

Advance ticket sale prices are $2.25 for adults and $1.25 for students. Prices at the door will be $2.50 and $1.50, respectively.

Melanie Myers of the high school faculty is director.

The Sunday, April 1, session will start at 2:00 p.m.

Babysitting is provided and light refreshments served.

Thoughts Of Diana

I think most people will know what I am talking about when I say it is difficult to know what to say when there is a death in a family and you want to somehow help carry the burden of sorrow and grief. But somehow, the words just aren't there—or so it seems.

I faced that situation recently. The daughter of a friend (he and I have played in a dance combo for many years) died at their home. I went to the funeral home with thoughts going through my mind to try to come up with something to ease the family's sorrow. I thought I had a few words set in my mind, but when I got there, the words wouldn't come out. I sort of fumbled around with the thought that people don't know what to say except "I'm sorry'" and those who have known the grief of death are helped just by those words. There is sort of an understanding felt when a friend says "I'm sorry" at the time of a death. Bob Patnoude said he knew what I meant and I knew he understood my fumbling.

As we talked, I didn't move toward the casket. I could see enough from the side, that 22-year-old beautiful child of God. I wasn't sure I could handle it—a selfish thought, wasn't it? And I knew Bob was having a rough enough time of it as it was.

I didn't talk to Pat, the mother, or any of the other Patnoude kids. (Kids? - they're all grown up now. But you know how it is with parents - their children and the children of friends are always "the kids.") They had enough other friends coming in, a steady stream of mourners to show how far-reaching is their family friendship.

I have no doubt that they are accepting this death, sad as it is, because of their solid Christian faith as members of the Roman Catholic church. The love felt toward them by many people was obvious, as I sat and watched - and thought - for a while.

But there was always this nagging question: how can you give comfort - or find comfort?

It occurred to me that such perplexing thoughts came at the time that the Christian world contemplates the Death on the Cross. The solemnity of the Lenten season reflects the sorrow - and the perplexity - of a Christian season which symbolizes death as the beginning of eternal life. Thus, death to a Christian becomes a spiritual joy. There is sadness because of the physical loss death represents. But there is the uplifting reminder that the Christ, the Saviour, has removed us from the turmoil, trials and troubles of the physical life to a life beyond our comprehension. God has redeemed us through that one great symbolic physical Death of the Cross.

With all these things going through my mind as I returned home, it occurred to me that Diana has not left us. Rather, she is waiting for us somewhere along the path ahead.

How much water should you drink?

All living cells of the body function in a fluid environment. This fluid is steadily lost through the gastrointestinal and urinal tracts. More is lost by perspiration and through the lungs. It must be replaced because the skin cannot absorb moisture from the air no matter how humid the day.

The body usually functions best if two quarts of liquids are taken in each day. One quart is considered the minimum. So estimate how much you get each day in coffee, milk, soft drinks, etc., and drink additional water to help keep you healthier.

SWEET BULKY GREAT IN BROOD SOW RATIONS, TOO!

SWEET BULKY . . . dairymen have been using it in their milking rations for a long time. The reason? It makes feed taste better, work harder, more digestible and more palatable. Well, sir, SWEET BULKY works equally great in brood sow rations, too. When used around farrowing time, it really comes through. Great for eliminating constipation. SWEET BULKY contains minerals, vitamins, beet pulp, dehydrated alfalfa meal and molasses. These ingredients tell a story all their own. Wayne Sweet Bulky for hogs-try it.

RECOMMENDED FOR ALL AREAS

This great Mid-Season Maturity blend captured first place in the Official Ohio Soybean Performance Trials at South Charleston last year with a sensational yield of 71.4 b.p.a. yield.

THERE IS NO GUESSING when we measure the yield on a test plot. The beans are harvested very carefully and the beans then go into a special piece of equipment called a "weigh wagon." It measures the beans very accurately by weight. Then the results from all 37 test plots are averaged mathematically.

Without proper insulation in your attic, outside walls and under your lower floor, you could be losing plenty of money each year.

Just as important, without weatherstripping, caulking or storm windows and doors you could be losing a lot more.

For example, a 1/8 inch crack around a standard outside door could cost you several dollars a year in lost heat.

Sure, it costs money to insulate, but the investment can save you heating and cooling dollars.

But, if you're not sure how to best insulate your home, contact your nearest I & M office. They will show you how you can save energy and become part of our Save America's Valuable Energy Program.

A Roll Of Old Newspapers, Tied With A Red Ribbon, Reveals That We're Older Than We Thought---

The 'News' Is Over 100 Years Old

—by The Editor

A roll of old papers,tied with a red ribbon and purchased at a garage sale in Decatur, has produced evidence that The Saint Joe News is over 100 years old—102 to be exact.

John Martin Smith, a native of Butler, now practicing law in Auburn, recently provided this newspaper with photocopies of the "St. Joe Advertiser," "The News" and "St. Joe News" dated back to 1877. Mr. Smith obtained the original copies when a friend bought a roll of old papers and found certain copies relating to the Saint Joe community. Mr. Smith is an ardent compiler of DeKalb County history and has accumlated many historic papers, maps and other memorabilia related to the various communties in the county.

Last spring, this paper observed what it considered its 95th anniversary. This was determined through dates of old newspapers on file at the News Office. The earliest copies date back to 1883. Those scattered copies indicate "Volume I" and it was from that indication that the paper's origin was estimated.

However, this latest find of copies of the local newspaper show that it was in 1877 that Samuel N. Olds began issuing a "handout" newspaper with Mort Olds serving as editor. It wasn't until 1887 that the local paper began delivery through the postal system.

The procurement of the original Saint Joe papers came as quite a surprise. Apparently the Olds' publishing efforts began with "The News" of Friday, March 2, 1877, designated as "Volume 1, No. 1."

Later, a name change to "St. Joe News" brought "Volume I, No. 1" on Saturday, March 6, 1880, with "Case & Olds" as publishers.

Just exactly where the "St. Joe Advertiser" fits in the sequence is not too clear, although it is designated as being published by "Case & Olds."

Mr. Smith graciously has provided the current editor with a bound volume of photocopies of all the Saint Joe papers discovered in that ribbon-tied roll.

The "St. Joe Advertiser" found in the roll of old papers has no date. But it was put out by "Case & Olds" who handlled "dry goods and notions, boots & shoes, hats & caps, Queensware, glassware, groceries, hardware &C."

TV Program For Teen Juveniles

Linda Cleveland has provided additional information concerning Channel 21's presentation of "Scared Straight!" to be televised Wednesday, April 4, from 9 to 11 p.m.

The program is described as one of the most compelling programs ever produced to present a profile of juvenile crime in this area.

Peter Falk hosts the first part of the program, guiding viewers through Rahway State Prison in New Jersey. An "extraordinary program has been developed by a group of hardened criminals in the maximum security prison. They are serving life terms for murder and other major crimes, and have committed themselves to helping juveniles get back "on the right track."

Twice each day, with the full suport of prison officials and the surrounding community, a group of juveniles enters the prison to serve a three-hour "sentence." The TV camera follows the group as they get a dose of the prisoners' special brand of "shock therapy." Convicts describe in brutal and explicit detail the horrors and realities of prison life—the homosexual rapes, suicides and murders, the boredom and brutality. The convicts shout, swear and threaten violence—whatever it takes to shock the youth into realizing the consequences of their life of crime.

To date, more than 10,000 teenagers have gone through the "lifers" program at Rahway. Participating communities report that 80 to 90 percent are scared into "going straight" by the terrifying experience.

11 Fort Wayne juveniles will be televised as they go through the prison program.

Judge Lewis Bloom, juvenile judge of Fort Wayne; Chief Juvenile Probation Officer Ken Watson of Fort Wayne; and inmates of Rahway, on a speaker phone, will take calls from Fort Wayne viewers during the TV presentation.

The film has not been censored and is therefore not considered acceptable for younger viewers.

Linda says—

If any parent in the Saint Joe area would like to have their teenager watch this show but doesn't want smaller children in the family to watch, I would like to extend an invitation to my home to those teenagers. My number is 337-5436. I will be more than happy to answer any questions.

Constitutional Amendment - How?

There are few times when I differ with the ideas of our Fourth District Representative in Congress, Dan Quayle. The present is one of the few times.

An effort is being made nationwide to bring federal spending under control. That I wholeheartedly agree with. The main idea is to call a constitutional convention to draft a constitutional amendment which would require a balanced federal budget each year—except in emergencies, as I understand it.

Mr. Quayle supports the idea of such a convention, and that's where I respectfully differ.

Senator Richard Lugar also supports the idea.

There has been a warning voiced by others that a constitutional convention would not, under present guidelines, be limited only to consideration of a balanced-budget amendment. They say that other constitutional matters could be considered, even to the point of, in effect, re-writing the Constitution. That's what scares me.

Mr. Quayle and others point out that a massive restructuring of the Constitution is not possible or probable because a ratification vote is required by 38 of the 50 states. This "check" or "balance" is said to be adequate protection against the scuttling of the Constitution as it now stands.

I wish I could have the same confidence; but I don't. Why? Well, if the need for ratification by 38 states is adequate protection, then what happened to the seven-year deadline on ratifying the so-called "Equal Rights Amendment"? The time period has been extended, and the extension was accomplished through the efforts of Indiana's own Senator Birch Bayh. Many in Congress who supported the ERA opposed the extension of time because they felt it was a case of changing the rules in the middle (or rather at the end) of the game. Ethics went out the window.

If we now obviously couldn't trust our elected officials in the ERA deadline matter, how can we trust the same officials in a constitutional convention? How can we be certain the rules will not be changed again and an unethical effort gain success?

The majority of Americans oppose relinquishing the Panama Canal, and it would appear both houses of Congress are entitled to a "say-so" in any such action. But it hasn't happened that way. And from what I have read, the only way to prevent the canal give-away (give-away??—we're PAYING to give it away!) is to have the House of Representatives vote against providing the funds necessary to carry out the give-away. (The matter apparently isn't dead yet, so write Mr. Quayle if you oppose losing the Panama Canal.)

There is another point. The suggested balanced-budget amendment apparently has an "except in times of national emergency" clause. Pardon me for being such a suspicious character, but we have been living in a period of "national emergency" for most of my life!—declared wars, undeclared wars, police actions, inflation, a fast-rising cost of living—what's to prevent the declaration of "emergency" when more money is needed than is coming in for the federal government? The "emergency" provision is a gaping hole in the proposed dam to hold back federal spending.

I find any assurance that it would be "highly improbable" of a constitutional convention going far afield to be far from believable. On the face of it, the possibility of the Arab-Israeli peace settlement becoming a financial responsibility of the United States was "highly improbable" in most people's minds. But in fact it is costing US $4 or $5 billion for THEM to quit fighting (if indeed they do quit).

A couple of years ago, Hoosiers would have thought it "highly improbable" that the time limit on states' approval of the ERA would be extended, in violation of traditional rules. And it would have been even more "highly improbable" that the rule-changing extension of time would be at the hands of a Hoosier Senator. But it happened.

The proposed amendment to require a balanced federal budget ought to be considered state by state through the proposal of such an amendment by Congress. Though there is the possibility that state legislatures might not represent the feeling of their constituents in the matter (who would have thought the Indiana legislature would vote out right-to-work protection for workers?), that possibility poses less danger than a constitutional convention far removed from the voice of the people.

I'm not saying I'm right and Mr. Quayle is wrong. I'm just expressing some very definite fears of what might happen, on the basis of what HAS happened in the recent past.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Mr. Habercorn—

I used to live in St. Joe, a long time ago. And there were benches for people to sit on. Wonder why there isn't benches now? People that walk to the grocery and bank, some Senior Citizens could use them now, to rest upon and maybe sit and visit.

Could you ask the Town Board about this project? Or maybe some of the business men to put some in front of their stores?

I'm sure some of the golden year people could use them and be very thankful for them.

Thanks if you could help.

The unsigned letter was postmarked "Fort Wayne." We offer it here, though unsigned, because it sounds like a good idea. —Ed.

How much water should you drink?

All living cells of the body function in a fluid environment. This fluid is steadily lost through the gastrointestinal and urinal tracts. More is lost by perspiration and through the lungs. It must be replaced because the skin cannot absorb moisture from the air no matter how humid the day.

The body usually functions best if two quarts of liquids are taken in each day. One quart is considered the minimum. So estimate how much you get each day in coffee, milk, soft drinks, etc., and drink additional water to help keep you healthier.

SWEET BULKY GREAT IN BROOD SOW RATIONS, TOO!

SWEET BULKY . . . dairymen have been using it in their milking rations for a long time. The reason? It makes feed taste better, work harder, more digestible and more palatable. Well, sir, SWEET BULKY works equally great in brood sow rations, too. When used around farrowing time, it really comes through. Great for eliminating constipation. SWEET BULKY contains minerals, vitamins, beet pulp, dehydrated alfalfa meal and molasses. Those ingredients tell a story all their own. Wayne Sweet Bulky for hogs-try it.

Why

Callahan Soybeans ARE BLENDS

CALLAHAN 5280

RECOMMENDED FOR ALL AREAS

This great Mid-Season Maturity blend captured first place in the Official Ohio Soybean Performance Trials at South Charleston last year with a sensational yield of 71.4 b.p.a. yield.

THERE IS NO GUESSING when we measure the yield on a test plot. The beans are harvested very carefully and the beans then go into a special piece of equipment called a "weigh wagon." It measures the beans very accurately by weight. Then the results from all 37 test plots are averaged mathematically.

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

Margaret Keppeler of Edgerton stopped in recently to renew her subscription. She was in town visiting her aunt, Anna Hursey.

We had a pleasant brief visit and I asked about her family ties with this community. Such familiar names as "Coburn" and "Hart" came in her response.

I caught some cold, icy—and silent—stares among the flak resulting from my recent comments about the senior citizen nutrition program. I also had some frank and friendly responses, for which I am grateful. It's only when people talk that I know what they're thinking and that's what helps me to learn more about what I am commenting about.

By coincidence, a lengthy article appeared in the Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette just a few days after my comments came out. The gist of that article was that the senior citizens interviewed thought the government was spending too much and funding too many programs. The article noted that the comments were made as the senior citizens ate a noon meal at a nutrition center—and that's a government program!

At the local level, one Saint Joe resident felt that more people from here would go to the Heimach Center at Auburn if they weren't so afraid that riding in the center's van looks like charity.

Another comment from the same resident indicated that the main attraction at the center is not the food—"most of us can take care of ourselves when it comes to meals"— but rather the social activity and fellowship with other senior citizens.

I have never questioned the fellowship part of it. My concern was—and still is—that the program has been based on the alleged need of proper nutrition by the elderly. I said the food part of it is too expensive and I still say that. One day a week at the center isn't going to provide adequate nutrition, if a real need for nutrition exists. Yet every week we have how many people working full or part time to provide something that is not needed by the majority of those going to the center.

I didn't say it, the local resident did: "It's a shame the food they throw in the garbage. We can't take it home; the government won't let us. So it's thrown out."

Why can't our local churches provide a more convenient opportunity for the social contact and fellowship so appreciated and desired by our senior citizens—isn't that part of their mission???

Town Board

The town board met Monday at 6:30 p.m. at the fire hall.

Discussion was held concerning the April 28 clean-up day set up by the board. Editor Ted Haberkorn said he had received three or four comments about the board's announcement which appeared in this paper and those comments indicated a question of how the board was going to determine if adequate cleanup of any given location had been accomplished. The board indicated that the intent is not to barge in on every property and "take over." Rather, the intent is to provide a definite day when removal of trash could be carried out. The board wants to cooperate with local residents in any property improvement clean-up, not dictate what must be done.

Utility bills received by local residents this week contained a printed notice about the April 28 clean-up day in Saint Joe. It reads:

"April 28 has been designated by the Town Board of Trustees as 'Clean-Up Day' for the town. Citizens are asked to cooperate in a general cleaning of their properties. There will be house-to-house curbside pickup of all trash, junk items, etc. that should be disposed of. This is a service without charge to all property owners in an effort to make St. Joe a cleaner, more attractive town in which to live. Any property owner who does not cooperate in clearing his property shall be subject to legal action by the Town."

The editor suggested that local help might be available in removing large trash objects, instead of paying a commercial hauler, thus saving the town some money.

Meeting in somewhat cramped quarters in the fire hall, the board was asked by Charles Carnahan why so many trucks were needed by the fire department. It was pointed out that one of the vehicles is being made into a grass-fire buggy. It is an Army surplus chassis obtained through Civil Defense Director Paul Freeburn for the fire department. Other necessary vehicles include the town pumper, the township pumper, the emergency van and the tanker.

The editor suggested that obtaining a dump truck at reasonable cost might be beneficial cost-wise to the town. The town would be able to do its own hauling of crushed stone and blacktop patching material. It would also provide larger capacity in taking repair materials to affected streets. The town tractor has a front-load bucket but its small capacity necessitates many trips to do street patching.

The board was informed of the "sidewalk sale, open house and yard-or-garage sale day" Saturday, May 19. The event is forming as the result of an announced sidewalk sale by "Family Cuts and Curls" that day.

It was stated that a hearing on the town's suit against Rick Wannemacher is set for June. The suit was prompted by several violations of town ordinances by Mr. Wannemacher.

Prin'pal Resigns; Calendars Set Later Opening

The school board met Monday and announced that Principal Robert E. Williams has resigned effective in July. The resignation made a planned hearing unnecessary.

Mr. Williams' letter of resignation reads:

"I hereby resign my position as Principal of Eastside Jr.-Sr. High School as of July 6, 1979.

"I wish to express my appreciation to the patrons and students of the DeKalb County Eastern Community School District for the fine association I have enjoyed with them during the eleven years I have served as Principal of Eastside Jr.-Sr. High School. I am also grateful to the fine faculty and staff that I have had the privilege of working with during this period of time.

"This decision is very difficult for me to make, but I feel that it is the best possible decision that I can make at this time for the well-being of the community and from a personal viewpoint."

The school board issued the following statement concerning the matter, starting with the announcement that the proposed hearing had been cancelled by mutual agreement, then:

"The School Board and Superintendent of Schools also wish to state publicly the reason for scheduling this meeting was the result of philosophical differences between the School Board, Superintendent and the Principal as to the administration of the Jr.-Sr. High School. The School Board wishes to emphasize that these philosophical differences never included anything of an illegal or immoral nature.

"During Mr. Williams' eleven year tenure as Principal of Eastside Jr.-Sr. High School he devoted himself to the betterment and welfare of the school, helping students in every way possible. He also worked to provide faculty and staff with the means to give greater educational opportunities to students. Mr. Williams has always conducted himself in accord with the very highest moral and ethical standards.

"The DeKalb County Eastern Community School Board releases this statement of clarification to terminate the discussion of this issue."

In other business, a plaque was presented to Mrs. Earle Kelsey in memory of her late husband who had served on the school board until his death recently.

The board approved the school calendar for 1979-80 and 1980-81. Both calendars return the opening day of school for pupils to after Labor Day. The past few years, school has begun before Labor Day due to pressure from the teachers' union.

Ted Haberkorn asked why the change was made back to the traditional opening date, inasmuch as the pre-Labor Day opening had been instituted due to alleged hardships on teachers taking summer graduate work and on students seeking summer jobs. Late opening of school in the fall brought late closing and alleged hardships.

Superintendent Charles Hampel said the reason involved a number of absent days for students due to vacations under the early school opening. The change back was made to adjust to the needs of the district, he said. Mr. Haberkorn noted that the change would not affect his family because a son graduates this spring, and that brought a chuckle from others present. He then offered the tongue-in-cheek comment that "I'd like to see the early starting date kept—just to make some others squirm a bit." He concluded by saying it is "too bad it took so long to eliminate a change which was questionable in the first place."

Board members were introduced to a system of computer printouts for presentation of claims.

The board voted to participate again in a "Joint Services, Leasing, Construction and Supply Fund" cooperative with other schools in DeKalb, Noble, LaGrange and Steuben counties, for special education.

The letter of resignation of Ishmael Smith, ICT Coordinator, was accepted. A temporary teacher contract for Allen Stemen was approved. Linda Long's letter of intent to retire was received.

A letter from Charles Ray, elementary principal and coordinator of Little League basketball, contained commendations for Roger Cook, Tony Kaiser, Robert Gerber, Dick Baughman, Jerry Vinson, Larry Emenhiser, Ron Fee, Ron Walter, Randy Warstler, Roger Kitchen, Dave Baughman and Wayne Myers.

Judy Warstler sent a letter of appreciation for a recent Butler elementary field trip.

Betty Wagner and Judy Miller expressed appreciation for a trip to the Shrine Circus and some of the students' illustrations of the circus were viewed by the board.

Mr. Haberkorn requested that the board consider establishing a policy as to the use of the lighted tennis courts at the Riverdale school. With basketball also played on the courts, there might be conflicts in the use of the facilities. He noted that the new lights are not yet in operation but will be in the near future, and that they were installed as a tennis project, primarily. The board will consider the matter further at the next meeting.

The superintendent was authorized to begin screening applicants for junior-senior high school principal.

'Open House'-Type Day Planned

On April 29 of last year, a lot of people had an enjoyable day in Saint Joe, a day which started as the climax of the grand opening of Kay Smith's "Family Cuts and Curls" and ended as an anniversary open house at the News Office and an "open house" atmosphere at other business places. Several residents had garage or yard sales to add to the fun.

Well, this year Kay once again has started things off by announcing plans for a sidewalk sale Saturday, May 19.

Other merchants are being notified once again of her plans so that they can make whatever plans they wish to make May 19 another "open house" sort of affair.

And some residents are already making plans for garage and yards sales that day.

So—mark the date on the calendar—Saturday, May 19—and look forward (with the weatherman's cooperation) to a day of smalltown relaxation, a renewal of acquaintances after a long winter.

The couple plan a July 21 wedding in Hicksville.

Kruses Finally Get Some Support

I was glad to see letters to the editor in the Auburn Evening Star from those who are concerned about the "bad" publicity being given the Kruse family because of financial problems.

Sometimes it is difficult to understand people's motives. It is true that the Kruse classic car auctions have brought some discontent because car sellers did not get their money as soon as they should have.

It is true that the disappearance of a lot of checks and money from a briefcase or attache case looks like carelessness.

It is true that the Kruse operation expanded by leaps and bounds a year or so ago (I had misgivings myself when I received news releases about the new employees being added to the Kruse enterprises).

But I don't see why these circumstances should erase the good and positive things. I have wondered why some of the bigwigs in the Auburn-Cord-Duesenberg Museum organization haven't given some indication of support and confidence in the Kruses; they are always happy to receive those big fat checks the museum gets after the annual Labor Day A-C-D Days auction.

I don't understand why, after handling hundreds and hundreds of auctions of all types, after handling thousands and thousands of dollars—into millions of dollars—in those hundreds and hundreds of auctions of all sizes and types, there is so much "negative" in the way in which the matter is being presented to the public.

In the news reports I have read, there has not been one shred of evidence, or even the suggestion, that the failure to pay a handful of individuals was by intent. There hasn't been anything yet to indicate the Kruses INTENDED to deprive anyone of money due for the sale of cars at auction.

Here is a business enterprise possibly on the verge of total collapse, and what do we have —"humorous" headlines on occation about the matter, jokes about "cash flow" and so on. There are those who obviously believe that Dean Kruse is not human, that he is so cold and calculating that when he breaks down and cries during testimony in the matter, he is putting on a show, faking emotions.

I don't think some people are putting this matter into proper perspective, are not making a comparison with their own future and their present possessions. Suppose you have an "average" family, you are making payments on your home, you are making payments on your car, you have food and clothing and entertainment and everything so set up that, when you get your paycheck, most of it is obligated for. In other words, you have a healthy, planned, budgeted income which is, in time, going to result in an accumulation of assets, possessions which will be your own.

Now suppose that one week, just one week, you lose your paycheck and there is no way to get it immediately replaced. Perhaps you won't face court suits for non-payment of debts, perhaps you won't find it necessary to sell some of your possessions, perhaps you won't need "a friend" to make a temporary loan to help you out. But your whole planned and functioning setup is going to be way out of whack. And it will take time to get things back in order.

I've had to wait for some time on occasion to receive payment for auction ads run in this paper by the Kruses. But jump on the current "bandwagon" of implying if not accusing them of being crooks, of intentionally defrauding the public in their actions?

No way!

Anniversaries

MM Lester Pugsley of Saint Joe observed their 65th wedding anniversary Sunday at their home on Widney Avenue.

The observance was a quiet one, however, due to Mrs. Pugsley's physical condition. She is very weak and unable to be as active as she might wish to be.

MM Howard Shilling of R1 Saint Joe observed their 61st wedding anniversary Saturday by following their usual practice of operating a stand at the South Side Market in Fort Wayne. Mr. Shilling is an officer in the market organization and the Shillings are charter members.

The couple were married at the Hicksville Methodist Church Easter Sunday, March 31, 1918, with Rev. Clarence Moore leading the vows.

Gets Promotion

Dan Kessler, son of MM Robert Musser of Saint Joe, has been appointed judicial district court administrator for the 11th Judicial District at Pueblo, Colorado. He was appointed by Judge Max C. Wilson, chief judge of the district.

Dan has a BS degree in education and seven years' court experience in the Denver district courts beginning at clerk level and progressing to his recent appointment.

The full-time administrator's position was established due to the increase in caseload in the 11th Judicial District in the past year.

Applications for the position were received from 16 individuals from Colorado, Rhode Island, Nebraska, California and Texas.

102 Years Ago...

From "The News" of Friday, March 2, 1877, "Vol. 1, No. 1":

REMEMBER THY MOTHER

Lead thy mother tenderly
Down life's steep decline;
Once her arm was thy support,
Now she leans on thine.
See upon her loving face
Those deep lines of care;
Think—it was her toil for thee
Left that record there.
Ne'er forget her tireless watch
Kept by day and night.
Taking from her step the grace,
From her eye the light.
Cherish well her faithful heart,
Which through weary years
Echoed with its sympathy
All thy smiles and tears.
Thank God for thy mother's love,
Guard the priceless boon;
For the bitter parting hour
Cometh all too soon.
When the grateful tenderness
Loses power to save,
Earth will hold no dearer spot
Than thy mother's grave.

Watch out for summer air pollution

Another hazard of summer deserves mention, and that is air pollution. Climatic conditions, along with increased automobile traffic for much longer periods of time, cause increased eye irritation, conjunctivitis, throat irritation and more frequent attacks of bronchitis and asthma.

Patients with respiratory ailments need to be especially cautious during this time of the year, but just about everyone is subject to irritation of one form or another.

TO THE EDITOR—

(Note: with federal income tax returns already providing for a tax deduction to be used to finance presidential elections, a movement has been under way for several months to expand the tax deduction to cover Congressional elections. A letter to Fourth District Representative Dan Quaylel to express opposition to the proposal brought the following reply.)

Dear Mr. Haberkorn:

Thank you for your recent letter regarding H.R. 1, a bill to provide for taxpayer financing of Congressional elections.

I am opposed to this bill for several reasons. I believe that it will force taxpayers to effectively finance the elections of those whom they do not necessarily support. It will lead to the creation of a tremendous and complex bureaucracy to administer this program; in fact, the Federal Election Commission has estimated that an additional 200 employees would be necessary just to work on this program. The cost to the federal government over the years would be unjustifiable.

It concerns me more deeply that by establishing a federal financing program for public office, we are making our candidates for office rely on the federal government rather than individual contributors for their funds. Small contributors would be less important because of increased government aid. This is contrary to our system of government. The small contributor should be encouraged, not overrun in a sea of federal money.

I do not believe that this bill is in the best long-range interests of free and open elections in this country. While I sympathize with the intentions of those who propose such legislation I feel that I cannot support this bill at this time. Your comments are always helpful to me. Feel free to contact me on any other issue that is of concern to you.

Sincerely,
Dan Quayle
Member of Congress

According to the Tax Foundation, it takes the average worker two hours and 45 minutes of every eight hour work day just to pay taxes.*

But it takes less than 11 minutes of work to pay the electric bill...about one coffee break. Even with inflation that's a pretty good deal when you think of all the things electricity does for you each day.

From waking you up, making your coffee, keeping your food fresh, vacuuming your rugs, preparing your meals, cleaning your clothes, doing your dishes and keeping you informed and entertained.

We don't know how many seconds out of every day's pay you can save conserving electricity, but we know it can be very worthwhile. In fact, we have some free S.A.V.E. booklets that can show you how to save energy and become part of our Save America's Valuable Energy program. Stop by any of our offices for your copies.

At I&M, we want you to get the most out of your electric service.

You have to work a third of every day to pay your taxes. But you can still pay your electric bill with one coffee break.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

Some people think Elwood Savage is just an old grouch. But he cares. For instance, when Wanda Coburn was in the hospital for surgery—and you know how women fuss about their hair when someone comes to visit—well, Elwood sent Wanda a wig.

—He's all heart.

Speaking of Wanda, she says the restaurant will give a man's and woman's watch at the May 19 "open house" day at Saint Joe.

Things are starting to build up for that day.

May 19 is also the same day that Lloyd and Marie Noel will donate their efforts for a benefit auction at Butler for band uniforms.

There is a chili supper set for Friday, April 20, at Butler with the Lions clubs of Saint Joe and Butler assisting the Band Boosters for the uniform fund.

While listening to Trading Post on WIFF the other day, I heard Gracie Rivera call in to offer her services free of charge to any senior citizens who need some vacuuming or cleaning or what-have-you.

—Good-hearted Gracie.

Church League Meets May 3

Ted Haberkorn, president of the Saint Joe Church League, has announced that there will be a meeting of the league at St. Mark Lutheran Church in Saint Joe Thursday, May 3. The meeting will start at 7:30 p.m.

Participating teams are asked to send representatives to the meeting. League competition usually begins at the end of May and teams should have definite knowledge of their commitment of players in time for the meeting so that secretary Lavon Hart can prepare the schedule.

The reputation of the league is reflected in the requests by two more churches to be admitted into competition. The league can accommodate such requests only when an opening appears from time to time as circumstances affect team personnel.

Election of officers will be held. Discussion of general league activities will be the major part of the meeting.

Though each team has but one vote on proposed motions, all players and pastors are invited to attend and see how the 27-year-old organization functions.

The Saint Joe Church League is the oldest continuous softball league of its kind in the area.

St. Joe News,

Thank you for the donation and free advertising you gave the Riverdale P.T.O. Carnival. I've learned what great people there are in this community and being a fairly new neighbor, I appreciate it.

Debbie Redinger
Carnival Chairman

Dear Ted:

Please publish my thanks in the News.

On behalf of the St. Mark's and St. Peter's congregations, I say, "Many thanks!" for your generosity in publishing our Evening Vesper Services in the Saint Joe News each week during the Lenten Season. We truly appreciate the accurate and constant "front page" listing of our worship events.

This to me is above and beyond the calling of a newspaper editor, and speaks of his sincere concern for his community's spiritual well being, and his dedication to his church. Thanks again.

Your Pastor and friend,
Wilbur D. Miller

Our regret is that, due to the truckers' strike leaving us momentarily out of newsprint, information about the Saint Joe Church of Christ and its special service was not published. This issue and the previous issue were late in delivery due to the above-mentioned strike. We were forced to make a trip to Aurora, Illinois, to get the necessary paper. —Ed.

April 6, 1979

Dear Sir:

This letter is in reference to Indiana's decision to abolish the law requiring motorcyclists to wear helmets. Since the law has been revoked there has been an increase in serious motorcycle accidents. Granted, helmets alone may not have reduced the number of accidents, but a large portion of them could have been less severe. I have a friend who wrecked his motorcycle and came out of the accident only slightly bruised and shaken. He was wearing a helmet. The helmet was deeply gouged but still intact. Had he not been wearing his helmet the consequences he could have suffered would have been much more severe. I feel that if people don't have the sense to wear helmets for their own protection, then we should have a law requiring helmets as a precaution for them. Of course people may argue that out of the number of people riding motorcycles, there is a small percent who will have a wreck. However, if you or someone you know had an accident, and a helmet would have prevented much of the injury received, how would you feel? Perhaps you would change your present stand on the issue.

Sincerely yours,
Vickie K. Keener

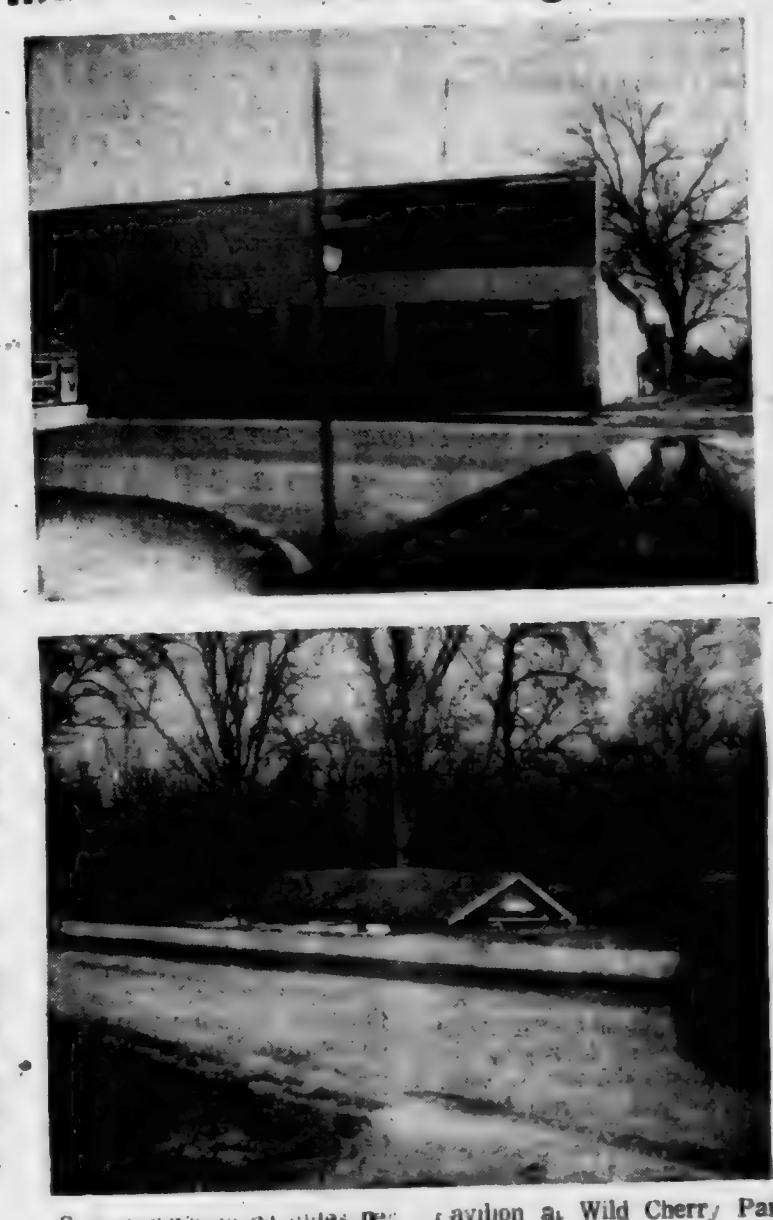
High Winds Cause Damage



Strong winds of 50 miles per hour and more April 5 caused damage of varying degrees in the area. Two examples are shown above.

In the bottom photo, Hurni Pavilion at Wild Cherry Park is shown resting on the ground after the wind apparently got underneath the roof, raised the entire structure and blew it sideways, collapsing supporting posts.

The town board says there is no insurance coverage on the structure and has called a public meeting for Saturday, April 21, at 10 a.m. at the fire hall to discuss with the public what should be done.

Girls - Last Call!

Calling all girls! Calling all girls!

Girls age 13 through 18, that is.

Youth League secretary Donna Ramer has issued the "last call" for girls to participate in softball activity during the coming summer. A meeting ing will be held Saturday, April 21, at St. Peter Lutheran Church in Spencerville at 10 a.m.

The Youth League oversees both boys' and girls' baseball and softball action in the Riverdale area.

EastertideVesper At St. Pete's

The public is invited to attend Eastertide Vespers at St. Peter's Lutheran Church in Spencerville at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, April 22.

The choir, under the direction of Jay Blauser, will perform works by Handel, Robertson, Faure and Noble. There will also be the singing of traditional hymns. Narration and a visual slide presentation will complement the choir's presentation of "The Passion Story."

Mrs. Kathleen Emme-McMaken will be guest accompanist. Phyllis Blauser and Lynann Crow will serve as guests soloists. The pastor, Rev. Wilbur Miller, will officiate.

'Female Chauvinism' Pops Up

(Note: the following was written several weeks ago but was not published due to space limitations.)

Headline:

"Lady Blazers Finish Finest Season Ever"

A paragraph thereafter:

"Facing the disapproval of people who wanted to see the same style of play the (Lady) Blazers had used in past seasons, (Coach Valerie) Gates changed their style and produced a team who won the regional for the first time in three years. Her vital contributions to the Lady Blazers should be acknowledged."

The above appeared in the Butler Bulletin February 21 in a news article reporting the Ladies' loss to Bellmont in regional competition.

Nothing personal, mind you—but I think that "editorial" paragraph smacks of "female chauvinism". Since I reported during the basketball season that there were some fans who were not too happy with the different style of play, I think it is appropriate to point out that the team went back to the strategy of the two previous years in the last half of the season.

I saw the Ladies lose earlier in the year on their home court and I didn't see the team's two top scorers take their respective specialty shots until the last minute of play. The pattern was to work the ball in; long shots were taboo. I was told that had been the pattern in earlier games.

Anyone who saw the games at the end of the season, including the sectional and regional, knows that outside shots were important factors in those wins. That's the way it was last year and the year before.

My opinion is that the style of play changed back to what it had been for the most part in the two previous years.

Another paragraph in the Bulletin story says the coach "guided and molded the group of talented girls into a team" and the coach was "more concerned about them playing well than seeing who could score the most points."

Once again "female chauvinism" seems apparent because those words completely ignore Coach Bob Brown. He molded the team for two years; he saw the weak points and adjusted the roles of the players accordingly. No way did the Lady Blazers seem to be directed to favor an individual for the sake of scoring a lot of points. Lady Blazer brilliance for the past three years has been due to unselfish teamwork, from starters to subs.

The Lady Blazers may say they had more "fun" this year than before. But I am inclined to think the fun came from having a female coach who could rap with the players in the dressing room before, during and after a game than from a fault in the previous male coach who was necessarily separated from his players on occasion. Forgotten is the fact that the school board pointedly hired Mr. Brown to coach the girls because the girls' potential had been recognized and a knowledgeable coach was desired. You don't win 21 basketball games just by "having fun."

We are fortunate to have had Coach Gates leading the Lady Blazers during the past season. She continued to bring forth from the team the same "four D's" which Mr. Brown brought forth—dedication, determination, desire — and most important of all —discipline.

I'm really somewhat amused by the situation, in view of the social unrest of recent years coming from alleged discrimination in sports and everything else when it comes to man and woman. Now that it's all female up Butler way, from coaching to reporting the games, you wouldn't know there had been any capable male involved. And from a "letter to the editor" in the Bulletin from the girls' assistant coach, you would think there was only one newspaper in the district which had given the Lady Blazers a lot of coverage.

Ladies' Coverage Comparison

On that score, I did a little figuring. When the Lady Blazers won the regional, the big headline and front-page story in this paper required some 28 column inches. A recent issue of the Bulletin contained 22 equivalent pages, since its page size is twice the size of a page in The Saint Joe News. This gives a total of 1760 equivalent column inches (not counting the special TV section).

28 column inches in The Saint Joe News is about 9% of the total space. 9% of the Bulletin's total space would be a full page of their large-page size. And the Bulletin HAS given a full page to the Lady Blazers' accomplishments on occasion.

The point is, this dinky little paper has given proportionately as much space to the gals as the Butler Bulletin. But the Bulletin gets the credit.

Sometimes I think a condition of employment on our faculty, administrative staff, clerical staff and school board should be a requirement that each individual visit every business in the district once a year. That way there might be more awareness of the "total" community and its role in "total" education.

Parents are asked to visit the school for open house, visit the teacher when student problems arise—and if parents don't respond, they are condemned as being at fault, as not being interested in their kids or in education.

Well, how about some interest in the community by certain school personnel? It would be nice to see more teachers' faces without the necessity of "going to school" to see them.

Deaf Man Designs Tiny Hearing Aid

Offers free model

A remarkable tiny hearing aid has been perfected by a man who has been hard of hearing for nearly ten years.

This small device has no dangling cords or separate transmitting units and is worn completely in your ear.

It was developed especially for those persons who can hear but can't understand. This hearing instrument provides "ear-level" hearing with the wearer picking up speech, sounds, television and radio at his ear. Due to the use of transistors, the user cost is extremely low.

A true life actual size replica of the smallest all-in-the-ear hearing aid ever made will be given absolutely free to anyone sending in this advertisement while supply lasts. So we suggest you write for yours now. No obligation whatsoever. Write to Hear, Box 360, Garrett, Indiana 46738. (Adv.)

Watch out for summer air pollution

Another hazard of summer deserves mention, and that is air pollution. Climatic conditions, along with increased automobile traffic for much longer periods of time, cause increased eye irritation, conjunctivitis, throat irritation and more frequent attacks of bronchitis and asthma.

Patients with respiratory ailments need to be especially cautious during this time of the year, but just about everyone is subject to irritation of one form or another.

Callahan Soybeans ARE BLENDS

CALLAHAN 5280

RECOMMENDED FOR ALL AREAS

This great Mid-Season Maturity blend captured first place in the Official Ohio Soybean Performance Trials at South Charleston last year with a sensational yield of 71.4 b.p.a. yield.

THERE IS NO GUESSING when we measure the yield on a test plot. The beans are harvested very carefully and the beans then go into a special piece of equipment called a "weigh wagon." It measures the beans very accurately by weight. Then the results from all 37 test plots are averaged mathematically.

Thus far 20 farms in the county have signed with 180 cropland acres designated as set-aside.

—that Senator Birch Bayh's efforts to abolish the Electoral College system of determining the winning presidential candidates was stopped recently He brought the measure to the Senate floor but faced a filibuster as Senators Orren Hatch (R-Utah) and Strom Thurmond (R-S.C.) objected. They said no hearings had been held on the bill during this session of Congress. Bayh said 3,700 pages of testimony had been taken in preceding sessions. The measure was sent back to the Judiciary Committee. The measure is dead until at least June 1.

—that Kim Kreischer of R2 Spencerville escaped serious injury recently when his tractor went out of control and struck a tree.

—that George Kandel of Butler led the Nationwide Insurance Company's agency force of over 4,600 men and women in the sale and service of group insurance in 1978.

The system is called "optical" because it converts telephone customers' voices into streams of extremely short pulses of invisible laser light that are propelled through strands of glass (optical fibers) only five thousandths of an inch thick. Thus the diameter of telephone cables is drastically reduced.

—that Ed Moughler and Gary Rinard received honorable mention in the area basketball all-star selections made by the Auburn Evening Star, the Kendallville News-Sun and area coaches. In wrestling honorable mention went to Brad Kaiser, Brian Powell and Chris Wood.

Out of over 55,000 members answering a poll on the question of mandatory conversion to metrics, 60% voted against the conversion. Though many people have been led to believe that conversion to metrics is required by federal law, the Metric Conversion Act of 1975 merely allows such conversion. The "think metrics" program instituted in many schools has been carried out without public approval. The conversion would cost billions in additional expense to business and industry.

—that the Tri-State University basketball team received the James A. Naismith and Emile S. Liston Sportsmanship Award recently for their play in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics tournament in Kansas City.

—that May 10 is the deadline for payment of the spring installment of real estate and property taxes and ditch assessments.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

It was a nice spring day—and in came Zay Sailer to renew his subscription for another year. He gets around pretty good for his years.

I don't watch very many TV news programs. But the last one I saw included a portion of an interview with Jane Fonda who had just been awarded an "Oscar" by the film industry for her part in the Vietnam war film, "Coming Home." She was an active anti-Vietnam leader, to the point of on occasion virtually giving aid and comfort to the enemy.

In the interview she just had to get her two cents' worth in about the Vietnam situation. She seemed to forget that the award was given for her performance, not because the movie was "right" in its content.

She and Vanessa Redgrave are peas in a pod. Last year Vanessa did the same thing — expressed political opinions as she accepted an award and the audience gasped at the discourtesy.

Three Riverdale Students Get SF 'Mention'

Three Riverdale Elementary School students received honorable mention at the annual Tri-State Regional Science Fair April 7.

Jacki Johnson, daughter of MM Bud Johnson, and Shelly Haley, daughter of MM Thomas Haley, combined to do a project on smoking. They are students in Jennifer Chapman's sixth grade.

$600,000 Suggested For Enclosed Halls, Gym, Classrooms

$400,000 is needed to enclose walkways between buildings on the DeKalb Eastside Jr.-Sr. High School campus.

That was the report given to the school board April 16 by Charles Hampel, superintendent of schools. The report came as the result of a heating efficiency study.

Another $200,000 would be needed to provide additional gym facilities and additional classroom space for the shop and art departments.

On the "practice gym" proposal, Mr. Hampel noted that gym facilities used for varsity inter-school sports seem to be "sacred territory for some reason." The practice gym would not require additional locker and shower space; present facilities would be used.

Mr. Hampel said the enclosing of walkways can be paid for with no additional taxes involved. Funds would come from the present cumulative building fund. However, the practice gym and additional classroom space could not be paid from cumulative building funds.

Mr. Hampel emphasized during the presentation that the information and drawings he had were not exact but rather represented only the basic preliminary phase of the proposal.

The DeKalb eastern junior-senior high school facilities were built under design specifications called the "campus plan." That is, the facilities are not all under one roof as in so-called "conventional" school construction. The campus plan was adoped when the school facilities were built on the recommendation of the school's architects who said that a saving of 10% would be realized in construction costs due to the elimination of enclosed halls. The school corporation was in need of every possible dollar at the time for basic needs.

However, separation of the buildings did present the inconvenience of passing between buildings in bad weather. The school board at the time felt the need for saving in construction costs was an overriding factor and adopted the campus plan.

At the present time, opening and closing of doors between buildings between classes results in significant heat loss. Mr. Hampel said a hall in one building was "like a wind tunnel" in winter when doors were opened at opposite ends.

The matter will be given further consideration after more detailed information can be presented. The board would like to have the public express its opinion about the proposals.

In other business, a request from the Band Boosters for financial support from the Sports Banquet

The 1978-79 All-Sports Banquet at DeKalb Eastside High School will be held Tuesday, May 1, with a catered dinner to be served at 7 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Ron Kramer, a nine-letterman who later played professional football with the Green Bay Packers on the 1961 and 1962 championship teams and thereafter with the Detroit Lions. He is now an executive with Paragon Steel Corporation of Detroit and serves as analyst of University of Michigan and Detroit Lions football.

At the banquet, all high school athletes will be honored and will receive their dinner at no charge.

Tickets are available at the high school office; Knisely Bank at Butler and Knisely Branch Bank at Saint Joe; the Shell Mart in Spencerville; and from adult athletic booster club members. Price is $6.50.

Mr. Kramer's appearance at the banquet is being made through the courtesy and cooperation of the Vulcraft plant at Saint Joe.

Gaylord Rediger

A heart attack proved fatal April 18 for Gaylord Rediger of R1 Saint Joe. He was visiting at Canterbury Green apartments when the attack occurred.

Mr. Rediger was born April 16, 1923, at Harlan, the son of MM Clarence Rediger. He was engaged in agriculture and was a veteran of World War II.

Survivors include his parents; a daughter, Mrs. James Norris of Fort Wayne; a son, Randy, of R1 Saint Joe; a brother, Gerald, of Phoenix, Arizona; a sister, Mrs. Wayne Storer, of R1 Saint Joe; and five grandchildren.

Funeral services were set for Saturday, April 21, at the Baldinger & Walter Funeral Home in Spencerville with John Paul Hill, pastor of the Coburn Corners Church of Christ, officiating. Burial will be in Riverside Cemetery.

Forrest Bevington Is SS 'Hall-of-Famer'

Forrest Bevington of R1 Saint Joe is one of five former South Side Archer athletes to be named to the school's hall of fame this year. The awards will be made officially June 16 at the Hilton Inn at Baer Field. A golf outing will precede the award dinner that day.

Mr. Bevington was a three-sport letterman, lettering in football three times. He was an all-city halfback. He lettered two years in basketball and four in track.

"Red" was not only proficient in sports, he was an outstanding scholar, elected to the National Honor Society.

After starring in football at Manchester College, Mr. Bevington began coaching at Millersburg. He was drafted into the Army, entering as a private and being discharged with the rank of captain.

He resumed coaching at Upland and then was called back into military service. Thereafter in civilian life, he served as an elementary school principal in Columbia City, then came to Saint Joe and was a teacher at Riverdale Elementary before retiring in 1975.

Popular with young people, Mr. Bevington still maintained an atmosphere of order and mutual respect in the classroom. He devoted many hours to grade school basketball, not only organizing the teams but also serving as referee for the games. For several years he was summer activities director at Auburn before serving the Riverdale area in that capacity as tennis instructor and director of Little League baseball activities. Here again he did "double duty," umpiring the kids' baseball games.

Disappointed and discouraged over the pressures of certain adults to place "winning" above total youth participation in the youngsters' baseball activities, Mr. Bevington dropped out of the program. He had later health problems and was "gone" twice during surgery over a year ago.

Mr. Bevington is a member of the Saint Joe Lions Club. And as a member of St. Mark Lutheran Church in Saint Joe, he has served on the church council. He has also served for many years as a Sunday School teacher, as has his wife, Betty. And he is at present serving as Sunday School superintendent, continuing a lifetime that has been marked by service to others.

Sp'ville Festival Set For July

Plans are being made for a Covered Bridge Festival at Spencerville Saturday and Sunday, July 28 and 29.

Chairman Ken Mathes says tentative attractions include a craft show, antiques, parade, raft race, bike race, class reunions, ball games and a Sunday community worship service to be followed by a potluck dinner.

Summer 'Rec'??

The summer recreation program for the Riverdale area, if a leader can be found, will be sponsored by the Saint Joe Lions Club. The program will begin Monday, June 4, 1979.

The ever-popular swimming program will be a certainty. Last year 122 young people participated in the swimming program, the largest number ever.

This year the swimming program will be held the last two weeks in June, beginning Monday, June 18, 1979. Forms have been sent home from the Riverdale School. Parents of those who want to participate should fill out the forms and return them to the teacher.

Bus service will be furnished free for the lessons.

$3,000 Sought For Handicapped Kids' Summer

The parents of children enrolled in the DeKalb County Preschool for Handicapped Children are trying to raise $3,000 to cover the cost of summer school for 25 handicapped children from DeKalb and Noble counties. The preschool will be providing speech and physical therapy and classroom experiences for the children for five weeks during the summer.

There is no financing allocated to cover the cost of summer school. Therefore, a raffle is planned for May 8.

Gifts have been donated by various area merchants and interested individuals from the two counties. Prizes include a portable TV, an expense-paid trip to Holland, Michigan, to the Tulip Festival, small appliances, and gift certificates, over 25 prizes in total.

To obtain tickets, contact Pat and Mary Crow at Saint Joe, phone 337-5553, or the preschool office at 925-3065.

Karen Pfister is chairman of the fund-raising project.

school board was tabled. Mr. Hampel said more accurate information concerning school funding in general would be available at a later date. Until that time, the board cannot make any commitments. However, the board did express its desire to provide financial support if at all possible.

It was noted that 13 years ago, $10,000 was raised "in one week" for new uniforms due to private funding. At the present time, however, there has not been any significant sizeable donation reported and the Band Boosters reportedly have between $6,000 and $7,000 in their treasury.

Eastside was one of several schools finding a quantity of picric acid in its science lab inventory. The chemical reportedly becomes a possible explosive danger when it crystalizes. 40 grams of the substance were removed recently from Eastside by the Butler Fire Department. Students were removed from classrooms with a fire drill before the chemical was removed, stabilized and buried by the Butler Fire Department.

Elementary principal Charles Ray submitted reports indicating that the two elementary schools are "average" in competency tests.

No action was taken on a suggestion from the previous meeting that a policy be established by the school board on the use of the new lights at the Riverdale tennis courts. Saint Joe Booster Club president Ted Haberkorn made the suggestion "to avoid possible conflicts" between those who play basketball on the courts and those who play tennis. He noted that the lights were a project of the Booster Club and that the money donated to the project by the Booster Club, the Saint Joe Lions Club, the Vulcraft plant at Saint Joe and Sechler's Pickles was for the purpose of lighting the tennis courts. Frank Sechler served as chairman of the project after the matter was initially considered by the Boosters for over a year.

Mr. Haberkorn said that his investigation indicated the cost of building additional courts was prohibitive. Then a suggestion by Jim Hudson to install lights and add to the daily time the courts could be used was adopted. The approximate cost of $2,800 was shared by the four donors. Mr. Sechler also provided the services of two of his employees, Mr. Hudson and Donnie Sechler, to wire the fixtures and mount them on poles. Indiana & Michigan Electric Company set the poles.

Though the lights went up last fall, it was too late for use by tennis enthusiasts. The lights will be useable' in the near future.

The school board did not establish any policy of priority use due to an expressed opinion that the lights were not installed just for tennis and that to establish a priority for tennis players would "shut out" those who want to play basketball.

Asthma is usually a chronic disease

Its victims have breathing difficulties. Attacks are usually mild. Fortunately, it is not contagious. But, if neglected, asthma increases in severity and endangers the victim's health. It may be caused by an allergy, infection or even nervous tension.

If you think you have asthma, don't attempt self-treatment. It is almost impossible for anyone but a physician to diagnose the cause. With proper medical treatment, asthma can be kept under control and often cured.

Thank You, Mr. Williams

The official announcement of the resignation of Principal Robert E. Williams of DeKalb Eastside High School leaves some questions unanswered. And they possibly will remain unanswered, except for the indication that a conflict of philosophy with the school board and superintendent was at the seat of his departure. Maybe it's better that way — leave some questions unanswered. I don't know for sure. I am still puzzled by the situation.

It is significant that the school board said Mr. Williams' forced resignation was not due to illegal or immoral activities. It is significant that the board noted Mr. Williams' continuing effort to improve our school.

One faculty member is reported to have stated that part of Mr. Williams' problem was that he "couldn't get along with the teachers." One patron replied with, "Good — then they oughta rehire him and double his pay!"

It appears that "not getting along" means Mr. Williams often said "no" to the teachers. It makes me wonder if we have another instance of teachers — SOME teachers — carrying on a behind-the-scenes effort to get rid of the principal. It only takes a few grumbling on the faculty, consistently, to get the attention of the school board. Teachers have carried on behind-the-scenes activities in the past, as for instance during the teacher boycott of extra-curricular activities a couple of years ago. And Mr. Williams DID report officially to the school board last year that the low level of school spirit stemmed from the teacher boycott.

I am especially puzzled by the alleged "difference in philosophy" within Mr. Williams. Does that mean the efforts at re-establishing some standards of discipline are going to be dropped??? Heaven forbid! Mr. Williams has been the only one — the ONLY one — I ever saw who immediately took steps to curb rowdyism at athletic events when a few guys would start "cutting up" or whatever you might call it. Those occasions were not frequent. But when they did occur, Mr. Williams was on-the-spot immediately to restore order.

Mr. Williams had to sit still, though he was chomping at the bit, at a special assembly last year when Senator Richard Lugar spoke at the school. Some of the students themselves "shooshed" certain of their classmates when a perceptible murmur began in the student body during the special assembly. It would have been embarrassing to the school if Mr. Williams had left his chair and gone up into the bleachers to take care of the situation; but he kept the school from such embarrassment by remaining seated. However, he WAS looking around to trying to get some other faculty member's eye to give the high sign to quiet the students, but was unsuccessful.

Mr. Williams was criticized by one adult as "living in the past" in his approach to running a school, meaning that he was going too far in trying to instill discipline. Personally, I would welcome more of "the old school" on our faculty. Our schools everywhere have been too loose too long. You need only ask around a short time before you hear of smoke-filled rest rooms, love-making of sorts in the halls, and so on. I am talking about ALL schools, not just ours. I am certain that if Mr. Williams had his way, smoking would be banned — period — on school property, and no exceptions, just for starters. And he would be right.

But he's "out" now.

So — Mr. Williams — it is a regret-filled "thanks" I give you for your efforts while at Eastside, regret at your forced departure. Thanks for your example of high integrity, for your high standard of ethics. Thanks for not lowering yourself to "mud-slinging" when the going got rough. Thanks for your devotion to better schools. Thanks for your willingness to bear the many burdens of your office even when you had to bear a personal burden of utmost grief. Thanks for your effort to keep "Eastside" a respectable name. Thanks for your effort to maintain control of your students, even though they may not understand and appreciate your concern for their welfare.

Hopefully, time will heal your wounds. Definitely, time (and maybe not too long) will bring a realization in some young minds that, "Gee — he wasn't such a bad guy, after all.....I guess we weren't fair to him"

In teaching, in education, there is only one word to describe the highest standard possible in manner, outlook, attitude and devotion to purpose. That word is "professional" — in the true sense of the word, reflecting a judgment by others, not a declaration of self-praise.

Mr. Williams — you are a professional.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

A recent reception held by the county Red Cross chapter was announced as honoring the volunteer workers in all phases of the Red Cross program.

However, the real reason for the reception was to honor Jessie Baxter who retired in January after 25 years of service in the county chapter.

Mrs. Baxter served as the "eyes and ears" of Red Cross work in DeKalb County, taking care of all the details necessary to keep the chapter functioning, and providing officers and members with information related to the chapter's activities.

The world-wide Red Cross organization has roots going back to 1859 when a Swiss citizen recognized the need for providing relief of human suffering seen on the battlefield.

While Red Cross is associated at first thought with wartime relief, the organization expanded into relief for those caught in all types of disasters and emergencies all over the world.

The local chapter was formed in 1917 to fill war-time needs.

In 1953 the collection of blood through the "Bloodmobile" was begun. Other programs added through the years include: nursing, disaster, water safety, first aid, hospital volunteers and so on. The local chapter is financed through the United Fund of DeKalb County.

Gale Bale has replaced Mrs. Baxter as executive secretary.

However, in the minds of many, especially those who have served on the chapter's board of directors and as officers, "Red Cross" still is "Jessie Baxter" — an indication of the respect she gained from those about her as she diligently and faithfully served DeKalb County for 25 years.

Marsha plans to attend Purdue University to major in management.

Co-salutatorians were named this year, each having a scholastic average of 10.363. The two are Jody Phillips and Brian Sawvel. Jody is the daughter of MM Wendell Phillips of Butler and Brian is the son of MM Maynard Sawvel of R1 Hamilton.

Jody took the college prep course. Her extra-curricular activities included cheerleader, bat girl, member of the Easterner staff, French Club, Student Council, Booster Block, Office Education Association and the National Honor Society. She was class president in her junior and senior years, OEA vice-president and Student Council treasurer.

Jody plans to attend Purdue University with the intent of becoming a certified public accountant.

Brian took college prep subjects. He received top student awards in Spanish, algebra I, geometry, advanced algebra and basic electricity. He participated in football one year and has been active in the Spanish Club and Science Club. He is a member of the National Honor Society.

Brian plans to attend Tri-State University to seek a career in computer service.

From The Editor's Desk....

Reader Fears 'Year Of The Child'

Darla McCammon of west of Saint Joe sent in a copy of "The Gospel Truth," a publication put out by the "Southwest Radio Church."

The publication contains an eye-opening review of what's happening or could happen in 1979 which has been declared "The International Year of the Child."

She must be a mind reader. I had just recently set aside one of our Lutheran church bulletins which has a brief "pitch" for "The International Year of the Child." I pointed out its misrepresentations to a couple of my fellow church members. To read that bulletin, which is put out by our national Lutheran organization, you would think that kids in the United States were the most neglected lot you could think of. With tear-jerking references to child abuse and malnutrition, the bulletin suggested some things which are totally contrary to actual fact. It reflects the influence of the strong-willed social planners in our society and in our church organizations. In effect, the message is that these social welfare champions know better than anyone else as to how to treat a child. Yes, there are those who abuse their children and they are cruel and inhuman. That doesn't make the majority of adults guilty of the same crime.

The article Darla sent is rather lengthy; I wish it could be printed in total. But I'll just pick out some of the highlights and hope that they will be sufficient to indicate why at least two of us are disturbed by the "International Year of the Child."

The United Nations passed a resolution in 1959 called "Declaration of the Rights of the Child." The UN also declared 1975 "International Women's Year" and 1976-85 "International Women's Decade. The UN named 1979 "International Year of the Child" with UNICEF as the agency in charge of implementation.

Note this:

Those declarations came from the efforts of the "International Federation of Democratic Women." That organization is described as an old-time Communist Women's group whose publication, "Women of the Whole World," is edited in Poland and published in East Berlin.

The chairman of the group said in 1977 in Prague, Czechoslovakia: . . . "Socialism, the new social order, initiated 60 years ago by the Great October Socialist Revolution, ... has always considered its main duty to be to secure peace and to devote all-round care to the young generation. . . ."

"All-round care" means "the government knows best how to raise a child."

The American taxpayer provided $5 million for the 1975 "World Conference for Women" in Mexico City. President Carter appointed Bella Abzug chairman of the conference and 41 others who push for "women's liberation." She has since been rejected by the voters of New York State two or three times as she sought public office again. That Mexico City conference permitted display booths promoting lesbianism, among other things.

President Carter has appointed a 25-member commission for the "International Year of the Child" with Mrs. Andrew Young as chairman.

President Carter has authorized the 1980 White House Conference on Children and the 1981 White House Conference on Families. If these conferences follow the pattern of the 1970 conferences on Mental Health of Children and Conference on Children, participants will not debate WHETHER OR NOT the federal government should rear children but HOW the federal government should rear children. The pattern of government supervision has already been established by "International Women's Year."

The goals for children:

"Liberate" them from traditional morals and values.

(The following quotes are frightening: "The real solution requires a fundamental change in the value commitment, and the actions of the persons who control the public and private sector of our common life—parents, and those whose decisions determine the life styles of other human beings.

"Day Care is a powerful institution. . . .A day care program that ministers to a child from six months to six years has over 8,000 hours to teach him values, fears, beliefs, and behaviors."

Where did those quotes come from? —"The White House Conference on Children, Report to the President"!!!)

"Liberate" children from parental authority.

The report to the President on that 1970 White House Conference on Children" stated:

"We recommend that laws dealing with rights of parents be reexamined and changed where they infringe on the rights of children . . . amendments should reinforce the primacy of the rights of the child.

"Protect the child from practices which may foster racial, RELIGIOUS or any other form of discrimination."

Christian parents would be prohibited from teaching their children the faith. The child would be "protected" so that he or she might choose atheism or humanism or Buddhism or any other belief—AS A CHILD.

"Liberation" from nationalism and patriotism.

"Liberation" from "militerism."

Fighting for your country is a no-no under the socialists' plan.

"Liberation" from capitalism.

The UN Declaration for the International Year of the Child refers to its connection to the "Declaration and Programme of Action on Establishment of a New International Economic Order." In plain language, the idea is to replace capitalism with socialism. Individual initiative, individual reward would be replaced by government control of what you do and what you receive. (Aren't we already started down that road—a ban on this, a ban on that—the extremism of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) —government control of energy development resulting in imminent gas rationing—????)

These goals would be accomplished through Non-Governmental Organizations, such as the American Civil Liberties Union, American Humanist Association, National Organization for Women, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, League of Women Voters, YWCA, YMCA, Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Amnesty International, Council On Racial Equality (CORE), International Federation of Business and Professional Women, Planned Parenthood, Americans for Democratic Action (ADA), Gray Panthers and others.

PLEASE NOTE—these organizations are not identified as socialist or communist. They are organizations to be USED by the social planners. And some of the actions and declarations of a few of them indicate how their leadership has already been infiltrated by the world reformers.

Senator Orrin G. Hatch (R-Utah) has sent a letter to his constituents warning them of the "children's rights laws" that could become a reality under a new United Nations program if fully implemented by the Carter Administration. Under the program children could sue their parents for being "forced" to attend church, children would be eligible for minimum wage for doing household chores, children would have the right to choose their own family!

This is a portion of the content of "Gospel Truth" sent to us by Darla. If you want to read all of it, stop by the News Office.

Here is one last "kicker":

The American Federation of Teachers is working to lower the age of compulsory schooling to three years or younger. The National Education Association (NEA) endorses formal education at age two.

Far-fetched? Hardly. Keep in mind that the leaders of drastic social reform programs are a very dedicated lot. They are patient; ten, twenty, thirty years means nothing to them, as long as the change they seek comes about.

And remember—we already have "Head Start" and we have a strong push for day care centers, a push provided, incidentally, by Indiana's Senator Birch Bayh.

What's wrong with America, with the world? The answer is not so difficult if certain activities are analyzed and reported —and then passed along as did Darla McCammon.

'Calling All Cubs'

—Paula Conrad, reporter

The monthly pack meeting of Cub Scout Pack 3172 is going to be a "Cub Scout Roundup."

All boys in the Riverdale area, presently attending school in the 2nd, 3rd and 4th grades, are invited. This special event will enable the boys to find out what Cub Scouting is all about. And since a successful Cub Scouting program involves adult participation, parents of all interested boys are urged and invited to attend.

The meeting will be held on Thursday, May 17, at 7:00 p.m. at Wild Cherry Park at Saint Joe. There will be games and refreshments.

Tax Deadline

DeKalb County Treasurer Joan Knepper advises taxpayers that the spring installment on real estate, personal property, ditch assessments and mobile homes are due on or before Thursday, May 10. After the due date, a 10% penalty will be added.

All statements have been mailed. Those who have not received a statement should contact the treasurer's office.

The office will be open extra hours Saturday, May 5, 9 a.m. until noon. Regular office hours during the week are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

When paying by mail, taxpayers should enclose tax statements, remittance and a self-addressed stamped envelope to receive receipts by return mail.

Riverdale Kids Big Winners

Riverdale Elementary School entrants captured six of the possible twelve awards in the annual DeKalb County Soil and Water Conservation Poster Contest this year. There were 373 posters entered in the competition from schools in DeKalb County.

Local students made a clean sweep at the fourth grade level. Carrie Mason placed first, Rita Chew second and Lester Tatro third.

Scott Elliott won in the third grade division while Donald Klotz and Angela Czaja were second and third, respectively, in the special education class.

First place winners receive $5.00, second place $3.00 and third place $1.00. All entrants received a pine tree, according to Riverdale principal Charles Ray.

Protect children from choking accidents

Be especially cautious to keep objects small enough to be swallowed away from infants and children. For they do not expectorate, but attempt to swallow and inhale them into the lungs. Teach them to spit anything out.

Do not stimulate a child to laugh or cry while food is in his or her mouth. Physicians advise it is not wise to reach into an infant's mouth to remove an impacted foreign object. Place the victim face down across a bed or chair and call a physician. Choking is the leading cause of accidental death in the home for children under five.

EHS Short Half-Counselor

An alleged "shortage" in guidance counsellors at DeKalb Eastside High School has resulted in an "accredited-warned" status for the school by the North Central Association of Schools. The association says the school has only 1.25 guidance counselors when it should have 1.75 guidance counselors.

Eastside has one full-time guidance counselor plus some part-time help in that area.

This second warning of a so-called deficiency could result in loss of accreditation. Association schools are evaluated by a team of fellow educators.

Charles Hampel, superintendent of schools, has pointed out that the outcome of a law suit filed in 1977 by Dorothy Whitney, a music teacher, has not been determined at the present time. Five faculty positions were eleminated in 1977, including a guidance counselor, Iva Scheuring. The cutback was made by the school board due to decreasing enrollment and tightening of the money supply.

Mr. Hampel has indicated that restoring one of the five positions without restoring the others could affect the outcome of the lawsuit.

So, for the time being, it appears the school will still be able to function, short one-half a counselor.

New Postal Regulations

New regulations governing the size of first class mail will go into effect after July 15, according to the Post Office Department.

After July 15, envelopes and cards measuring less than 3½ inches high or 5 inches long will be returned to the sender if mailed. Envelope and greeting card industries have had more than three years to prepare for the new standards. So, few retailers should still be selling undersized pieces, the Post Office Department says.

The regulations also prohibit flimsy cards. In the future they must be at least .007 of an inch thick. An official post card is .009 of an inch thick.

Oversized and odd-shaped pieces of mail will require a surcharge of 7 cents for pieces of mail weighing an ounce or less. First class mail more than 6⅛ inches high or 11½ inches long faces the surcharge as does a piece of mail more than a quarter-inch thick.

Undersized pieces and flimsy cards are being banned because they reportedly can become trapped in other mail, tear and jam mail-processing machinery. Other letters can also be damaged.

So, if you have any itty-bitty envelopes or cards as yet unused, use 'em before July 15.

Dear Ted:

Thank you for the candid remarks in your Editorial column concerning our problems. I wish there were some way you could write for a paper the size of the Chicago Tribune.

Most all papers have across the top of their banner something like—"Dedicated to the Truth"—when in fact, they turn loose a group of young reporters eager to make a name for themselves, like young sharks with sharp teeth.

Help Needed For 'Bike-A-Thon'

Lois Lichtsinn, chairman for the St. Jude Children's Research Hospital Wheels For Life Bike-A-Thon in the Riverdale area, is asking local residents to volunteer their time and energy for the May 12 ride. Starting at 9:00 a.m. at St. Peter Lutheran Church in Spencerville, the volunteer riders will pedal their way to bring in contributions from the area. Rain date is Saturday, May 19.

Volunteers are needed to help conduct the Wheels For Life Bike-A-Thon. Funds received go to support the world-famous research center in its battle against catastrophic childhood diseases.

"We're looking for people who are willing to contribute a little of their time to help us help children live," Mrs. Lichtsinn said. "Our biggest need is for riders, since they are the ones who will make this event a success."

The chairman continued, "Those who want to ride may pick up their registration/sponsor forms at Laub's Shell Mart, Chaney's Restaurant and the Post Office in Spencerville, and at Brown Furniture and Hardware and Knisely Branch Bank at Saint Joe. Everyone who raises $25.00 will get a St. Jude Children's Research Hospital T-shirt. Those who raise $75.00 or more will get a special bike-er's back pack.

"This year for the top riders of kids up to 15 years old, and 16 years old and older, 10 speed bikes will be given away. These will go to the riders who collect the most money after the ride. The day of the ride all riders will be eligible for a drawing. Prizes are a skateboard and pocket radio, donated by Brown Furniture and Hardware."

At St. Jude Hospital, doctors and scientists are studying leukemia, Hodgkin's disease and other forms of childhood cancer as well as other deadly diseases that strike the young. The results of research conducted there are freely shared with doctors and scientists all over the world, enabling stricken children to have a better chance to live.

Founded by entertainer Danny Thomas, St. Jude Hospital is totally non-sectarian and does not charge patients or parents for services offered. It has 3,370 active patients. Last year alone, 149 important research papers by St. Jude staff members were printed in medical journals; staff members made 237 presentations at key seminars; and 77 of the world's top scientists came to the hospital to lecture and to gather data in a major exchange of information.

Volunteers can contact Mrs. Lichtsinn at 238-4660 or Cindy Furnish at 868-5445.

Local 'Basketball Camp' To Train Future 'Blazers'

A "Blazer Basketball Camp" will be held this summer under the direction of DeKalb Eastside head coach Rick Hudson.

There will be two sessions, one June 4-15 for grades 3, 4 and 5, the second June 18-29 for grades 6, 7 and 8. Sessions will be held in the new gym at Eastside Junior-Senior High School at Butler.

Scheduled games are set thereafter for July 2-13 for boys in grades 6, 7 and 8.

Boys in grades 3, 4 and 5 (1978-79 school year) will attend camp for two weeks, five mornings per week.

Sessions will begin at 9:30 a.m. and end at 11:30 a.m.

Boys in grades 6, 7 and 8 will attend camp for the next two weeks, also five mornings per week.

The last two weeks of the camp will be made up of an eight-game schedule against Fremont, Garrett, East Noble and Prairie Heights. This is for boys in grades 6, 7 and 8.

Every boy who has perfect attendance will be eligible to win the "perfect attendance award,"—a new basketball.

Each camper should have basketball shoes, socks and trunks or shorts. The camp T-shirt will be given to every boy on opening day.

A $10.00 pre-registration fee is used to pay for the camp T-shirt, garage-door basketball book, certificate, trophies and prizes. Registration on opening day will be $12.00.

The $10 pre-registration fee, which means a savings of $2.00, may be paid by check payable to "Blazer Basketball Camp" (c/o Rick Hudson, 606 East Main, Butler 46721). Pre-registration assures proper T-shirt size and should be mailed by May 25.

Coaches will concentrate on teaching basketball fundamentals—how to shoot a layup, a free throw and a jump shot. The boys will be instructed on playing one-on-one, two-on-two and five-on-five. Also to be taught are individual defense, team defense, rebounding, team rebounding, dribbling, passing and ball handling.

Each boy will play an equal amount of time in league games.

The innovative local basketball "camp" is being undertaken to provide a foundation on which to build teams at the upper grade levels in the future.

Did you know

—that Mrs. Flossie Mavis of Auburn and Mrs. Mildred Jarrett of Saint Joe called on MM Herbert Curie, Mrs. Wilma Kees, MM Pat Monroe and Mrs. Parlia Hull, all of whom reside in Garrett, on the afternoon of May 1. Herbert is still bedfast but seems to be in good spirits. Wilma had a stroke a few weeks ago but is able to move her thumb and little finger now. The Monroes have their health problems, but the visit was enjoyed with them and Parlia.

—that May 13-19 is National Transportation Week.

—that Nancy Coburn of Fort Wayne, formerly of Saint Joe, visited in this community April 25-29 with Mildred Jarrett of Saint Joe. They attended the mid-week prayer service at Co-Burn Corners Church of Christ, the Fifty Plus Club meeting at Spencerville and the weekly Sunday School Class at Meadowhaven in Butler. While at Meadohaven, Nancy visited her son-in-law's mother, Princess Zuba.

—that a nationwide survey of members of the National Federation of Independent Business has revealed 88% of the respondents favor an exemption from OSHA safety inspections for small businesses in non-hazardous industries. Studies of OSHA operations and results indicate that employee behavior is a major component in accidents.

—that Mr. Don L. Evans, 80, of Hicksville died recently. He leaves two sons and four daughters. The funeral was held at Brown Funeral Home in Hicksville and burial was in Six Corners Cemetery.

—that Congressman Dan Quayle says the "do nothing" performance of the current session of Congress appears to have been pleasing to the voters "back home." He said members of Congress reported the Easter vacation provided time for Congress to get public reaction to Congress' efforts. And that reaction reflected pleasure that little legislation had been passed. The public appears to be "legislation weary."

—that MM Paul Jackson and Phyllis, Patrick and Polly were April 29 dinner guests of Mrs. Mildred Jarrett. All attended Sunday School and worship at Coburn Corners and the funeral of Don Evans.

—that MM Robert Evans (the former Joan Curie) and Tom, who will be entering the Air Force after he graduates from high school this spring, spent April 26-28 visiting the Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, Colorado.

—that Nancy Coburn is visiting her sister, Mary Jane Fay, at Smithport, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Fay's guest, Paula, died in her home April 29.

Dear. Mr. Haberkorn:

Thank you for contacting me and expressing your reservations about the Federal Election Commission.

I share your concern but I am encouraged by the recent appointment of a distinguished Hoosier, Max Friedersdorf, as an FEC Commissioner. I am confident that his presence on the Commission will add objectivity and even-handedness to its deliberations. I look forward to keeping in close touch with Max on the workings of the Commission.

I appreciate your taking the time to register your opinion.

Protect children from choking accidents

Be especially cautious to keep objects small enough to be swallowed away from infants and children. For they do not expectorate, but attempt to swallow and inhale them into the lungs. Teach them to spit anything out.

Do not stimulate a child to laugh or cry while food is in his or her mouth. Physicians advise it is not wise to reach into an infant's mouth to remove an impacted foreign object. Place the victim face down across a bed or chair and call a physician. Choking is the leading cause of accidental death in the home for children under five.

It's not easy to stamp out inflation.

Inflation has increased the cost of everything from postage stamps and clothing to food and housing.

And there's no way we can escape it either. The cost of coal, transmission lines, borrowed money and all the things it takes to keep the electricity coming, have gone up two to four hundred percent in the last decade.

Yet, even with those increased costs, your electric service is still a good value.

For instance, for about a dollar a day you can still do all this: keep all your food fresh in a refrigerator/freezer, dry your laundry, and watch color television, plus have enough hot water for all your cleaning, bathing and washing as well as cook breakfast, lunch and dinner for the entire family.*

That's a bargain. And we're working to keep it a good value. Matter of fact, we have some free S.A.V.E. booklets that can help you get even more for your electricity dollar. And also show you how you can become part of our Save America's Valuable Energy Program.

Stop in for them at any of our offices.

At I&M, we want you to get the most out of your electric service.

Town Readies For 2nd Annual 'Open House'

Last year, with the "open house" of Family Cuts and Curls announced for April by owner Kay Smith, other local merchants joined in and so did many local residents who held yard and garage sales. It was a spontaneous event which saw old friends and former residents visiting in town.

This year Kay announced a sidewalk sale for May 19. And once again local merchants entered into the spirit of the thing with an invitation to the public to drop in, visit and take advantage of the day's specials. And once again there are going to be yard and garage sales. The News wants to be notified immediately of the yard and garage sales so that a list can be published in the next issue before May 19.

At the restaurant, customers can get four hot dogs or coney dogs for the price of three. And a drawing will be held to give away both a man's and woman's wrist watch.

Brown Furniture & Hardware will have refreshments for those who stop in plus discounts on certain items.

Bita General Store will have specials on certain brands of pop, bread and chips. In addition the store will have a drawing for adults for a "Pizzaria" and a drawing for a kid's prize.

Yeiser's Standard Service is planning to offer "odds and ends" of recapped tires at $10 a tire.

Lyon Upholstery will offer a 10% discount on fabrics for furniture reupholstering.

With Lloyd and Marie Noel donating their auctioneering services for a band uniform benefit auction at the old Butler gym Saturday morning, the Nosey Nook may not be able to join in the open house activities—except on the possibility that the auction will be completed by noon or so, leaving the afternoon open for Saint Joe's little "shindig."

Phil Cleveland mentioned giving free butch haircuts Saturday. But he was smiling when he said it, thus leaving some doubts about the seriousness of his idea.

The News Office will have an open house. And a drawing for adults only (18 years old and over) will have as the prize an original copy of the paper dated Saturday, June 28, 1884. The 95-year-old issue will be framed for the winner.

The restaurant will have balloons and suckers for the kids.

Last year the waitresses' attire included ponytails and bobbysocks reminiscent of the "fabulous '50's." This year they planned to wear mini-skirts of the "swinging '60's" but decided not to due to a much too enthusiastic response by the dirty old editor plus other hazards possibly to be encountered in removing dishes from tables—from the far side!

Family Cuts and Curls will give away ten $10 gift certificates, offer a 10% discount on all Redken products, have 50-cent and $1.00 "grab-bags" and provide free coffee and cookies.

And, weather permitting, Cindy Culbertson will do hair cutting and styling outside, giving more room for people to see how it is done.

Yard sales known of at this writing will be at the homes of MM Merle Coburn, Ila Coburn and MM Ray French.

REMINDER—any residents of Saint Joe having a garage, yard or sidewalk sale should notify The News office immediately for a free listing in the May 17 issue.

Band Boosters' Benefit Auction May 19

The DeKalb Eastside Band Boosters will hold a benefit auction Saturday, May 19, at the old gym in Butler starting at 10:00 a.m.

Lloyd and Marie Noel of Noel Auction Sales at Saint Joe have volunteered their services in conducted the auction.

Residents of the area are asked to donate items of all types—furniture, sports equipment, fishing equipment, dishes, antiques, toys, lawn mowers, tools, craft items, bikes, appliances and so on. Items should be in working order or close to it—no "junk" is desired.

Boosters will provide pickup service for donated items. The numbers to call are 337-5153, 868-2677, 868-5206 and 925-1024.

Lunch will be available at the sale.

Near $2 Million Sewage Plant Coming; Board Self-Pay-Raise Denied

At the May 7 meeting of the Saint Joe town board, a representative of Clyde E. Williams & Associates of South Bend stated that two procedural steps were combined in seeking federal and state grants for construction of a sewage treatment plant at Saint Joe. With this change, it is possible that grants may be approved by late summer and construction begun next spring.

Clerk-treasurer Emma Frank informed The News that the grants total $1,650,000, representing 85% of the total cost of construction. The remaining 15% will come from the sale of bonds, to be repaid by sewage treatment plant users in as yet unannounced fee schedules.

Advance notice of the appearance of the representative was made in other area news media but no such information was given to The News. The clerk said no one attended the meeting concerning the sewage treatment project.

It was erroneously stated elsewhere that Saint Joe has no sewage treatment facilities and that none were planned in the near future. That statement was made in a news report elsewhere about a major problem with the sewage treatment facility at the Riverdale Elementary School.

Sewage treatment action actually got underway some 13 or so years ago when the town board, headed by Maurice Kline and including Ralph Keeler and the late Clifford Billow, authorized a preliminary survey. The survey was completed and the cost of $1,200 paid by the following elected board headed by Ted Haberkorn and including Jack Bowser and Lynn Lake. Applications for grants were not made for a period of time but a series of deadline dates was established by the Indiana Stream Pollution Board for construction and completion of a treatment facility. Those dates have passed.

Re-application for grants began a few years ago. Grants have been made in the past on the basis of a point system involving such factors as size of the community, proximity to rivers and streams, the number of years grants have been sought, and so on. According to Mrs. Frank, smaller communities are now getting more attention by state and federal officials in determining where grants will be allowed.

It appears that the prospects for a sewage treatment facility at Saint Joe are high, inasmuch as the school sewage problem is being allowed to be corrected on a comparatively "temporary" basis.

The News sponsored a public meeting a few years ago to air possibilities of establishing a sewage treatment district to include Spencerville which is an unincorporated town. The $12,000 update of plans of a year or so ago mentions the possibility of establishing such a district but there has been no indication that such a district is in current procedures. Because Saint Joe is an incorporated town specifically designated as needing sewage treatment facilities, it is the responsibility of the town board to take the initiative in any plans for a sewage district. Trustees and advisory boards of Concord and Spencer townships must be including in district planning. At The News' public meeting a few years ago, township officials then in office were either present or represented and the general reaction was favorable to exploring the possibilities of the district approach.

There has been no estimate given as to the per-household cost of hooking into the proposed system. However, indications from other communities are that the average Saint Joe household cost for the hook-up will be $1,000 at the very minimum, probably more.

In other business, three local residents, Mrs. Hensley, Mrs. Cearbaugh and Mrs. Stallcup, requested assistance from the board in further cleanup of debris and brush in the square in which their residences are located.

The clerk notified the board that she had received approval of the town budget for 1979 except for the raise in pay for town officials which was denied. The budget had been advertised in August of 1978 but was not approved because it had not appeared in a second newspaper. An additional appropriation was then advertised in order to allow for payment of town obligations. However, this notice was also declared to be "improperly advertised" because it appeared in two newspapers of the same political faith.

At a hearing on the second notice April 6 at the court house in Auburn, state tax commission fieldman Omar Wuthrich said he would recommend allowing the advertisement when the editor of The News gave the opinion that no newspaper in DeKalb County would take issue in the matter. The budget includes a "self pay raise" from $150 per year to $500 per year for each board member.

The town board has authorized $1,000 for repairs to the park pavilion. International Minerals and Chemicals and Crow's Rainbow Farm Center have provided another $500.

YF Attends 'Ichthus '79'

Bill Allen, Cindy Bissell and June Fiedler, accompanied by their counselors, Jim and Jayme Erne, attended Ichthus '79 the weekend of June 27-29. They traveled to Wilmore, Kentucky, to Asbury College as representatives of the Spencerville U.M.Y.F.

"Ichthus" was started 10 years ago as an aftermath of Woodstock. "Ichthus" is a Christian rock festival. It was attended by 11,000 people this year, the largest crowd ever. This was also the first year communion was served, to an estimated 9,500 to 10,000 people.

The youth spent the whole time outside very close together in an open field. They camped in tents and walked down to a hillside overlooking the stage where the performers and speakers were. The weather was cold but the atmosphere was very warm.

Amanda McPherson

Funeral services were held May 8 for Amanda E. McPherson, 69, who died the Sunday before at DeKalb Memorial Hospital. She had been ill three days.

Mrs. McPherson was a native of Frozen Creek, Kentucky, and had resided in the Saint Joe area 29 years. Born June 29, 1909 she was the daughter of Andrew and Missouri (Miller) Turner. She married John T. McPherson November 18, 1928, in Jackson Kentucky. He preceded her in death.

Survivors include five sons, John of Wallingford, Connecticut, Earl of Auburn, Christopher and Andrew of Garrett, and Joseph of Saint Joe; six daughters, Mrs. Dino (Velma) Dell'oro of North Haven, Connecticut, Mrs. Richard (Missouri) Moore of Dema, Kentucky, Mrs. Richard (Eva) Schorey of Auburn, Mrs. Shafter (Betty) Baker of Saint Joe, Mrs. Richard (Alice) Klinger of St. Marys, Ohio, and Mrs. Darvin (Ruby) Goble of Waterloo; two brothers; three sisters; 64 grandchildren and 13 great grandchildren.

Services were held at Dilgard, Kline and Southern Funeral Home in Auburn with Rev. Alvis Banks of the Pentecostal Church of Altona officiating.

Burial was in Woodlawn Cemetery at Auburn.

From The Editor's Desk....

'Chairperson'??? 'Huperson'???

One of the victories won by today's "intellectual reformers" (as I would call them, but only loosely as far as "intellectual" is concerned) is the widespread tendency by those in direct contact with the public to corrupt the English language.

There is one particular word that has been "coined" and is in widespread use. That word is "chairperson." It is being used by the majority of those working in the news media. It is used by leaders of all kinds—in government, in schools, in business and industry—even in churches.

Just recently the "Oxford Press," recognized as a leader in the field of language and publishers of dictionaries now in wide use, announced that the word "chairperson" will not be included in its dictionaries. The appearance of the word in other dictionaries—or any word, for that matter—does not mean the word is "legitimate." Modern dictionaries have tended to include words having only contemporary meaning. A true "dictionary" contains only those words having linguistic foundations.

Those who use the word "chairperson" are totally in error. There "ain't" no such word in proper English. It was "made up" as a concession to the equal rights movement as an indication of human equality of the sexes.

I know, I know—somebody will come back with the argument that the word is "legitimate," that it came into being with the times and is therefore permissible. They will say that "chairman" is a "sexist" word, that the "man" in "chairman" indicates that those who use the word look upon women as inferiors.

It is sometimes amazing that so many people can be misled in some things. In this case, a new "word" is being used not because it has definite "root" meaning but because a certain segment of our society views with alarm any word which has "man" in it.

Newspaper reporters, radio and TV newscasters, those in politics and government—all have been intimidated into the use of a word that doesn't exist.

It has gone so far that I recently read some thoughts by a clergyman of high standing in which there was the word "humankind." Ten years ago that same individual was using the word "mankind" to denote all human beings. The "humankind" was an obvious concession to the radical women's liberationists who would read sex prejudice into every word that contains "man" as a part of the word.

The humor in the situation is in that, by using "humankind" instead of "mankind," "man" is still being used. To follow the lead of the "revolutionaries," the clergyman should have said "personkind."

— Ooops — there I did it myself. I said "clergyman" and it should have been "clergyperson."

?????

Isn't it ridiculous? We must be so careful about our words because they might hurt someone's feelings by stepping on their ego. We'll tolerate four-letter obscenities in conversation, even in conversation of highly-learned individuals. We'll tolerate cursing on TV programs, even some of those seen early enough in the evening that our children hear those words. We'll tolerate cursing in popular music lyrics, even in what we always have thought of as good, "clean" country music.

But when it comes to legitimate words in our language which contain "man" as a part of a word, we simply cannot allow such "sexism" to go on.

Stop to think how awkward it is to weed out all those "man" words. What should we say? —"penpersonship" in talking about writing—"sportsperson-ship" in talking about conduct — "person-to-person" defense in talking about basketball strategy — "personual" in talking about something operated by hand rather than by automatic-power methods — "persondated" when talking about the requirements contained in our laws — and so on.

What about the word "human" —are we to banish it forever from our language? After all, it DOES have "man" in it. Are we to become "hupersons"?

When you review the entire matter, the inescapable conclusion is that we have allowed ourselves to be shamed into a feeling of guilt over the use of certain words which, to some highly-sensitive people, carry an insinuation when there is no insinuation.

If it sounds as if I am overreacting, that I have a "hangup" about it, bear in mind that the hangup is in those who are trying to change our vocabulary—drastically. My purpose is to preserve our language.

Question: in which atmosphere do you establish the ability and means to communicate with others—one in which new words are "made up" every generation to suit the whims of "reformers" — or one in which words are retained and each generation is taught their true meaning?

Keep this in mind—whenever you hear anyone use the word "chairperson," you have heard someone corrupt our language. It may be the "in" thing nowadays to some people, especially those in the news media. But in actual fact, use of that word is a glaring error in the use of our language.

In plain English, anyone who uses the word "chairperson" is wrong. They're either "putting on airs," showing their supposed intellectual supremacy, or they have been intimidated into error by those "putting on airs." Use of the word is an indication of linguistic snobbery.

CL '78 Budget Was Over $6,000; 9 Teams Prepare For 28th Season

Nine teams will participate in Saint Joe Church League competition during the coming summer. The group includes a new entry from Hopewell UB Church.

Officers were again re-elected by the league. They include Ted Haberkorn, president; Roger Cook, vice-president; and Lavon Hart, secretary treasurer.

The nine teams competing this year include Hopewell, Saint Joe-Coburntown II, Norris Chapel, Hicksville, Mt. Pleasant, Newville UM, Newville Church of Christ, Coburntown I and Spencerville Methodist-Saint Joe Lutheran.

The entry fee was raised to $100 for the coming season. It will enable the league to make a quicker repayment of a note taken out last year when a complete new set of lighting fixtures was installed at the local diamond.

The local Youth League requested a full week's use of the Church League facilities in July for a tournament of Little League teams. Church representatives voted to grant the request at a charge of $5 per night for use of the lights. The Little League also has use of the lighted diamond each Wednesday during its regular schedule, continuing a policy begun in 1978.

The Little League tourney dates are July 23-27.

Church League teams have chosen practice nights prior to the opening of the regular season. The combined Saint Joe Church of Christ-Coburntown II team has Monday, May 21; Mt. Pleasant Tuesday, May 22; Hicksville, Wednesday, May 23; and Hopewell, Thursday, May 24. The other teams have not as yet selected practice dates. When they do, they are to report them to the president to avoid conflicts.

The president reported that Don Bilbee of Universal Electric at Kendallville, from whom the new light fixtures were purchased, had called recently to find out if the fixtures had proven satisfactory. The response from church teams has all been favorable.

Lavon Hart presented information about scheduling for 8-team, 9-team and 10-team setups. It was noted that nine teams is now the maximum total to allow for the same full schedule of games as set up in the past.

He also distributed a financial report for the past year, as follows, which includes the league's own self-assessment totaling $1,630:

Fast dieting can be unsafe

Losing weight too quickly can be harmful. It can lead to ulceration of the stomach and development of gall stones within a short time. There are other possible complications, particularly if you do not exercise while dieting.

If you are overweight, you will be healthier if you reduce. But, you would be wise to consult your physician at least once before dieting to get his professional advice.

Tax Board Reverses Self, Allows Pay Hike

The State Board of Tax Commissioners has reversed itself.

After notifying Saint Joe Town clerk-treasurer Emma Frank that a pay raise for town officials for 1979 would not be allowed, which she reported to the town board at its May 7 meeting, the commission then apparently went by an "unofficial" interpretation of state statutes and decided to allow the self-pay-raise to board president Butch Coburn and board members Loretta Loy and Maurice Kline. (Mr. Kline was not a member of the board when the pay raise was put in the town budget for 1979 last August. Fred Rayle was then the third member of the board.) A raise will also go to the clerk-treasurer by the vote of the board. The clerk-treasurer is not a member of the board and thus does not vote in town matters.

Word of the tax commission's reversal of its first ruling came Friday, May 11, from Omar Wuthrich, field representative for the tax commission. He called the news office to state that the commission felt a specific statute "stands on its own" in permitting the board to raise its own pay during its term of office.

The statute being used by the tax commission to justify its reversall states in part:

"The board of trustees, clerk-treasurer, and marshal respectively shall receive for their services such compensation as the board of trustees, by ordinance, may direct." However, such wording does not establish that deterination of compensation for the board of trustees shall be for the board during its term in office.

Other towns, including Waterloo, have advertised ordinances in recent weeks establishing compensation for board members and clerk-treasurers. These, however, have been for town officials taking office January 1, 1980, not for the current officials.

The News has sought to prevent the pay increases on the basis of general principles, plus the opinion of at least two attorneys. A letter was sent to the state tax commission at the beginning, followed by a letter May 12 to the Indiana Attorney-General Theodore Sendak. The latter letter ended with, ". . and in no way can I interpret the spirit of our founding fathers as to include public officials' determining their own pay WHILE IN OFFICE."

It is interesting to note the pay of town officials through the years. In 1906 town trustees received an annual salary of $10.00. The clerk-treasurer received $25.00. In recent years the pay has been as follows:

Year	Trustee	Clerk-Treas.
1950	$25	$75
'54-'63	75	125
1964	150	300
'65-'67	100	300
'68-'75	150	300
'76-'78	150	500
1979 (contested)	500	650

From the table above, it is seen that the pattern of town officials' pay has been one of extended periods of time between pay increases. Those increases were considerably less percentagewise than the jump between 1978 and 1979.

The clerk-treasurer also receives compensation from the waterworks and trash collection utilities for bookwork required by the utilities.

Town Readies For 2nd Annual 'Open House'

Saint Joe businesses are ready for the Saturday, May 19, "open house" to be observed for the second year. No "big thing" as far as overall promotions are concerned, the day still offers an opportunity for residents in the area to take advantage the relaxing atmosphere of a small town and take advantage also of the specials offered for the day by local merchants.

In addition there are yard and garage sales, always a popular attraction for lots of folks.

Family Cuts and Curls will give away ten $10 gift certificates, offer a 10% discount on all Redken products, have 50-cent and $1.00 "grab-bags" and provide free coffee and cookies.

And, weather permitting, Cindy Culbertson will do hair cutting and styling outside, giving more room for people to see how it is done.

At the restaurant, customers can get four hot dogs or coney dogs for the price of three. And a drawing will be held to give away both a man's and woman's wrist watch.

The restaurant will have balloons and suckers for the kids.

Brown Furniture & Hardware will have refreshments for those who stop in plus discounts on certain items.

Bita General Store will have specials on hot hogs, soda pop, bread and chips. In addition the store will have a drawing for adults for a "Pizzaria" and a drawing for a kid's prize.

Yeiser's Standard Service is planning to offer "odds and ends" of recapped tires at $10 a tire.

Lyon Upholstery will offer a 10% discount on fabrics for furniture reupholstering.

The News Office will have an open house. And a drawing for adults only (18 years old and over) will have as the prize an original copy of the paper dated Saturday, June 28, 1884. The 95-year-old issue will be framed for the winner.

Yard sales known of at this writing will be at the homes of MM Merle Coburn, Ila Coburn and MM Ray French.

The Lynn Dukes and Ben Kraffts will have a garage sale at the Krafft residence just north of the pickle factory on State Road 1.

Ken and Charlene White will have a yard and porch sale at their residence at 210 Jefferson Street.

Dissent in a free society is like the cultivation of the crops in the field. A little agitation promotes growth; too much destroys the roots.

The true essence of freedom is not in the extent to which human rights are exercised; rather, it is in the restraint exercised in pursuing those rights.

The dissenters of the 1960s-70s sometimes point to Jesus Christ to justify their actions, claiming Him to be the greatest revolutionary of all time, attempting by such comparison to give a holy aura to their own ambitions. They overlook one thing: Jesus did not force Himself nor His teachings upon anyone. He spoke, surely, positively, then left the decision to His hearers. Thus did He grant to all men the freedom God created. Today's reformers could well be admonished, as in the Scriptures: "Go thou, and do likewise."

Self-discipline is a matter of courage. Anyone can do as he pleases; but it takes courage to do as one ought.

50th Wedding Anniversary Reveals "$32.67 Four-day Honeymoon"

Marion and Alice (Tustison) Peckhart will observe their 50th wedding anniversary Saturday, May 19, with a reception from 2 to 5 p.m. in the Auburn Presbyterian Church.

In providing The News with the announcement of the anniversary celebration, the Peckharts brought a copy of the May 23, 1929, issue of the St. Joe News which contained the following:

"A pretty double ring ceremony marked the marriage of Miss Alice Tustison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tustison, and Mr. Marion G. Peckhart, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Peckhart, of Auburn, which was solemnized Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock at the Lutheran church in St. Joe, with the Rev. G. D. Stoll, officiating.

"The ceremony was preceded by a short musical by Mrs. C. R. Davis, consisting of "I Love You Truly," and "O Promise Me." Mrs. Davis was accompanied by Mrs. F. B. Leighty. Mrs. Leighty also played the wedding march from Lohengrin.

"The couple was attended by Miss Gaylon Goldsmith and Carl Tustison, a brother of the bride. Little Miss Gloria Davis acted as ring-bearer. Stanley Means and Paul Tustison acted as ushers.

"A reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony, the couple leaving later on a short trip to points south.

"Upon their return they will be at home at 1003 South Van Buren St., at Auburn.

"The bride is a graduate of the St. Joe High School, and International Business College of Fort Wayne. For a few years she has been employed as stenographer for the Auburn Lumber Co. The groom is clerk in the Lumm Grocery at Auburn.

"The best wishes of their many friends go with them."

The marriage prompted the publication of a poem by Frank Carleton Nelson entitled, "To The Bridal Couple." It appeared in The News as follows:

"Now the wooing days are ended
And your souls in one are blended,
And you're ready for the journey down the road,
If you'd never known of parting,
Pause a moment, as you're starting,
And remember, each must carry half the load.

"There's a goal and you can win it,
But, just hesitate a minute,
There are ups and downs awaiting, so beware,
Through the rough and stormy weather,
You will have to pull together,
Disappoinment, doubt and trouble, you must share.

"There'll be giving, there'll be taking,
But there ne'er can be forsaking
One another, if you ever hope to win,
There'll be sorrow mixed with pleasure
If you'd know life's fullest measure,
I would warn you, as the journey you begin.

"Joys and pleasures, you must share them,
Cares and troubles, you must bear them,
They are sent to test the faith of man and wife,
They're a part of life and living,
Of receiving and of giving,
As you wander down the little lane of life.

"So, your lives are just beginning,
And your chance is fine for winning,
If together you will bravely meet the test,
May the hand of fate ne'er chide you,
But, instead, forever guide you,
And the fortunes that await you be the best."

During the visit by MM Peckhart at the News Office this week, it was apparent that they have had a good life together and that they are still literally "young at heart" despite the passing of many years. They've had fun! You can tell by the sparkle in Mrs. Peckhart's eyes!

The Peckharts' trip "south" included going to Cincinnati and Kentucky and then back home via Indianapolis.

They kept a running account of their honeymoon expenses. Here is what the trip cost (food, lodging, etc., for two in May of 1929):

'Year Of The Child' Part 2

Having expressed an opinion of disagreement recently with a Lutheran church bulletin on the "International Year of the Child," it is only fair to point out a subsequent bulletin and its comments in the matter reflecting a somewhat different outlook—or so it seems to me.

After listing the obstacles a child faces in our society of the '70's—broken homes, being a member of minority groups, alcoholism of one or both parents, being a child born out of wedlock, living in a predominantly materialistic atmosphere in which "things" have become an obsession—after pointing out these burdens faced by young people, the later bulletin says, "Those of us lucky enough to have been reared in more normal family experiences can feel truly sorry about such youngsters. . . . It is not too much to say that the strengthened family situation, where mutual love, support, consideration, patience and family sacrifice contribute to the best possible development of a child's potential, can strengthen the individual also. In some ways, family life today is stronger than ever. For that, we can rejoice. Loving parents, sisters and brothers give life a special glow."

The concluding paragraph challenges each congregation to look within itself to see if there might be a child or children for whom an extra bit of care and interest might be the difference between a life of misery or a life of hope.

I don't know if the same individual wrote both articles. I doubt it. The general approach is so different. But on the other hand, we are all contradicting ourselves from time to time, or appear to be. The problem may be, as it often is, inability to express one's views in words which will taken in the spirit in which they are said or written.

At any rate, having been very concerned in the past two decades about the "purity" of material coming from those who prepare teaching lessons and helps in the Christian world, I am assured from time to time by the appearance of thoughts which more accurately describe conditions and attitudes in our society. This later bulletin counteracts the first one in which the thought appeared to be, "As a whole, the Christian world doesn't care enough about children."

It seems to me that, in the history of the God-fearing world, EVERY year has been "The Year of the Child." If it were not so, "the family" would not be the basic unit of our Judeo-Christian society.

Local 'Basketball Camp' To Train Future 'Blazers'

The announcement of the boys' basketball camp in June and July has been augmented by the announcement of a girls' basketball camp simultaneously with the boys' camp for two weeks in June. DeKalb Eastside girls' basketball coach Val Gates will conduct the girls' camp.

Girls in grades 3, 4 and 5 will have their sessions June 4-15 from 1:00 to 2:30 p.m. Girls in grades 6, 7 and 8 will receive instruction from 2:30 to 4:00 p.m.

Registration fee and deadline is the same as for the boys.

A "Blazer Basketball Camp" will be held this summer under the direction of DeKalb Eastside head coach Rick Hudson.

There will be two sessions, one June 4-15 for grades 3, 4 and 5, the second June 18-29 for grades 6, 7 and 8. Sessions will be held in the new gym at Eastside Junior-Senior High School at Butler.

Scheduled games are set thereafter for July 2-13 for boys in grades 6, 7 and 8.

Boys in grades 3, 4 and 5 (1978-79 school year) will attend camp for two weeks, five mornings per week.

Sessions will begin at 9:30 a.m. and end at 11:30 a.m.

Boys in grades 6, 7 and 8 will attend camp for the next two weeks, also five mornings per week.

The last two weeks of the camp will be made up of an eight-game schedule against Fremont, Garrett, East Noble and Prairie Heights. This is for boys in grades 6, 7 and 8.

Every boy who has perfect attendance will be eligible to win the "perfect attendance award,"—a new basketball.

Each camper should have basketball shoes, socks and trunks or shorts. The camp T-shirt will be given to every boy on opening day.

A $10.00 pre-registration fee is used to pay for the camp T-shirt, garage-door basketball book, certificate, trophies and prizes. Registration on opening day will be $12.00.

The $10 pre-registration fee, which means a savings of $2.00, may be paid by check payable to "Blazer Basketball Camp" (c/o Rick Hudson, 606 East Main, Butler 46721). Pre-registration assures proper T-shirt size and should be mailed by May 25.

Coaches will concentrate on teaching basketball fundamentals—how to shoot a layup, a free throw and a jump shot. The boys will be instructed on playing one-on-one, two-on-two and five-on-five. Also to be taught are individual defense, team defense, rebounding, team rebounding, dribbling, passing and ball handling.

Each boy will play an equal amount of time in league games.

The innovative local basketball "camp" is being undertaken to provide a foundation on which to build teams at the upper grade levels in the future.

'Bike-A-Thon' Is Still Receiving

—by Lois Lichtsinn, local Bike-A-Thon chairman

Cancer! Prayer! Our $ and a Wheel-For-Life Bike-A-Thon. Did you help or give?

All were wet—cold—well-drenched was the word. Pleased the second Bike-A-Thon May 12 was over. Collections for a full 20 mi. ride FOR ALL will be the responsibility of riders and donors.

As it started to sprinkle riders were offered transportation and credit for 20 mi. All refused. But when that cold, drenching rain started, all but two accepted the offer and rode in trucks and cars back to St. Peter's where hot chocolate was enjoyed along with heat and warm friendship.

Two riders at 30 mi. per hr. came dripping in, they had ridden with parent or adult permission through the water—you should have seen them (pleased was the word).

The thank you gifts were given as just an enjoyed extra bonus for those people involved.

Oh, the bikes. Jim Miller's was given back to St. Jude Hospital and now to be given to a lucky person, one of 250 paying 50c for a ticket from riders wishing to sell. Thanks Jim, this money too will go for research. Ask "why prizes?" Just adds to the joy of it all, that's why!

If you have not given and feel a need to help, because of your or someone else's experience with cancer, please give money to Knisely Branch Bank at Saint Joe through the St. Jude Hospital Checking Account until June 30. At that date entire amount will be sent to St. Jude Hospital.

Cancer! The pain or joy in hearing "no it isn't" or adjustments to "yes it is." Thankfulness — pitty — fear — medication — love — operations — cured — long suffering anticipation — it's been 5 years now, you're considered cured — I'm so tired — peace — prayer — death— love — all are reactions you or some one you care about have felt concerning this Cancer. Some day someone will be given the answers for prevention. But for now, the answers that have been given are saving lives and helping when suffering is a must.

God willing, learned men and women with our support will be given more answers. Do support this research with your $ and give now! OK?

Thanks to each of you.

Fast dieting can be unsafe

Losing weight too quickly can be harmful. It can lead to ulceration of the stomach and development of gall stones within a short time. There are other possible complications, particularly if you do not exercise while dieting.

If you are overweight, you will be healthier if you reduce. But, you would be wise to consult your physician at least once before dieting to get his professional advice.

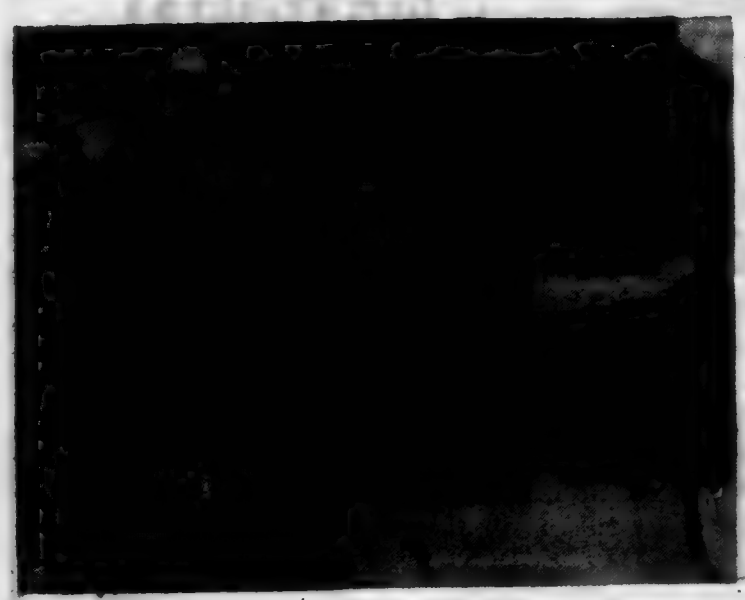
The Story Of Producing An 'Old-fashioned' Newspaper

The production of this newspaper is accomplished by the "letterpress" process. That is, the printed sheet results when "letters" (type or engravings) are "pressed" against a sheet of paper. "Letterpress" is also used to describe the production of job printing (letterheads, envelopes, statements, business cards, booklets and so on).

The actual printing, however, comes at the "end of the line" in producing printed materials. First there must be something to print. For this newspaper, that reading material comes from several sources: the editor, organizations' publicity chairmen, public relations departments in business and industry, governmental offices, and so on, not the least of which are those conscientious individuals who take it upon themselves to provide items of interest about people. The first photo shows the beginning of an editorial perhaps, as the editor writes at his desk. Often a typewriter is used rather than pen and paper, with the old, reliable "hunit and peck" system.



After the material is ready to be "set," the next step is the use of the linotype, shown in the second photo. The machine utilizes molten lead at a temperature of around 560 degrees. The keyboard is not in the same pattern as a typewriter keyboard, so an adjustment in "thinking" is subconsciously made in pushing the linotype keys. Each letter of the alphabet, both upper case and lower, plus numbers, plus punctuation marks, has its own "channel." Pushing a key releasing one "matrix," or "mat" as is used in an abbreviation. The mats and "space bands" (which provide the break between words) drop into an assembler which is then lifted by lever to transfer to a second "elevator" which drops the line of type into "jaws." A mold containing a space corresponding to the length of line desired makes contact with the "mats," a plunger is pushed by a cam and spring combination to squirt molten lead into the chamber, the lead "sets" immediately, the "mats" are delivered by a third "elevator" to to distributor box which releases the "mats" one at a time, the "mats" travel along a bar which has an ingenious system of beginnings and endings of graduations which allow the "mats" to drop in their proper channels for re-use. A "full" "magazine" of mats numbers some 1,200 of the miniature molds.

For this paper, each line sent through for casting contains roughly $30-worth of mats and space bands. Therefore it is necessary to keep the linotype, old as it is, in proper adjustment to prevent damage to mats and spacebands.

Also used in preparing for the production of this newspaper is "hand-set" type, the larger type seen in the headlines and in the advertisements. The third photo shows a "composing stick" which can be adjusted according to the length of line desired. Individual characters have their little niche in type drawers. After the actual printing is completed, the type is "thrown" back into the drawers.

After the type for a particular issue is set, it is assembled ("makeup") in a "chase," a steel frame which holds the type in place in the press. The fourth photo shows the placing of linotype "slugs" into a column space. Just below ye ed's right hand is an engraving that was made for an advertisement for General Telephone Company. Such engravings, and the engravings of the pictures accompanying this article, are obtained elsewhere. At the left are the ads of Auburn Motor Sales and Knisely National Bank. A full "chase" for the printing of this newspaper weighs some 80 pounds or so.

"Lock-up" is the next step shown in the photos. The chases are carried from the make-up table to the newspaper press and placed in proper position to achieved balanced centering on the printed sheet.

The "old-fashioned" method of hand-feeding newsprint into the press is illustrated in the next picture. An impression is made by the press on every other revolution of the cylinder on which the sheet is carried. This allows for delivery of the now-printed sheet onto "tapes" which carry the sheet to the opposite end of the press. The next blank sheet is grabbed by "fingers" coordinated with the rotation of the cylinder. Each sheet is hand-fed into "guides" to insure uniformity of printing.

Another indication of the "old-fashioned" way of producing this paper is shown in the next photo. Papers are folded by hand, whether it be a four-page issue or an occasional eight-page issue. A mechanical folder at the delivery end of the newspaper press can be coordinated with the delivery of papers by the press. However, it has been used in the past only for eight-page papers. The folder is now no longer in use even for eight-page issues due to the lighter-weight newsprint now available. Light weight newsprint will not lie flat on delivery.

The final step in publishing this paper is addressing, wrapping and bundling. Another illustration of the "old-fashioned way" is shown as the papers are hand-stamped before delivery to the post office.

There you have it—the story of the production of a small-town weekly newspaper which is still locally and independently owned (a rarity these days), still using methods prevailing decades ago. Each copy of each issue is literally "hand-made," including this very page you are now reading.

The editor's philosophy: "It's not how you do it or how big the paper is. It's what's in it that counts."

AROUND THE TOWN—Ye Ed

Hey—I saw a passenger train go through town late Wednesday afternoon—no kidding. It only had three cars in it and they looked suspiciously like company-use cars. But they WERE passenger cars.

On second thought, with all the trouble Amtrak has been having, it musta been one of their trains—got lost and got off on the wrong track!

I had to smile a few times last week. The van which picks up and returns senior citizens who go to the Heimach Center in Auburn passed the shop those few times. Since there is no residence on Railroad Street east of The News' office, it appeared the swing past the office, then back to the main drag was deliberate to let me see how many were taking advantage of the van.

Of course, I might be wrong. If I am, then I'm overly-sensitive. If I'm not — — I got the message, Sandy!

Elmer Logsdon gave Betty Brown the information and she passed it along to me—that Sgt. Harry S. Logsdon recently sufferd 10 bone fractures in a parachute accident in Argentina. His address is: Sgt. Harry S. Logsdon, Dwight D. Eisenhower AMC, Ward 11 West, Room 1112-A, Fort Gordon, Georgia 30905.

Preserve the Covered Bridge??? June 5

County highway superintendent Wally Graham has extended an invitation to Spencerville residents and other interested parties to attend a meeting to be held Tuesday, June 5, at the Community Club Building in Spencerville.

The purpose of the meeting is to discuss with the county commissioners the matter of the maintenance of the Spencerville covered bridge after a new county bridge is built across the St. Joseph River just south of the present bridge site.

Due to the old bridge's load limitations, a $half-million project has been proposed in which new county road right-of-way will be obtained to provide access to a new bridge.

Mr. Graham said the cost of the project would be covered by a federal grant of $400,000 with the remaining $100,000 to be paid by the county.

The old bridge was built in 1873 and is the only covered bridge to be found in northern Indiana. A covered bridge just south of Saint Joe was torn down and replaced with a new bridge several years ago. Another covered bridge near Hamilton was destroyed by vandals' fire several years ago.

There was still another covered bridge south of Garrett a few years ago. It was moved to make room for a new bridge and a group of citizens planned to relocate it nearby for historic preservation. However, the money needed to carry out the project could not be raised and the bridge was sold. It reportedly now stands somewhere in southern Indiana.

While the Spencerville bridge does not face dismantling, it does present the problem of upkeep. This expense must be assumed by someone or some group after the new bridge is in use. Approaches to the old bridge will be blocked to prevent vehicular use. But the bridge will be open for pedestrian traffic.

Certain comments heard locally about the matter indicate there may be some misunderstanding in the minds of some people as to just what is involved, such as cost, liability and so on. Therefore, the June 5 meeting is an important one in getting an accurate message to those in the community interested in preserving the old bridge.

Fire....Almost

What might have been a disastrous fire was averted Thursday evening when ..... Thacker and ..... Slaughter saw smoke coming from the rear storage section of the local hardware.

Ralphine Robinson reports that she and husband Joe were interrupted at suppertime by the two boys who said, "The hardware's on fire!" The Robinsons live across the street from the hardware and Mrs. Robinson is a part-time employee at the store.

Since the store is closed after noon Thursdays, there was no one in the store. Harold Yeiser was summoned with snips to break a lock and Mr. Robinson snuffed the fire in smoldering studs. A piece of rope hanging on the wall had burned halfway up its length.

Sectional Starts

The high school baseball sectional begins Monday at DeKalb Central High School wth the host school facing DeKalb Eastside at noon. East Noble and Leo play at 2 p.m.

Tuesday's game at 4 p.m. is between Hamilton and Garrett.

Saturday, June 2, Angola plays the winner of the first game at 10 a.m. with the winners of the second and third games playing at noon.

The championship game will be played at 4 p.m. the same Saturday.

Pastor Billow In 26th Year

Lost in the shuffle, unfortunately, at the News Office early in March was a letter about an anniversary observance of one of Saint Joe's former residents now serving in the ministry.

The letter was from Concordia College at Seward, Nebraska, which announced the observance of 25 years in the ministry of Rev. William D. Billow. The observance was in the form of a worship service of thanksgiving and praise held in St. John Lutheran Church in Seward. There was also a reception at the conclusion of the service for appropriate presentations recognizing Pastor Bill's service to his Lord and the church. The observance was held March 25.

After completing his seminary work in 1954, Pastor Bill and his wife, the former Doris Pretorius, went into missionary work in Japan. Serving five-year stints with a year break in between to return home, the couple remained in the mission field until two years ago when they went to Concordia College. During those years their own family was born and grew.

The Billows' present address is 312 Shannon Road, Seward, Nebraska 68434.

School Board

Some administrative changes were made by the DeKalb eastern school board at its meeting Monday night.

Rex Bolinger, who has been athletic director for the past year, was named an assistant high school principal.

The board also voted to employ a full-time principal at the Riverdale Elementary School. Charles Ray has been serving as principal for both the Riverdale and Butler elementary schools. Reinstatement of the additional full-time principal position was made to meet state minimum requirements and district service needs.

Interviews are still in progress to name a new high school principal.

Junior-senior high school textbooks were adopted for the period July 1, 1979, to June 30, 1984, in the area of social studies.

Teacher resignations were accepted from Florence Weaver, Riverdale special education; Nancy Pitzer, Riverdale second grade; and Gail Bratton, Eastside vocal music.

It was announced that the Riverdale summer library program will be held Wednesday afternoons from 1 to 4 p.m., from June 4 to August 1.

Open House Cut Short By Rain

Saint Joe's second annual "open house" was a success—until the rains came shortly after noon. It wasn't a heavy or long rainfall, just enough to chase everyone home or indoors for a while.

Wanda Coburn and Shirley Mack report that they didn't sell as many hot dogs as last year, a psecial on the menu for the day. But they were busy along with Sheila Thacker and Beverly Mansfield in serving all types of food orders during the morning and at noon.

Winner of the lady's watch given at the restaurant was Sharon Fitzcharles. The man's watch was won by Larry Gettys.

Kay Smith reports that her Family Cuts and Curls sidewalk sale was a success. Winners of $10 gift certificates include Ann Emerick, Vicki Gengnagel, Tina Miller, Judy Powell, Jodi Shull, Florence Scott, Doris Yeiser, Barbie Sayer, Carol Loucks and Bea Carlson.

—And their grab-bags went like hot-cakes.

Bita General Store had pennants flying out front for its sidewalk sale items and was doing all right until being chased inside by the rain, one time momentarily during a little sprinkle, then permanently with a bit heavier fall of rain.

Drawing winners were Dixie Harter of Saint Joe ("Pizzaria"), Sandi Voirol of Rome City (cookie press) and Carrie Mason of Saint Joe ("Big Snoopie"). 24 more smaller prizes went to the kids.

Betty Brown reports that the hardware was busy all morning—then the rains came. Fern "Hopalong" Carr helped by serving refreshments to hardware customers.

Local Girl Scouts had a bake sale in front of St. Mark Lutheran Church and apparently sold all their baked goods.

The News Office had outside music going through the morning. And the winner of its prize, a 95-year-old edition of the paper, was won by Mrs. Willard Maxwell.

—And there ware the yard and garage sales.

TO THE EDITOR—

Dear Ted:

We are late in expressing ourselves, but I and the members of the Administrative Board of the Spencerville United Methodist Church wish to thank you for your news article in promotion of our annual church auction, April 21. The auction netted over $1000 for the church and we are grateful to you for your part in making it a success. Your community mindedness is a valuable asset in making St. Joe-Spencerville a better place to live.

Yours in Christ,

Youth League Readies New Kids' Diamond

The Youth League is on the move!

This active group of adults who supervise Little League and Pony League baseball plus girls' softball is now working on the installation of an additional ball diamond adjacent to the present Riverdale School diamond. Work began last weekend with the installation of steel pipe for backstop use.

Terry Bosserman provided the welding expertise with Tony Beard and Dave Edgar giving assistance, according to Duane Voirol, president of the Youth League.

Then Tuesday evening Jay Loy on the town tractor provided his labor in moving excess dirt from the infield area of the new diamond. Jerry Vinson and Larry Emenhiser were also at the site in the discussion with the league president about the installation of chain link fence at the backstop and along the base lines.

The group has had an estimate of $1,800 for one particular type of fence installation but is "shopping around" to see if some dollars can be saved.

With the installation of another ball diamond, the Riverdale area now has more centralized recreational facilities than most other small communities. There are the two diamonds at the school, the lighted diamond nearby and the tennis courts at the school which also have facilities for basketball.

—And, there is a diamond at the Vulcraft plant.

Wasted Newsprint And Money

There were some Saint Joe local and rural folks who were understandably miffed at receiving two copies of last week's issue, one their regular subscriber's copy, the other a sample copy.

The duplication is not one that I wanted. It was forced by the regulations established by the U.S. Postal Department, apparently many years ago.

In seeking to let everyone in the community know about our town "open house," I resorted to the sample copy. But regulations require that sample copies be sent to EVERY boxholder, including regular subscribers.

In the past, I provided only enough sample copies needed to fill the boxes of those who are not regular subscribers. Our postmaster, now and in the past several years, cooperated in the spirit of the thing and did not demand the "full coverage" called for by postal regulations. But it reached the point where the present postmaster no longer could take a chance on being "caught" in an "illegal" practice. He was forced to demand that I provide full coverage on samples.

This is a good illustration of the failure of the postal system to rely on the judgment of local employees who have better first-hand knowledge of what is involved in actual practice. Rules and regulations are established and enforced by those miles and miles away from the situation.

The situation also illustrates how the government creates wastefulness and adds to the cost of doing business. With newsprint hard to get for my particular operation and with the cost of the newsprint a significant item in publishing this paper, it is totally unreasonable to demand that around 250 more papers be printed and distributed in this small rural community than are needed. What I am now forced to do is WASTE newsprint in order to conform to the postal department's regulation on sample copy distribution. I am forced to pay the postage on those wasted papers. And I rub some people the wrong way when they get a sample copy of a paper they already support with their subscription—and I don't blame them for their upset.

A few years ago I sent sample copies once a month because there was some information in this paper that people in this part of the county were not getting elsewhere. However, with the increase in postage rates for publications sent under second class rates (newspapers, magazines, etc.), sample copies have become a costly item, especially when the 10% allotment at the pound rate is surpassed.

I realize I am "living in the past." I am still thinking in terms of human judgment exercised by those with whom I have direct contact. Instead, I should be thinking in terms of computers and regulations geared to big operations. I should be more "businesslike" in my way of doing things.

Or should I ?? This is still a small community. Yes, we have more people here and in the surrounding area than we had 10, 20 and 30 years ago. But we are still a small community. And the beauty of small communities always has been the personal touch evident in the way local businesses deal with the public, generally speaking. (Maybe "deal" is the wrong word; "cooperate" is better.)

That cooperation has meant treating customers with sincere and honest consideration and understanding, especially when some unexpected circumstance may come up and a bill can't be paid on time, or doing some small but needed service and saying "forget it" when asked, "How much?"

This newspaper has been using the mails for almost one hundred years. It has enjoyed the small town understanding and cooperation of the postmasters who served here through the years. There is no reason in the world why it should be forced to abide by "big-time" attitudes and outlooks reflected by the demand for absolute conformity to certain regulations. Why can't the postmaster be trusted by the powers that be in Washington to know best how to serve local customers? Why must small communities be forced to change their character when there are millions in the larger metropolitan areas who wish they could find the same "folksy" relationships where they live as are found in a small community such as ours?

Why should a small town newspaper be forced to waste precious newsprint (thus waste a product of our natural resources) by a regulation mandating the distribution of unneeded copies? Why should a small town newspaper be forced to pay ever-increasing postage rates (there is another one due in July for publishers)? Workers get automatic cost-of-living pay increases; we get automatic cost-of-mailing increases!

What I was forced to do last week, in my effort to inform people in our own local community of a small town "happening," represents an unjustified additional expense and a waste of newsprint. It is ironic. At the same time that the President of the United States and other high officials are pleading with the public not to be wasteful of one natural resource (petroleum), the postal department is demanding that a small town newspaper waste another product of our natural resources (newsprint) through a regulation which forces the newspaper to print more papers than it needs!

Tornado Info

(from Steve Monroe, public relations director for the Saint Joe-Concord Township Volunteer Fire Department)

This year as in the past, the Saint Joe-Concord Township Fire Department will be involved in somewhat of a tornado preparedness program for this community. When DeKalb County is under an official tornado warning, the department is notified. During this warning, fire trucks are stationed at strategic locations in the town and township. This serves two purposes. It eliminates the possibility of all the fire fighting equipment being destroyed if a tornado should hit the fire station; and it gives several different viewpoints from which to watch for tornadoes so that there is greater opportunity for advance warning of an approaching tornado.

When a tornado is sighted and confirmed in this area, the fire siren emits a steady tone for a three-minute period. If the siren is sounded for three minutes, residents should take immediate action to find safe shelter.

The Riverdale School gym is equipped with a fallout shelter which can be used as a tornado shelter. During a tornado warning, the gym will be opened and the shelter made available for people in the community. This shelter is especially helpful for residents of mobile homes or for those whose homes do not have a basement. However, everyone is encouraged to use the school shelter.

It is required that if you come to the gym, you must proceed directly into the shelter and stay there util the firemen stationed there indicate it is safe to leave. The shelter is below ground level and is safer than the gym itself.

It is important to note that the warning system has been changed. In the past, two three-minute soundings of the fire siren were used. The first indicated conditions existed which could cause a tornado, the second indicated a tornado sighting and residents should seek shelter.

Under the new warning system, only one three-minute sounding of the siren is used, and it means "take cover!"

Activity Sets Air Need

—from the American Lung Association of Northeast Indiana)

Breathing is the act of life. But how we breathe varies enormously.

According to the American Lung Association, we normally inhale and exhale about 10 to 15 times a minute, whenever we sit quietly. After a minute, we've gone through five quarts of air.

Some people take in less air per breath, but they breathe more often. Others breathe less often but more deeply.

If you deliberately try to inhale more slowly, an automatic adjustment takes place. You take deeper breaths. Conversely, if you start inhaling much faster, each breath becomes more shallow. Either way, you still take in about five quarts of air, which is all your body needs when it's not exercising.

The situation is totally different during exercise. From five quarts a minute, the lungs take in 125 quarts as soon as you run.

If you climb a mountain, you have to inhale more air to keep supplying the same amount of oxygen to your body; the air has less oxygen the higher up you go, so you inhale faster.

Breathing patterns fluctuate wildly during sleep, especially during the rapid eye-movement period—and during stress or excitement or panic.

However, most of the time we're simply not aware of our breathing, day or night. Whenever we are aware of labored uncomfortable breathing, it can be a sign of trouble. Shortness of breath is expected after exercise or exertion. But normal shortness of breath disappears after a few minutes' rest.

Whenever you realize that you are decidedly more short of breath than you used to be, it's time to consult a doctor. Shortness of breath after little or no exertion is never normal —regardless of your age, your "out of condition" state or your general way of life.

Keep water safe

During the summer season, people take to the water in large numbers, and accident figures reflect it. Swimming pools and beaches are fun, of course, but can be hazardous to the careless or unwary. Note drownings, jellyfish stings, cuts from glass, eye abrasions from windblown sand — all may require a physician's treatment.

Everyone, especially children, should be aware of proper safety rules. Young children should never be permitted to swim unsupervised, no matter how well they claim to be able to swim.

Penalty Change Under New Code

DeKalb County Prosecuting Attorney Kirk Carpenter has issued a "Penalty Chart" indicating the penalties to be imposed for various violations of the law. It is as follows:

PENALTY CHART

Classes of offenses—Under the new penal code, there will be 10 classes of offenses; 5 classes of felonies (including murder, which is in a separate class); 2 classes of misdemeanors; and 3 classes of infractions. The infraction represents a new concept in Indiana law; it is a non-criminal offense for which a fine but not imprisonment may be imposed.

Following are the classes; the range of imprisonment terms; and fines which the trial court may impose. All terms of imprisonment are determinate, i.e., fixed by the court.

*Murder—death or 40 years (plus 20 or minus 10) (30-60) — $10,000.

*Class A felony—30 years (plus 20 or minus 10) (20-50)—$10,000.

*Class B felony—10 years (plus 10 or minus 4) (6-20)—$10,000.

*Class C felony—5 years (plus 3 or minus 3) (2-8)—$10,000.

*Class D felony—2 years (plus 2) (2-4)—$10,000.

Class A misdemeanor—0-1 year— $5,000.

Class B misdemeanor—0-180 days—$1,000.

Class A infraction—none—$10,000.

Class B infraction—none—$1,000.

Class C infraction—none—$500.

*Note: in the 4 felony classes, the court has discretion to increase (if it finds statutory aggravating circumstances) or to decrease (if it finds statutory mitigating circumstances) the term of imprisonment. The numbers above in parentheses represent the extent of judicial discretion in either direction. Also, the death penalty may be imposed in certain murder cases, which are also specified in the statute.

Past Officers

The Past Officers Club of DeKalb County met at Richard's Restaurant May 3. 16 members and one guest were present.

Harriett Oberlin was the guest speaker She told of her varied and exciting experiences in Australia in 1976. She went there to replace opals in an heirloom ring.

Mrs. Harlan Moore of Auburn gave devotions.

Mrs. Forrest Bevington of Saint Joe will be president of the club for 1979-80.

The program committee was Mrs. Bevington, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. John Grogg of Garrett and Mrs. Shugart and Mrs. Harding of Auburn.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

Though we had no Memorial Day program at Saint Joe, the cemetery here really looked nice, thanks to Robyn Loy who had the grass mowed in time for visitors to place their decorations on graves Sunday.

And veterans' graves were marked by small American flags fluttering in the light breezes.

That new Little League diamond is taking shape. Posts are in place and fencing will be installed. Though there is a slight rise on the first base side of the infield, it's not really enough to detract from the diamond as a whole. It should make a very nice addition to recreational facilities for kids in the Riverdale area.

The Youth League adults are putting forth a lot of effort to get the project completed and the baseball season under way.

Lavon Hart and son, Lynn, showed up at the Church League diamond Monday afternoon with an antique grader, pulled by a tractor. It may be an old piece of machinery, but it does a good job in leveling the diamond.

Lavon drove the tractor and Lynn got "broken in" on grading by manipulating the two wheels which control the height of the blade. I made an excuse not to get the job — it's time some of the younger bucks get their feet wet on maintaining the diamond. Lynn did a good job — with Father running the tractor and calling advice as the two worked the infield.

When the diamond is wet, kids just CAN'T stay off the field, putting bicycle tracks and footprints every which way, necessitating quite a bit of work to smooth things out.

Mack-Tatro

A double-ring ceremony at Concord United Methodist Church Saturday, May 26, united in marriage Kenneth John Mack and Tammy Marie Tatro. Rev. Russell Tague led the vows.

Parents of the couple are MM Tom Mack of R1 Saint Joe and MM S. E. Tatro of R1 Auburn.

The newlyweds are 1978 graduates of DeKalb Eastside High School. Kenny is attending Great Lakes Bible College in preparation for special ministry. Tammy will also attend Great Lakes in preparation for similar ministry. She had been a student elsewhere the past year.

Deeann Dowden served as matron of honor and Patty Smith was bridesmaid.

Lyle Sawvel was best man and Bill Brown was groom's attendant. "P.J." Mack was ring bearer and Vicki Tatro was flower girl. Stanley Mack and Mark Tatro were ushers.

A reception was held at Coburn Corners Church of Christ with Kathy Mack registering the guests.

After a honeymoon trip to Michigan, the couple reside at Hicksville until leaving for the fall term of school at the Bible college.

Tornado Info

(from Steve Monroe, public relations director for the Saint Joe-Concord Township Volunteer Fire Department)

IN CITIES OR TOWNS—

Seek inside shelter, preferably in a tornado cellar, underground excavation or a steel-framed or reinforced concrete building of substantial construction. Stay away from windows!

In office buildings—stand in an interior hallway on a lower floor, preferably in the basement.

In factories—on receiving a tornado warning, post a lookout. Workers should move quickly to sections of the plant offering the greatest protection in accordance with advance plans.

In homes—the corner of the basement toward the tornado usually offers the greatest safety. In a house with no basement, take cover under heavy furniture in the center part of the house. Keep some windows open, but stay away from them!

IN SCHOOLS—

Go to storm cellar or underground excavation if available. If there is no storm cellar but building is of reinforced construction, stay inside, away from windows. Whenever possible, go to an interior hallway on the lowest floor. Avoid auditoriums and gymnasiums with large poorly supported roofs.

If a building is not of reinforced construction, go quickly to a nearby reinforced building, or to a ravine or open ditch and lie flat.

IN OPEN COUNTRY—

Move away from the tornado's path at a right angle. If there is no time to escape, lie flat in the nearest depression, such as a ditch or ravine.

SAINT JOE'S WARNING—

It is important to note that the warning system has been changed. In the past, two three-minute soundings of the fire siren were used. The first indicated conditions existed which could cause a tornado, the second indicated a tornado sighting and residents should seek shelter.

Under the new warning system, only one three-minute sounding of the siren is used, and it means "take cover!" (Next issue: Additional tornado safety tips)

Parents! Kids! Mark your calendar!

The dates for Vacation Bible School at St. Mark Lutheran Church in Saint Joe are August 5 through August 17.

Our theme is "I love to tell the story." We have an exciting program planned with lessons, crafts, games and surprizes for all. There will be classes for nursery through 6th grade.

Don't miss this opportunity to learn of God's word and love.

See you there—don't forget the dates!

Did you know

—that Mark Tatro and Kenneth Bartlett were injured slightly in a two-car accident at the Coburn Corners intersection Saturday during the Mack-Tatro wedding reception. The other car involved was from Antwerp, Ohio.

—that Wendell Hose of R1 Butler and Lynette Longnecker of R3 Sumner, Illinois, were married April 14 at the Cullen Avenue Christian Church in Evansville.

—that Indiana University plant scientist Albert Ruesink says, "You can't have your gasahol and eat your corn, too." He says it takes 300 calories of energy to put 100 calories on the American dinner table—in making the point that food production requires a large amount of fuel.

—that between Riverdale Principal Charles Ray and Superintendent Charles Hampel, new tennis nets have been installed at the Riverdale tennis courts. There is the possibility that the playing surface may be "sealed" this summer. —No, they aren't holding the nets up; they were responsible for GETTING the nets.

—that a party effort for "equality of the sexes" is causing the national Democrat organization some problems. Last year the party said selection of delegates for the 1980 national convention must "provide for equal division between delegate men and women." A party committeeman from Louisiana says state parties have been "going bananas" trying to live up to the rule and now face the possibility that their degelates might be thrown out due to the party's affirmative action programs for minorities.

—that fading plans for a county humane shelter apparently were brightened by a meeting May 24 at Auburn. There were promises of help from some 45 supporters and community leaders. The county humane society has raised $7,000 and the county government has donated $15,000. The society has decided to go ahead with plans to build a shelter on a three-acre tract on US6 between Waterloo and Butler, the site of what had been a rest park. It was donated to the society by the county commissioners. The effort was given a significant "push" by Auburn Mayor Jack Sanders. The primary objective of the shelter is to provide the means for exercising control of stray dogs. While part of the duty of law enforcement officers is protecting the public, those officers have generally been reluctant to extend that protection to the picking up of stray dogs because of other "more important" police matters.

—that —that the county courthouse will be completely rewired at a cost of $34,889.

—that a two-truck accident at Newville Thursday of last week hospitalized Terry Dermott of R1 Saint Joe with multiple cuts. Gary Gerken of Paulding, Ohio, driver of the second truck, refused treatment for a cut knee.

—that Indiana State Trooper Lester Carpenter has retired after serving on the state police force 20 years. He will become an investigator for the DeKalb County prosecutor and part-time adult probation officer beginning June 1.

—that the Indiana Federation of Republican Women will hold its 22nd biennial convention in Indianapolis June 6.

—that Tom and Shirley Mack observed their wedding anniversary Memorial Day, May 30.

—that Julie Mishler had a party Sunday but when it got out of hand—in numbers, that is—the party moved to the Tom Mack residence. There were 40 to 50 people present.

—that Harvey Carr of Saint Joe returned home Monday after surgery at the Lutheran Hospital in Fort Wayne.

—that the catalytic converter evidently overheated on a car driven by Terry Pinnington of R1 Auburn, causing the engine to catch fire. Pinnington pulled off County Road 4A north of Butler and fell asleep with the engine running. A passer-by pulled the man from his car and Pinnington was then hospitalized for burns.

—that a "pass-kit campaign" by the Kidney Foundation of Indiana will soon lead an effort for renewed life for someone with a latal disease. The campaign includes asking residents to make more transplants possible by signing one of the donor cards.

—that Private Cindy Tittle, whose husband, William, resides in Auburn, recently was assigned to the 125th Air Traffic Control Battalion in Seoul, Korea.

—that auctioneer Dean Kruse has had his license returned to him by order of Marion County Superior Court Judge Betty Bearteau, until the court can review the Indiana Auctioneer Commission's actions in revoking the license recently. And he has also filed suit against the commission for its action.

—that a census of bald eagles in the 48 contiguous states in January shows there are 9,836 of them, twice as many as have been counted in the past. More efficient census procedures are said to be the reason for the high count.

—that the annual meeting of the annual Area III Council On Aging will be held Saturday, June 9, at Lakeland High School. There will be lots of entertainment and a cookie contest. The $5 cost includes lunch and transportation if it is needed.

—that journalism professional education at Ball State University has received national accreditation by the American Council on Education for Journalism.

—that the Bureau of the Census is attempting to round up reports from farm households for the 1978 Census of Agriculture. Some farmers and ranchers have not turned in their reports.

—that country music entertainers to appear at the state fair August 16-26 include Kenny Rogers, Barbara Mandrell and The Oak Ridge Boys.

—that research funds amounting to $1 million are earmarked for gasahol in 1980 by the House appropriations subcommittee on agriculture, according to the Indiana Farm Bureau information department.

—that Purdue University is now experimenting with farm use of solar energy, other than the sun shining on the corn.

Keep water safe

During the summer season, people take to the water in large numbers, and accident figures reflect it. Swimming pools and beaches are fun, of course, but can be hazardous to the careless or unwary. Near drownings, jellyfish stings, cuts from glass, eye abrasions from windblown sand — all may require a physician's treatment.

Everyone, especially children, should be aware of proper safety rules. Young children should never be permitted to swim unsupervised, no matter how well they claim to be able to swim.

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

Sometimes you can't win.

Bob and Ruth Stiver make a 1,000-mile trip back home from Florida, have no problems—until they're only seven miles from home, and they get rammed in the rear at Leo.

Monday night, after attending the town board meeting, I hopped on Mark's bike and rode down to the ball diamond.

The first game was over and the teams for the second game were warming up. I watched for a few minutes, and then turned around to head for home. As I rode away from the diamond toward the Church of Christ, I could see everywhere. Our new church league lights are efficient in lighting the diamond, yet they also light up every yard nearby.

The Vacation Bible School of the Church of Christ was just getting out. As I rode past, there was the hustle and bustle of parents looking for kids, kids looking for parents and cars, and just general joyful sounds of people, young and old.

Some day they will remember the past, including ball games and Bible School, and they will have found the pleasure of memories.

But I don't have to wait to remember; I already have the memory—of Monday night and the many other nights—and days—involving activities in the community.

It was one of those rewarding moments that come with living in a small town.

There are no words to adequately describe what I felt in that moment—it's more than joy—it's more than pleasure—it's — — — well — I — just — felt — good — — real — good.

Enlists In 'Guard'

Approximately 40 people attended a going-away reception for Mark Bartell, son of MM Martin Bartell of Saint Joe. The reception was held at St. Mark Lutheran Church.

Mark, a student at DeKalb Eastside High School, has enlisted in the National Guard. He leaves this week for Fort Dix, New Jersey, for seven weeks of basic combat training. After that he will return home and will attend National Guard meetings at Angola until he graduates next year, after which he will return to active duty.

His enlistment is for a period of six years.

'43 Get-together

—Mary Ellen Beaty, reporter

The Class of 1943 of St. Joe High School enjoyed a delicious supper at Gotfreid's in Garrett Saturday night, June 2.

Those attending the get-together included MM Pete Akey; MM Ivan Brown; MM Roger Hadley; MM Ralph Hose; MM Loren Inlow; MM Walter Fetters; MM Hubert Bleeks; MM Harold Keller; MM Franklyn Sechler; MM Harry Strong; MM Bob Wappes; Mrs. Mike Beaty; and Mr. Roscoe Moore.

We were very pleased to have MM Ed Green of Canton, Ohio (friends of Pete and Gladys Akey); and Dorine Singer who played the accordion, with us. Songs were sung, teachers were remembered, as were many school day happenings.

Another supper is planned for next year, plus a reunion.

Letters.....

Dear Mr. Haberkorn,

Thank you for the nice letter. We always enjoy hearing from our listeners, and its good to know that we are reaching people from all walks of life.

Incidentally, you might be interested to know that we consider WIFF to be one of our best affiliates. We work with 37 different radio stations, and the one in Auburn is run in a very cooperative and professional manner. I'm sure that your son is proud to be a member of that staff.

Thanks and best wishes,

Harry Martin

The above response came when we wrote to ask for a free bumper sticker from Mr. Martin's "Rural Radio Network." The sticker says: "Farmers are the roots of America." The farm program is heard on WIFF between 11:30 a.m. and noon. —Ed.

Congress of the United States

Dear Mr. Haberkorn:

In the past, you have expressed to me your concern in legislation that would initiate public financing of Congressional elections. I am taking this time to bring you up-to-date on recent action taken on H.R. 1.

I am pleased to inform you that the House Administration Committee rejected 17-8 legislation that would institute taxpayer financing of Congressional elections. In the words of the Committee Chairman Frank Thompson, H.R. 1 "is probably dead for this Congress." As you know, I have continually opposed this legislation because it would have increased government spending, given protection to incumbents, and it would not have decreased the influence of special interests. I believe that the Committee has acted in the best interests of the public by defeating this measure.

I appreciated your previous comments on this issue. Do not hesitate to let me know of any other issues that are of concern to you. Your thoughts and suggestions are always welcome.

With best wishes, I am,

Sincerely,
Dan Quayle
Member of Congress

A word of warning to readers: The June 6, 1979, issue of the Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette contains a lead editorial which supports H.R. 1 (government financing of Congressional elections through public tax money "checkoffs"). The editorial suggests that such legislation, though rejected in committee, might be tacked onto other legislation as a rider. It also contains the statement that "polls show a majority of the American people favor a ban on private contributions to congressional races. . . ." That statement conflicts with Congressman Quayle's poll results and a poll of independent business, the latter showing 71% in opposition to public-financed elections. —Ed.

Dear Ted,

Your recent editorial on the realignment of the English language was one of the finest editorials that you have written. As a public speaker, I am constantly tripped up by people saying that I must be a "sexist" or "Chauvinist" because I use "chairman" instead of "chairperson." But I am most dismayed by the fact that daily the list of unacceptable sexist words grows longer and longer. There is irony in the fact that up till five years ago you seldom, if ever, heard the words sexist and chauvinist. Great new cuss words, in my way of thinking.

I for one am extremely concerned about the situation. I hold in my hand a copy of an LCA (Lutheran Church in America) publication listing words which are purportedly sexist and therefore should not be used. After finishing this note to you, the LCA handbook goes in the round file called "wastebasket." Is "wastebasket" still an acceptable word? Excuse me for digressing. What now concerns me is that common base, our language, is being fuzzed so that people will no longer hear one another's ideas. They hear the word "chairman" for instance in a sermon and hear nothing else, clinging only on your "incorrect" use of the word. It is very acceptable for people to disagree with my ideas; but to disagree with my words about my ideas puts me in double jeopardy. Do you suppose that some have gone so far as to come up with a non-sexist edition of the Bible where Jesus calls himself the Son of Personhood rather than Son of Man?

Once again, a personal dig at the Church. There was a certain amount of furor over deletion of the hymn "Rise up, oh men of God" because it was "sexist." Can you imagine singing, "Rise up, oh persons of God"? The only way you could sing that is to add another note. Go ahead, try to sing just those words. You will note in the new hymnal, or is it "personal," that we saved the song by now singing, "Rise up, oh saints of God." Well that's fine for the beat, but once again the meaning has been radically altered.

Idiocy. Take a moment with this problem. What do you call a woman who carries mail? A letter carrier, is the answer. But wait a moment, everyone I know still calls that person a "mailman." But you can't do that, that's "sexist." Okay, what we have here then is a mailwoman. No that doesn't sound right. How about a mailfemale. That certainly doesn't make it. How about a female mailman. That's degrading because it implies that this mailman is an anomie, a freak of profession. So we call her a letter carrier. Ah, but what if she doesn't carry letters, but delivers them from a vehicle on her rural route? Well, that's for the folks who messed this all up to figure out.

Ted, you and I are males, we've got it made say some. Maybe they are right. Of course, there are certain problems with our language, but that problem is rooted in the societal structure itself. The language is the effect, not the cause. It's like using a squirt gun to put out a forest fire. And I suspect there will be tremendous, or "trepersondous," repercussions over this matter.

Finally, I am reminded of Genesis 11 where people were all of one language. They sought to make themselves gods. Our Lord was pretty shrewd. All he had to do was confuse their language and that was the end of society. When the men and women of Babel came down off their high horses, they received their language again. How stupid can man be to undo God's handiwork. Well, we've been doing just that since creation. And I suspect. we'll never change. That's just one man's opinion.

140 At Camp!

Rick Hudson, head basketball coach at DeKalb Eastside High School, stopped in at the News Office Tuesday after the day's summer recreation activity at Riverdale and said that 140 boys and girls from the elementary and junior high schools are participating in the current basketball "camp" at the high school in Butler.

He is greatly encouraged by the interest shown in the program. It was undertaken in order to lay a foundation of fundamentals on which to build high school teams of the future.

Of particular significance is the fact that almost as many girls are attending the camp, under girls' varsity coach Val Gates, as there are boys under Coach Hudson.

Following the series of local sessions in which every student gets to participate, there will be a series of games for the boys against other similar age groups from schools in the area.

Kidney Project Uses 'Pass-kit'

Paul F. Post of Auburn, a kidney transplant recipient currently serving as DeKalb County Clerk, has been named chairman for the Kidney Foundation of Indiana's pass-kit campaign in DeKalb County.

The "pass-kit" is designed to inform rural residents about the problems of kidney disease. It is the rural counterpart to urban door-to-door campaigns.

Each pass-kit contains a supply of informational literature and Uniform Donor Cards, individual contribution envelopes and a list of names. The person receiving the kit passes it to the next name on the list, and so on. The last person on the list returns the kit to the Auburn State Bank, depository for the campaign, in the self-addressed return mailer. Kits were mailed June 1.

Mr. Post explained, "The pass-kit saves time and money so more of the contributors' dollar goes toward life-saving Kidney Foundation programs. And it certainly is no secret that there are not enough kidneys for the many people who need them. There are over 700 dialysis patients in Indiana, most of whom could lead a relatively normal and productive life if enough kidneys were available for transplantation. Signing a donor card is a beautiful and painless way of giving the 'Gift of Life'."

A smilar program is currently being conducted in Garrett.

Money raised in the two campaigns will be used to support programs in the areas of patient and community services, public and professional education, and research.

Town Board

The town board met Monday night in regular session. Present were president Butch Coburn, members Loretta Loy and Maurice Kline and clerk-treasurer Emma Frank. Also present were George Clawson and Frank Novak of the Administrative Building Council of Indiana, and Ted Haberkorn.

Mr. Clawson and Mr. Novak presented information concerning the establishment of building codes for the town. After discussion and distribution of printed materials, the men gave the opinion that the town is too small to justify establishing its own building codes and paying a building inspector. It was recommended that the town place itself under the authority of the county plan commission.

There appeared to be considerable concern in the mind of Mrs. Loy about the building of sub-standard structures and the presence of sub-standard structures. She expressed the need for an ordinance to cover present structures. Mr. Haberkorn pointed out that the town board has the authority to declare property to be a health or safety hazard by authority vested in the town board by state statute. He looked up and underlined such authority in a handbook from Mrs. Loy's folder of information.

The board named some property owners to be contacted by letter concerning property improvement. Despite the community response to the recent successful "clean-up" day in town, there are some instances where "clean-up" is very slow.

Mr. Haberkorn said that the county health officer can be called in to assist in coping with health and safety hazards. A comment from Mrs. Loy was that the county health officer has no authority in town. However, a call to county health officer Luther Treesh by The News Tuesday of this week confirmed the fact that he does have authority in the entire county in health and safety hazards, with the exception of sewage matters.

Mr. Kline raised the question of the propriety of the board president making motions or seconding motions. Mrs. Loy and Mrs. Frank said the town attorney had provided a letter in the past stating that such action by the board president is proper and legal.

A problem of drainage at the west end of town was discussed. Mr. Coburn said he would investigate the private-public tile hookup involved.

It was noted that the board has had grass-killer applied around all grave markers at the local cemetery to reduce the time needed to keep the cemetery in presentable condition. It was noted that a breakdown in equipment prevented the contractor for mowing the park from maintaining the park properly thus far.

A request to locate the chemicals used in fogging for mosquitoes was relayed to the board from the fire department. The department has for many years assumed the responsibility for such fogging.

The town's suit against Rick Wannemacker has been continued to a future date at the request of his attorney.

Of Gas - Having - Air - Etc.

The other day a top government official said that Americans must adjust to the fact that they cannot expect to have the abundance of material things to which they have become accustomed.

That is one of the rare occasions you will find in which someone tells it like it is. President Carter is also getting a bit "tough" in his comments on energy. Of course, just saying something doesn't mean a whole lot; action speaks louder than words. And — those who are now being more realistic are those who have been members of the political party which has "sold" the people on the idea that every problem has a solution; every adversity can be eliminated. And the solution has always been, in their sales pitch, "appropriate more money and the government will take care of the matter." They are talking a different story now — because the chickens have begun to roost.

"Having" things has been a mark of American "prosperity" for many recent years. We have been "spoiled" into believing that if you want something, you have a "right" to have it. Along with this has come an outlook which classifies as "necessities" certain things which were previously looked upon as "luxuries."

I think immediately of the automobile, since the automobile is the primary object on which our national economy is based — unfortunately.

I took a look at some new front-wheel drive models recently introduced by a major automobile manufacturer (I'm not "picking on" them as a lone example, it's just that this is what happened recently). The announced fuel economy from a four-cylinder engine is what caught my eye — and the price, even though the price is near the $5,000 mark — and that's for a "compact" car. (Things are really getting out of hand.)

But the publicized base price seen in newspapers in large bold type was for the "basic" model, the four-cylinder job.

Try to find a "basic" model two-door. I wonder if any "basic" models are put out except on customer order—and I mean with no "goodies" tacked on.

Anyhow — the economy of the new models comes from the use of a four-cylinder engine. However, it seems that many people are somewhat leery of a four-cylinder job, expressing the desire to "have more power for passing in a tight situation" or just to have a little more "pep."

Well, "pep" costs money. So a bigger engine ups the price of the "economy" model. And, in this particular instance, having a bigger engine with front-wheel drive brings the "need" for power steering and maybe power brakes. Up goes the price again. And the word "necessities" is used to describe those additional features which normally are properly considered "luxuries."

In truth, the only necessities in an automobile in these days of gasoline problems are an economical engine, four wheels and room inside the body to take care of the individual or family needs. But the American public isn't about to be "put down" to the average level in automotive matters. They want better things.

And there is our problem.

"Better things" means a distinctive appearance, a powerful engine, more so-called "necessities." One of the biggest culprits in recent years is air conditioning in automobiles. Though they may have backed off in the past year or two, there was a period of time when you had to hunt in a lot-full of new automobiles to find one WITHOUT air conditioning. We seem to think summer is unbearable unless a bit of cool air is circulating where we work, where we live, where we go for entertainment, where we go for shopping. I don't mean individual instances of providing a little relief. I'm talking about the OVERALL use of air conditioning for general purposes. (How many times have you entered a store or maybe even an office and said, "Brrrr—it's cold in here!"?)

A couple of weeks ago, a bill was passed by Congress setting limits on temperatures in public buildings, a maximum temperature in winter and a minimum temperature in summer. But if you have seen the list of exceptions, you might well wonder what's left to be governed by this effort to conserve energy.

With the automobile, air conditioning means using more gas. It means hundreds of dollars more on the selling price because when you have "air," you "need" tinted glass and a bigger engine.

Overall, look at what has happened. Ten years ago, you could buy an "economy" car at an economy price. It was a smaller car, all around. Today, the so-called "standard" size cars are in reality the compacts of five years ago. The same model names are being used to some extent to justify the higher price. But the buyer is getting less and less for an amount of money that goes higher and higher

Foreign compacts, the "economy" cars which gave Americans what they wanted at an economy price at the beginning, now can't be touched for less than $6,000. You can't touch an "American" compact for less than $4,000, with maybe one or two exceptions. The local owner of a pint-sized subcompact pickup truck paid over $5,000 for it. Think of it—$5,000 for an un-fancy dinky little truck. It's terrible.

Someone will say, "He should talk about economy; he's driving big Thunderbirds." (The age of the cars doesn't seem to matter as much as the idea of "a big Thunderbird.")

I have done some figuring in the past year when my conscience—and my pocketbook, to be more honest—said, "Hey, you better take a look." I came up with comparative figures to indicate that it would cost as much over a four or five-year period to buy and operate an "economy" car as it would cost to continue driving the big Thunderbirds.

By the time I totaled monthly payments for a new compact, increased excise tax for a new car, the sales tax, increased cost of insurance (which already quadrupled in the past year what with a teen-age driver and another car now involved), I came up with no advantage in dollars and cents with an economy car of today.

(It should be noted that our family has had five VW's since 1963, so we were "conserving" in gas and in the pocketbook long before the gas supply problem came up.)

Despite the claims by the auto industry of "better gas mileage," the automobiles of today are no more efficient than before. The miles-per-gallon factor has gone up only because the cars and engines are smaller (but still have a big price).

The overall effect is that, without realizing it, the American public is paying as much or more for automobile transportation as it did before. It seems that everything is geared (no pun intended) so that it is actually impossible to get low-cost private transportation. It's as if there is a "conspiracy" between the automobile industry and the petroleum industry which pretty well guarantees that they will get so much per mile from owners of automobiles, no matter what the driver may do to reduce his or her cost of transportation.

The only real way to do anything about it is — quit driving.

Somewhere in the not-too-distant past someone coined the slogan, "What this country needs is a good five-cent cigar," to reflect conditions at that time. Today, what this country needs is a good, sturdy low-cost automobile with high gas mileage.

"Thanks To All...."

—from DeKalb Eastside Principal Robert E. Williams

As another school year closes and we look back in retrospect at the past school year, we realize that many people have contributed to the success we have had during the year.

As Principal of Eastside Jr. Sr. High School I would like to acknowledge these people.

Many businesses have loaned, donated or helped us in providing a way for us to be able to have an activity that we might not have been able to have without their help. Among these are John Nugen's Interior and Carpet Specialists, Butler Lumber Company, Armstrong Florists, The Butler Bulletin, Spake and Watson Television, Parkinson TV, The Knisely National Bank, Tule's Mobil Station, Butler Shell Station, Cooper's Jewelry, Maxton Motors, Tri-Wall Containers, Inc., and many others.

Also of great service have been the Butler Police Department and Police Reserves, the Auburn Police Department, the Band Boosters Club, the Athletic Booster Club, the American Legion, the St. Joe Lions Club, the Butler Rotary Club, and many individuals and organizations too numerous to list.

We really appreciate the community backing and appreciate all the help you have given us. If I have omitted anyone, it was certainly unintentional and I apologize for the omission. We sincerely thank all of you and hope the community backing and support for our schools continues and builds in the same fine fashion that these people have contributed.

I sincerely appreciate the cooperation I have received in the community during the eleven years I have been Principal. My best wishes to Eastside Jr. Sr. High School students, faculty and staff for much success in the years to come.

Is it really a bargain?

But, how can you really tell a prescription bargain? You can't have an overstock or a fire sale. Prescription drugs are used only on a physician's order. If old, they must be destroyed.

Some ads may offer a discount. But, how can you tell them from what? And, if you do get a lower price on one, how much extra to make up the loss may you be charged on a new one? Be sensible. Everyone has to make a profit. Choose your personal pharmacy as carefully as you do your physician by its reputation for integrity and dependability. You will get honest value.

Bridge Meeting

A public meeting Tuesday night at Spencerville brought indications that a majority of people favor using the covered bridge at Spencerville for pedestrian traffic with a new bridge to be constructed a short distance downstream to handle all types of vehicular traffic.

The meeting was held by the county commissioners to get public input into the matter. It has been stated that the bridge cannot handle heavier vehicles such as buses and trucks. To provide for more convenience for all types of traffic, a new right of way would be acquired to accommodate a new bridge and the covered bridge would be closed to vehicular traffic.

Some of those attending the meeting suggested strengthening the old bridge to eliminate the need for a new structure. Another idea was to allow automobile traffic on the covered bridge and use the new bridge for heavier vehicles.

There is the possibility of obtaining federal matching funds for the old bridge. A committee is to investigate this point.

The commissioners will take all views into consideration before making a final decision.

CLOBBER THE ROBBERS (stress and diseases)

Any experienced hog producer knows what can happen to profits when stress and stress-related diseases strike the herd. All it often takes is a routine activity such as moving, vaccinating, flushing, farrowing . . . even a change in the weather. Now you can clobber the robbers with WAYNEXTRA for SWINE FORMULA NO. 1. It almost works like a miracle.

We'll bet you didn't know how annoying that drippy faucet of yours really was.

It costs $24.00 to heat the 2400 gallons of water you lose each year from one hot water faucet that drips once a second.

And maybe a 10¢ washer is all it would take to stop it.

There are other ways you can cut your hot water costs, too.

Take showers instead of baths. Use the cold water cycle on your washing machine. Turn off your electric water heater when you go on vacation.

And, since your hot water costs will go up as you raise your water temperature, make sure your water heater isn't set too high. You can easily get by with 140° water in most cases.

We have some S.A.V.E. booklets that not only show you how to save electricity all around your home, but also how to become part of our Save America's Valuable Energy Program.

$24.00 a year down the drain.

"Zero" means "nothing." But if the "zero" is a "0," it does mean something.

F'rintance, in the article about the new Coburn Corners Church of Christ building, the paragraph telling of the final service in the old building had the time listed as "1:30 a.m." —before I caught it in proof-reading.

'Cyclist Killed

Larry J. Kline, 21, of Crooked Lake, formerly of Butler, was killed June 6 in a motorcycle-auto accident at Kendallville. The victim was riding the motorcycle and collided with a car driven by Charles Bell of Waterloo at 10:13 p.m.

Police reported that Bell was making a left turn with his turn signal operating when Kline ran into the right side of the car. Kline was not wearing a helmet. But an EMS technician said the lack of a helmet was not a factor; there were no head injuries reported.

Employed at Kendallville, Mr. Kline was born April 2, 1958, in Hicksville.

Survivors include his mother, Doris (Donat) Kline of Butler; his father and step-mother, Lavon and Luella Kline of R1 Butler; two brothers, Vernon and Dennis, of R2 Hamilton; three sisters, Mrs. Karen Vihlein of R2 Hamilton, Kathy of Auburn and Kay of Butler; a step-sister, Theresa; the paternal grandparents, Vernon C. and Ila (Agler) Kline, of Waterloo; and the maternal grandparents, Ray and Kary (Kees) Donat, of Butler.

Funeral services were held Sunday at the Johnson Funeral Home in Butler. Burial was in Riverside Cemetery at Saint Joe.

EMS Service To Be Expanded In Scope

The DeKalb County Emergency Medical Services unit will soon activate equipment to expand its life-saving procedures.

With a federal grant of $25,000, a new communications system will go into effect enabling EMS technicians to send vital health signs from the scene of an acoident to a doctor at DeKalb Memorial Hospital. The doctor can then advise of emergency medical procedures to be taken until the vicitim arrives at the hospital.

The equipment will not be operational until the local EMS receives state approval of its advanced life support (ALS) program. Only ALS-certified personnel will be allowed to perform the treatment ordered by doctors.

The system includes a portable unit which can transmit electro-cardiograms (EKGs) and other information a doctor needs.

If no doctor is available at DeKalb Memorial Hospital, medical technicians will be able to talk directly to doctors at Parkview, Lutheran or St. Joseph hospitals in Fort Wayne.

Swimming Starts

The summer swimming program starts next Monday, June 18. The schedule has been announced as follows:

Shelter Project Revitalized

Just when it appeared the county humane society's effort to get a shelter would be abandoned due to lack of interest, a recent meeting gave the appearance of more interest than had been shown previously.

I don't know whether the interest is real or contrived. The county commissioners have made $15,000 available to the group but I haven't detected any particular enthusiasm in the actions of the commissioners. Maybe it's because the humane shelter matter is like God, mother and country—say anything against it or express doubts and you're a dirty dog—no pun intended.

The announced financial figures raise some of the same questions I have had in my mind from the start. The number one question is: suppose we do build a shelter. Who is going to pay the help, buy the vehicles?

The estimated cost of the proposed shelter is $100,000.

$100,000! — for dogs???

The county humane society has $7,000. That plus the commissioners' $15,000 makes $22,000. Where does the remainder come from? Are we going begging to Uncle Sam?

Don't get me wrong. I understand the concern felt by the women who have been struggling to get a shelter. I appreciate their concern for animal life: But I am inclined to ask the question, "Can we afford it?" in this matter and in certain other matters, as I told Mrs. Sanders when she called the News Office recently about the society's efforts.

I think it is a bad situation when elected public officials are reluctant to express their true opinions in such matters as this, due to the fear of being looked upon as inhuman, unsympathetic and "cold." Because they do hesitate, certain things come into being and we have another bill to pay.

I admit to being somewhat prejudiced. Whenever a little town like Saint Joe is considered to be "living in the dark ages" because we call our dog warden a dog warden instead of "humane officer," I take other ideas—such as building a shelter—with at least one grain of salt.

After all, what's more important, name or performance?

Saint Joe is controlling its strays because of the efforts of its dog warden and the cooperation of the public—with maybe a little hell thrown in once in a while for Betty Baker.

—And "dog warden" SOUNDS like "authority," which it is—and that's what we need in a lot of places—authority that sounds like it, not "nice" titles.

Even though it appears the shelter project is really under way now, there still ought to be careful thought given before we spend $100,000 for stray dogs—for "starters"!

Did you know

—that electricity was "out" for some residents west of Spencerville Friday after a car crashed into an I&M utility pole. Ben Kreigh of Avilla was not injured when he hit a truck driven by Renea Chappell as it swung too wide from a driveway. He then hit a mailbox and the pole. The other driver also was not injured but damage to the two vehicles totaled some $2,100.

—that Rebecca Dowden of Saint Joe was admitted to DeKalb Memorial Hospital last week.

—that Janet Heyman of Saint Joe was slightly injured Tuesday of last week when her truck slid into a culvert and then hit a tree head-on.

—that Alice Kagey had eye surgery recently.

—that many Hoosier homeowners have not yet claimed a 10% credit against their 1900 property taxes. July 1 is the filing deadline for the "homestead" property tax credit.

—that the annual Woodburn Days festival will be held June 21-23. Attractions include a fish fry, somtball tourney, basketball tourney, Kiddie Parade, king and queen contest, entertainment by the Paul Schmucker Band, hog pull, horse show, gay nineties music and sing-along, parade, beef barbeque, 4-wheel drive pull, disco dance contest, drawing for a new car, and other features.

Is it really a bargain?

But, how can you really tell a prescription bargain? You can't have an overstock or a fire sale. Prescription drugs are used only on a physician's order. If old, they must be destroyed.

Some ads may offer a discount. But, how can you tell them from what? And, if you do get a lower price on one, how much extra to make up the loss may you be charged on a new one? Be sensible. Everyone has to make a profit. Choose your personal pharmacy as carefully as you do your physician by its reputation for integrity and dependability. You will get honest value.

"A GREAT MANY PEOPLE ENTRUST US with their prescriptions, health needs and other pharmacy products. We consider this trust a privilege and a duty. May we be your personal family pharmacy?"

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

In the "now I've heard of everything" category:

A UPI story out of Chicago that two teen-agers are suing their wealthy parents for money to go to college.

There are some qualifying details, however. One is that the parents divorced in 1962 and the mother has received $225 a month for each child for support since that time. But because higher education costs are higher, the support money won't put them through college.

The story brought to mind a comment made occasionally by Ann Landers when someone asks what parents "owe" their children when the kids grow up. Her answer is, "Nothing."

One of the most thankless jobs in sports is that of the umpire. ..

That thought occurred to me when I saw Denny Stiver umpiring a Junior League game last week. It was a warm evening and the sweat was running down his face. It's an exercise for the plate umpire to be getting down to the kids' height in order to call balls and strikes.

Another time I saw Butch Coburn umpiring at the plate. And the next evening he was at the Senior League diamond umpiring the bases with Dave Yates at the plate.

I have overlooked several, I know, because I haven't been at all the games. But I thought I would mention those I did see and suggest that once in a while you say "thanks" to them, whether you're a parent of a participant, a spectator, a coach—or a player!

Georgia McMaken extended an invitation a couple of weeks ago to attend the Senior Citizens' noon lunch. So Tuesday I went down to Wild Cherry Park where the picnic meeting was held at noon and enjoyed a barbecued chicken dinner. A total of some 76 people were there.

It was a perfect day for a picnic and obviously everyone was enjoying themselves. A bingo game was called by Paul Fetters, after which the group toured the facilities at Sechlers Pickles.

Bob Witt, formerly of Spencerville, was there. I hadn't seen him for years. He said he had had heart bypass surgery and had experienced eye problems due to an imbalance of medication, a normal occurrence until doctors get the right combination of medication. He looked to be in pretty good condition — I wouldn't have suspected any serious heart problems just by looks.

Bob was high in his praise of Sandy Mafera: "We've got the best coordinator anywhere. Anyone who says they don't think so better be ready for trouble!"

To Whom it may concern

What is so wrong about asking the Government for a grant, for a dog shelter.

It's our town, it's our money, it's our duty to better our town.

That money could go for other reason like to other small towns, and there dog's, shelters, and to better there town's. Our money we pay out in taxes every year, going someplace else.

Why not our town?

Why not our dog shelter? That we dont have.

Why not our sewer's? That we dont have.

Our town is important.
Our families is important
Our children are important
Our school is important

Our pets that we love are important and our money we pay in taxes is important.

A small portion of money come out of hard working people's check's for the conuty a biger part come out for state taxe's a biger part come out for federal. It make sense to me, to get something back for one's own town.

It is important to me as a Mother. to have a good humane officer in our town, because I can let my children walk down the street in safty that stray dog's wont atack them.

And it also is important to me as a dog owner, to have some one who cares enough to pick up our pet if he get loose, (1) so he wont hurt any one and (2) so I can have our dog back, and know he hasent been hurt or abused.

We have a good human officer. Now we need! not want! a better shelter. But I know that just my opinion and every body has one.

From someone for betterment of our town, of any kind, that is good for the community.

Mrs. Joseph McPherson

P.S. I didnt write this to atack any one or put any one down.

It's just that I have questions too.

The above letter apparently was prompted by our editorial comments last week about a county humane shelter. There appears to be some confusion in that our comments were not about a town shelter but a county shelter. Also, there was no criticism of our dog warden; rather, we pointed out that she catches "hell" occasionally in carrying out her duties.

Saint Joe has been able to control its strays only because there have been people like Betty Baker, Ervin Fetters, Larry Mason and Dick Roberts over recent years who thought enough of the place where they lived to serve as dog warden. Please note—we are not saying "we don't have any stray dogs"; we do. But we do have CONTROL of stray dogs at the lowest possible cost to residents of Saint Joe—due to the efforts of those who have served as dog warden, with the general cooperation of town residents.

As for federal grants, they're like pop corn—once you start, you can't stop. Just look at Ashley. —Ed.

Dear Mr. Haberkorn,

Our 1978 fiscal year ended March 31, 1979. As we review the year's accomplishments, we are reminded of those who have provided us with services to assist in our work of prevention and control of lung diseases.

The St. Joe News has been a tremendous hellp to our Lung Association in providing public awareness of our service.

We are very grateful for all you have done and do for us. As a token of appreciation we are enclosing our certificate of recognition.

Thank you.

Very truly yours,
Clark E. Matson
Managing Director
American Lung Association, Northeast Indiana

Dear Ted Haberkorn,

Your "good feelings" on that bicycle ride were something I could relate to very much. Although we don't have the "roots" in this community that you possess, we too, have been washed with that warm glow of feeling fortunate and blessed.

Perhaps that "feeling" is a partial explanation as to why we so oppose the liberal spenders, feminists, social planners, and others who would chip away at the foundations of our "republic." To digress a moment — why are we now consistently calling ourselves a democracy rather than the limited Republic UNDER GOD which our forefathers established? (Look up Republic and Democracy in a dictionary sometime — I think you might be shocked when you see it so closely defined with socialism.) As Pastor Kuchera and yourself recently pointed out: this abuse of our language is "idiocy" — or is it?

Is it possible that perhaps it is all part of a premeditated push toward socialism? I'm happy to know at least one editor and pastor to whom these "social planners" cannot dictate!

Much of what has happened in this country has happened simply because it IS a great country and sympathetic people who have allowed their "do good" feelings to "undo" themselves. May I explain how that happens?

1. We are made to feel guilty because we are prosperous while others are not. Never mind how much we worked while the other guy loafed. (I always remember when I hear this approach from someone to see if it's MY money or THEIRS with which they wish to be so generous to others.)

2. We are told this proposal will benefit everyone at a small cost to a few. (I always remember when I hear this, that, if one person loses a freedom—we ALL lose it.)

The first time this reality occurred to me, was when I still lived in California. As you know, L.A. has a lot of freeways. In this instance they felt they needed another that was to run smack dab through the center of an old homestead of two very old retired people who wanted to live out their last few years on this land for which they had worked.

They refused to sell for any amount — this place was priceless to them. Everyone was in an uproar. "We need this freeway!" "Millions will benefit!" "Too much money already spent!" blazed the media in sympathy with the engineers and planners and commuters.

I remember watching on TV: people applauding the decision to forcibly remove these old people. Tears came to my eyes not only for them, but that it seemed no one but me could see that now each of us was also subject to being forcibly moved at the whim of a bureaucracy. Whether they do it or not isn't important — it's the fact that they CAN do it—so your property and mine is in jeopardy from that point on.

After that incident I became more and more aware that our original Republic was being eroded. Now I've learned to value those freedoms and rights which remain.

This is why we identify so much with this community. It is my contention that much of our original values are still in evidence here (though we are under definite attack!), and that a prevalent attitude of independence and conservatism preserves here what is already extinct in many other parts of the country.

Keep on feeling good out on that bike — you deserve it.

Coburn Corners' 'Big Day' Sunday, June 24

"A "red letter day" in the life of the Coburn Corners Church of Christ congregation will occur Sunday, June 24, when that church dedicates its new sanctuary and educational unit. The dedication service is set for 2:30 p.m. EST. An "open house" will then be held from 3:45 to 5:00 p.m.

The spacious 10,300 square foot worship center, all on one floor, consists of a large sanctuary, classrooms, fellowship hall, rest rooms and a spacious foyer.

Of interest in the construction of the new church is the list of "special gifts" provided by members and friends over and above the cost of the basic structure.

A recent report sent to members of the congregation listed the following (as of May 21):

Padded pews	$3,000.00
Organ fund	2,442.01
Office furnishings	975.00
Cassette recorder	150.00
Nursery (Rocking chair to be donated)	86.90
Chairs for youth dept.	150.00
Home Builders Class	140.00
Folding partitions	1,500.00
Kitchen	30.00
Wallpaper	180.00
Landscaping	200.00
Undesignated	4,252.00
Other items	1,000.00
Total	$14,105.91

The goal was set at $15,000 and probably has been met and surpassed at this writing.

The dedicatory address will be given by Walter Coburn, a former member and minister of the church. He will speak on "A Review of the Past."

Leslie Strong, minister of the Church of Christ at Stroh and a Timothy of the Coburn Corners Church, will speak on "A Preview of the Future."

Serving on the program will be Lois Strong, Paula and Audine Hill, Larry Carter, Richard Ralstin, Carleton Curie, Kathy Garman, Ida Mae and Kris Brand, Martin Lengacher, Andy Crow, Bob Milder, Frank Laub, Sincerely His and the Lighthouse, Merle Coburn, Ron Collins, Lynn Hart and the minister, John Paul Hill.

Committee chairmen include Rhonda Coburn, publicity; Bill Hablawetz, ushering; Barb Goldsmith, refreshments; and Lora Hart, music.

There will be no evening service the day of dedication.

The final worship service in the old church structure was held last Sunday.

Mart Robbed; Suspect Commits Suicide

When county police surrounded his van, Steven Lynn McClish, 23, of R1 Butler killed himself with his 20-gauge shotgun at around 12:30 a.m. Monday. He was sought by police as a suspect in the robbery of the Laub Shell Mart at Spencerville Thursday evening.

Butler police saw the McClish van parked in the Butler Cemetery. County police then joined the Butler officers. When they surrounded the van and called for McClish to come out, he committed suicide.

The robbery occurred Thursday after a customer with a van filled his tank. He carried a shotgun to force Frank Laub to surrender cash from the mart's register. There were other customers in the mart at the time and police had a description of the thief and his vehicle to proceed with in an investigation. A customer had written down the license number of the van.

From The Editor's Desk....

Airport Expansion A 'Total' Benefit

Back when the proposal for a county airport first came up, there were a lot of folks who were strongly opposed to the idea. They felt they would never make use of the facility.

And they were right.

However, such things as airports must be looked at in an overall sense, not just personal. While it is true that it's mostly "big business" which makes use of the airport and benefits the most, it is also true that "big business" and its success is what makes jobs for people in our county.

That fact of life is often forgotten — or folks get all worked up by people who make "business" and "profits" out to be dirty words. Face it—if it wasn't for business and profits, there wouldn't be good incomes for families of the employees, there wouldn't be the paid vacations and the health insurance and the paid holidays and the pensions and the education benefits for children in workers' families—and so on.

I know there are those who use the airport for personal flying interests. But it's the business-related traffic that makes the airport an asset to our area.

I've never used our airport and probably never will. But I'm all for expanding it, as the Aviation Board is now considering, because it is a "total" benefit for our community and the people living in the area.

Some people think only in terms of such expenditures as so many dollars, including tax dollars, paid out. They forget that the boost to progress which comes in having an airport facility convenient to our area industry means growth in industry. And that means LOWER taxes because business and industry carry the largest part of our property tax obligations.

If you want to do a good turn, drop a note to the aviation board and tell them they are on the right track (or should it be runway???) in seeking airport expansion at the present time.

In what direction are we heading?

Being sick has become a bit more complicated than it once was. But then our chances for recovering or being cured have also taken a sharp upturn. Diagnosis is more accurate, treatment is more effective and medicines are certainly more specific.

Your pharmacist has also taken on an increasingly new role. Where once most of the time was spent actually making up your medicines, now he or she must spend a great deal of time studying about the drugs he dispenses.

Your pharmacist must be able to give each patient important information about the medicines they take. We enjoy this new role.

Those attending included seniors Brenda Beaty, Sharon Frakes and Cubby Houser, and juniors Jamie Smith and Mari Zenk.

Instruction was given at the camp in new cheers, gymnastics, mini-tramp, chants, jumps, pom-pon and spirit ideas.

"Cubby Houser was named "First Class Cheerleader," a distinct honor given to only 20 other girls in the history of the camp. She received the award for excellence in gymnastics, mini-tramp, cheer technique and a written exam.

The Blazer cheerleaders received:

1. 3 "superior" ribbons, 2 "excellent" ribbons in daily evaluation sessions.

2. The "spirit rock" award for sportsmanlike conduct and enthusiasm toward other squads.

3. A "spirit stick" to bring home. This was for overall spirit and pep at camp.

4. EXCELLENCE AWARD given to the most outstanding squad throughout the week. Four squads were chosen as finalists, then the Blazer girls won the top award. There were 35 to 40 other squads at camp.

DeKalb Eastside has been in the final four squads two other times, but this was the first time to win top honors.

Nancy Hudson is faculty advisor for the cheerleaders.

DAR Meets

The John Houlton Chapter of the Daughters of the American revolution held its May meeting at the home of Mrs. Lehr Wilder. Mrs. Ernest Harter led the opening ritual. She reported on highlights of the Continental Congress held April 16-19 in Washington, D.C.

As a re-dedication, "The Daughters of the American Revolution must renew their pledge to cherish, maintain and extend the Institution of American Freedom, to foster true patriotism and love of country, and aid in securing for all mankind the blessings of Liberty if we are to remain the land of the free, the home of the brave."

Resolutions on which the NSDAR urgently requests its members to take individual action concern contacting U.S. Senators and Representatives before October 1, 1979, to prevent the transfer of the Panama Canal; and urge U.S. policies toward the Republic of South Africa and other countries of Africa that are resisting Communist intervention be re-assessed.

Other resolutions urge resumption of research and development necessary to re-establish American military supremacy and insure the safety and freedom of this country against the massive Soviet arms buildup.

The NSDAR continues to oppose socialized medicine and to oppose the establishment of the Department of Education.

Also backed by the NSDAR is enactment of additional legislation to place restrictions on foreign investment in the U.S., especially in industries having a national security relationship.

Congress should resume its power over fiscal policies and inflation. The NSDAR supports women volunteering for military service but opposes women being drafted or placed in combat at any time. Members of NSDAR should stand firm in resisting all transfers of U.S. technology to foreign countries.

Mrs. Harter stated that the local chapter received a certificate recognizing 100% participation in the President General's Project, received a gold stripe and tri-colored ribbons for the Yearbook prepared by Linda and Martha Yoder.

The chapter also received a Silver Honor Roll Certificate. But the best award for the chapter was the fact that one of its members, Mrs. Calvin Carnahan, was chosen the National Outstanding Junior DAR Member of the Year.

The group ended its business meeting and then traveled a few miles to the home MM Karl Hart at the Kada-Lato Farm. Mr. Hart showed many kinds of gourds in the process of drying and Mrs. Wilder showed the many ways in which gourds can be decorated.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

Mrs. Jerry D. Smith called Monday to ask if I had seen the article in the Journal-Gazette about the "Wonder Wheel," a circular "pontoon" which moves across the water powered by an individual's "walking" inside the contraption's two circular rings. She called because the young man, Jim Smith, pictured as he operated the "wheel," is their son who is a student at DeKalb Eastside.

The inventor is Rodger Flagg and the company formed to produce the man-powered recreational vehicle is named Tryton, Inc.

The wheel is made up of two 8-ft. rubber-coated vinyl wheels with cross tubes on which the operator "walks."

It's like a treadmill. Only this one can be deflated and carried about conveniently.

Jim's experimental run Sunday afternoon was on the St. Joe River at Fort Wayne and it attracted the attention of a lot of people.

It is said that the outfit will be test-marketed in the Fort Wayne area next spring.

The wheel can also be operated on land and is fun for little ones just for climbing.

A good illustration of the degree to which "planning" exists in determining how you use YOUR property is in the current application of Tim Inlow to the County Plan Commission to allow the Plainsmen Black Powder Club to hold its shoots at the Inlow gravel pit.

It all costs money.

I know that, with the increasing population, the use of our land becomes of prime importance and it becomes apparent some sort of guidelines must be established. But sometimes I wonder . . . . .

Letters.....

Oops! I misunderstood about the shelter: I thought you meant they was going to put the county shelter here in St. Joe. The letter in last week's paper didn't say where. Sorry.

I'm for a better shelter no matter where in the county. I love dogs. I don't like pop corn. You say dog warden. I'll call her humane officer. And what's in a name. To some can be bothersome, and Mrs. Baker don't like being called a dog warden. Performance is important. But she has earned the right to be called humane officer at least by me any way.

I don't think your wrong in calling her a dog warden and I didn't think you were picking on her. And I'm not mad about the letter. Not now or last week.

Mrs. J.M.
(Mrs. Joseph McPherson)

I would like to use your newspaper to make some facts known to the people of St. Joe and surrounding area.

I've heard comments from people that they would let their house burn down before they'd call St. Joe Fire Dept.

Also that there was more damage done by water than the fire itself.

There are training meetings and classes that the firemen can attend which includes first aid training.

Most newer men in the Dept. have been trained in EMS—CPR—Hazardous Materials and Rescue.

These men will also take more training as it becomes available.

However some of our members fill that their only responsibility to our community and our fire dept. is to simply extinguish fires.

Our Dept. and community is being deprived of a fully qualified well trained crew of firefighters due to the negligence of these few men.

In my opinion the responsibility of an efficient fire fighter must include current training methods as well as the fighting of an actual fire.

A concerned citizen.

Dear Mr. Haberkorn:

Thank you for your recent correspondence.

I share your concern and strongly believe that federal deficit spending, the major factor of inflation, must be brought under immediate control. Our nation's taxpayers are rightfully weary of empty rhetoric and promises of tax relief while Congress takes no significant steps to curb spending programs.

In an effort to reduce unnecessary federal spending, over the past two years, I have supported measures that would halt construction of the new Senate Office Building, abolish the Renegotiation Board, cut individual income taxes by 33% over three years, and deny Members of Congress and high-ranking government officials a cost-of-living increase. I also joined a Congressional Task Force during the last months of the 95th Congress to cut funds from remaining Appropriations bills being considered and plan to remain active in this Task Force during the 96th Congress. I returned $330,786 to the Treasury in unspent funds — $157,342 in 1977 and $173,444 in 1978 — as my own contribution to keeping down federal spending. On each opportunity with which I have been presented, I have voted to cut the federal budget.

I have introduced in the 96th Congress a Resolution calling for a Constitutional amendment to require a balanced budget. I believe that such a measure is necessary to compel the Congress to stop spending more than it takes in and to eliminate deficit spending, a major cause of inflation.

I appreciate your interest in this vital issue, and your taking the time to communicate your views to me.

Sincerely,
Richard Lugar
U.S. Senator

Unfortunately, despite the efforts of Senator Lugar and most other Republicans, plus some conscientious Democrat Senators, the Senate building is still being constructed, income tax cuts are offset by increases in Social Security taxes, and so on — which means we are getting nowhere fast. —Ed.

The Gas Pinch Hits Home

The effects of the current shortage of gasoline finally reached the rural smalltown area last weekend. While the national news stories told of lines of impatient motorists at service stations in certain metropolitan areas of the nation, it was almost as if the rural midwest thought they were reading of exaggerations or perhaps even "fairy tales."

But Saint Joe and Spencerville area residents found out the stories were "for real" as local service stations limited gas purchases to $3.00 last weekend. Then a slight rise to a $5 limit was reported this week.

Whether the gas shortage is real or contrived, it has been apparent that local driving habits in general did not reflect any appreciable effort to cut down on driving. And it becomes apparent that the only way that gas consumption can be reduced is by lack of supply. The cost has not appeared to cause any great concern. If cost were a factor to reduce gas consumption, the driving public would have made an appreciable and significant reduction in the use of their family automobiles. That reduction has not come. Drivers are going to drive when they please where they please, it seems, as long as a supply of gas is available.

It seems rather strange. A nation of people whose privileges exceed those enjoyed by peoples of other nations, a nation whose history tells of the sacrifices of millions of its citizens through the years to protect individual liberty—that same nation is now governed by an attitude of selfishness and self-pleasure.

Our essential recognition of the need to be careful in the use of those things which are at our disposal is seldom found in our citizens. We have been so bombarded with our "rights" that the "wrongs" of excessive demands on the environment and our natural resources are virtually forgotten. If the American public can't believe a real gas shortage exists in this nation, it is really not surprising, if you put everything into perspective. How can you expect anything else but self-indulgence when the hard-sell of "get," "you have a right," "it should be fun to . . . ."—and so on—has permeated our society for many years. The philosophy that every problem can be removed with a federal grant or program has prevailed for so many years at the hands of a majority of legislators who have ridden the crest of popularity by promising, promising, promising. It was false from the start. But how can you fight a promise of more this and more that when man's human nature is easily tempted by the anticipation of greater reward without any greater effort to justify the reward?

Put into down-to-earth terms, the joy-riding of youth in cars, on motorcycles and motorbikes and other gas-consuming vehicles is—and has been— in one word abusive in the degree to which it has been practiced. But how can you point at youth when their parental generation participates in comparable gas-consuming activities in vehicles such as the four-wheel-drive, for instance. Those outfits get hardly more miles per gallon than a semi-tractor hauling a load of produce or furniture or other merchandise.

There are those who will say that the little things—motorcycles, motorbikes, power mowers, snowmobiles, all-terrain vehicles and so on use so little gas that it doesn't mean that much as far as a gas shortage. However, when you consider that there are MILLIONS of these gas-energized items in the hands of MILLIONS of people, the picture changes. We cannot ignore the collective result of the use of fuel-powered vehicles.

Keep in mind—we are talking about the excesses due for the most part to fun-seeking and recreation; we are not talking about the necessities.

I don't bear any personal grudge against anyone. But I do feel resentment, to be honest about it, when I see kids riding back and forth, back and forth, along the railroad right-of-way next to the shop on their gas-powered vehicles.. The resentment is not personal because I know that the same thing is going on all over the United States.

I don't feel a personal resentment against adults using gas powered vehicles to fill their basic needs—and I do appreciate that everyone has the desire AND THE NEED for "driving for pleasure" on occasion. Reasonable demands can be met by our natural resources. It is the unreasonable demand that is causing most of our trouble.

We don't see it around here particularly. But we do see it in newspapers and magazines that weekends in certain parts of the country are devoted to tearing around on gas-powered vehicles and this results in tearing up the land and destroying the natural habitat of creatures which are a part of nature's cycle of life. This nation's people are, in certain areas, literally tearing the land apart.

While there may be a reduction in driving in recent weeks, it has not been due to the exercising of common sense restraint. It is due to the lack of adequate supplies of gasoline. This is disappointing—because the American public has absolute control over supplies and prices, in the long run. Whether it's gas, or lettuce, or automobiles, or what have you, if prices get out of hand, all the American public need do is say "no, I won't buy." There isn't a federal program that can come closer to bringing an adjustment than public restraint in buying. But — the public "wants" and the public "gets."

It's in "the Good Book"—if you abuse something, it will be taken away. That truth is obvious in the current crisis involving the use of energy of all types—except human. In becoming a "throw-away" society, a "convenience" society, we have turned away from the greatest source of energy in the world—you and me and our minds and bodies.

It's a sad story, because a young nation of high ideals has become a spoiled brat.

Those Wasteful Computers

Ordinarily, we think of the age of the computer as an indication of progress, another step in the development of man's intelligence.

There are, however, those times and incidents when it is obvious that the computer age is too impersonal and very wasteful of one of our most precious products, paper. That paper comes from wood.

Last week I was further entrenched in my "anti-computer-age" sentiments by the following:

In the same day's mail, three announcements told of the accomplishments of an area student at an institution of higher learning (a technical science school). There was no duplication (or rather "triplication") in the school's mailing list; the announcements were different but they were about the same student.

One news release told of the student's placing on the Dean's List of honor students for the fall semester. Another told of the student's placing on the Dean's List for the spring semester. And the third told of the awarding of a bachelor's degree to the same student at graduation.

Take note of these wasteful "fruits" of the computer age:

1. 5 sheets of letterhead-size paper were used.

2. 3 envelopes were used, one for each announcement.

3. The Postal Department had to handle three pieces of mail instead of only one—and at a reduced rate.

There is something else.

On the second page of the announcement of the honor student for the fall semester, this note was found:

"Editor, please note: this is the fall semester Dean's List. We apologize for being so late. A gremlin found its way into our computer program and only now has been discovered and removed."

That's all there was in that sheet of paper—an apology for lateness due to a "gremlin" in the computer. And the really funny (but not so funny) part of it came when I realized that the apology came from a computer!

There's more.

As a non-profit organization, the school enjoys low-cost mailing privileges. So they paid only 2.7 cents for each letter, a total of 8.1 cents for the three news releases. You and I are paying 45 cents to mail three first class letters.

I have no quarrel with the low rate for postage. The point is, the low rate privilege is abused when three letters are sent, but one news release could have covered everything.

The tremendous increase in the use of paper due to government requirements for filing reports and so on has been in the news frequently in the recent past. But there is another increased demand for paper in the use of computers; the above example illustrates that point.

"Progress" is thought of as an indication of improvement in living conditions and efficient use of our resources. But the demand for paper has increased so much that it is questionable whether we have really progressed as much as we think we have. A paper supply house representative told me last week that their firm has been on an "allotment" program for some time, the paper products distributed to area warehouses so that everyone gets something, even if it is not the quantity needed.

Computers do have a place in our society; they can be beneficial—but only up to a certain point. After that, they become too impersonal and, as shown above, much too wasteful of our natural resources.

First Things First

The DeKalb County Bar Association is very concerned (and rightly so) about a proposal to establish a statewide system of "unifying" trial courts. into 20 districts. The local bar association opposes the plan because it would make judges "circuit riders" as H. Charles Winans, association president, put it.

A meeting was held Friday by the local bar association with representatives of business and the news media present. A review of the proposed judicial reform was given by Mr. Winans and there were comments made by other attorneys plus a few questions.

The meeting was held at Greenhurst Country Club at Auburn.

After a time, one or two of those present left the meeting. Then there was almost a mass exit by others while information was still being presented. It appeared that other commitments would be the reason for leaving the meeting.

Or so I thought.

Don't get me wrong—I'm all for our bar association's opposition to the plan; I don't like the probability of being subject to the control of courts from a large metropolitan area.

But when I leave such a meeting, having remained until the conclusion, and I see two young attorneys on the practice putting green after having scurried from the "important" meeting before it was ended, I wonder just how much they really care about what happens in judicial reform.

I took time off from my work to attend that meeting, but their concern was their putting game.

That Little Bolt

I sometimes wonder who more regards the public as stupid—the national news media or certain "officials."

I'm talking about the plane crash in which 273 people were killed.

After an investigation began, we (the public) were confronted with headlines, pictures and reports about the accident, all pointing to the failure of one three-inch bolt as the cause.

No way is anyone going to convince me that the difference between a jet engine's staying in place or falling off the plane lies in the strength of one little bolt. If that IS the case, that one bolt is the difference between life and death of airline passengers, then they'd better cancel all flights and forget about airplanes.

The first story about the little bolt was that investigators found the head of the bolt on the runway. Therefore, the bolt must have broken and the engine fell off—at least that's the way you and I were led in our thinking—if we weren't thinking.

However, there WAS a later story indicating that the bolt broke BECAUSE OF the crash, it was not the CAUSE OF the the crash.

But that story was found on page SIX of a Fort Wayne paper. The more sensational articles linking the bolt to the accident were still making the front page.

I think every wire service that carried the bolt-cause story, every reporter who filed such stories and every editor who allowed it to become front-page material ought to be given a few days off—without pay—to contemplate on the responsibilities of presenting credible information to the reading public.

Are we so programmed to having an answer to all adversities that we'll take any answer that comes along, no matter how far-fetched it may be?

No, I'm not advocating censorship. I'm saying that judgment must be exercised in presenting the news to avoid misleading the public. I can't believe that everyone involved in reporting the matter actually believed that one dinky little three-inch bolt caused the terrible crash.

Freedom Of Speech Has A Price

Too often, in considering our many freedoms, there is but one idea uppermost in our mind. That is: freedom, or "rights," means we can do, say or think whatever we want — and that's it.

Well, that isn't "it."

In particular, freedom of speech is too often considered as a "one part" activity: "I can say whatever I want. I have a right to say what I think."

There is another part, however. It is this: you must be prepared to face the consequences resulting from what you say, and you must grant others the right to freely express themselves without their having a fear of retaliation. Experience tells an editorialist of the existence of that second part.

Does that mean you are at fault for exercising freedom of speech? Not at all. The fault lies in all of us who, at one time or another, while not trying to deny freedom of speech, yet resort to some sort of retaliation to make the speaker "pay" for having exercised freedom of speech.

The "looseness" within our society in recent years has not resulted in more people saying what they think out of intelligence. Rather, it has brought a lot of "loose talk" which does not necessarily indicate better communication. The expanded number of individuals now engaged in producing copy for news media is an example of an increase in quantity and a decrease in quality. The old saying "talk is cheap" is unfortunately applicable today to much of the so-called news we hear and read. It isn't necessarily productive or constructive news; it merely justifies someone's pay for having filled some time or space.

There is a necessary responsibility in exercising freedom of speech, a responsibility on the speaker to have just cause for saying what is said and a responsibility on the hearer to allow the speaker to exercise that freedom without "getting even." How do the irresponsible ones get even? By not speaking to you, by ridiculing you but not in your presence, by becoming even more set in their ways than before and in effect completely ignoring fair, reasonable and justifiable criticism, by reacting in ignorance and anger indicating what might be called a fear of learning —and so on.

Do we have freedom of speech? Yes. Are we allowed to say what we think? Yes.

But there is a price.

What brought this on? Well, I recently expressed pointed opposition to a "self pay raise" for town officials. As a result, other media in the county received information from a board member about certain recent town matters. The News got nothing. Advance notice of a board meeting and a specific discussion about sewage was given to other media. The News got nothing.

It's a shame. The News carried a banner across the front page for three issues urging the community to cooperate in a clean-up. But detailed information after the clean-up went to other media. The News got nothing.

So, exercising freedom of speech by The News again, as a few other times the past few years, brought the obvious retaliation of silence as far as providing the same news to The News as was provided to other media.

Incidentally, it was stated elsewhere that Saint Joe has no sewage treatment plant and that there are no immediate plans for such facilities. That information was in error. When The News notified the other member of the news media in the county of the misinformation, it was a cool "thanks" that came in reply.

In freedom of speech, there is a price to pay — at the hands of those who seem to think it is a sign of weakness to learn from others.

Others say. . . .

—"Washington Update" from The National Federation of Independent Business.

The Department of Energy (DOE) gets low scores for its high consumption of energy at the headquarters in Washington. The building has one of the highest energy consumption rates in the country: 227,532 BTU's per sq. ft. per year. That's more than twice the amount used by an average office building in New York.

Is the U.S. going metric or not No one seems to be sure, including the government. The purpose of the 1975 Metric Conversion Act is "to coordinate and plan the increasing use of the metric system in the U.S." However, a GAO (General Accounting Office) document states that "it is not the United States' policy to convert to the metric system." It also states that the national policy "is not to prefer one system over the other."

One thing is clear: the business community would prefer not to be forced into spending substantial funds to "metricate" their businesses.

. . . . The chief beneficiaries and proponents of this costly process would be large, multinational corporations that operate both within the U.S. and abroad.

The report also points out that a majority of the American people incorrectly believe metric conversion is a mandatory national policy. The GAO re-emphasizes that the Metric Conversion Act of 1975 does not set up a mandatory national policy, and that conversion is a strictly voluntary process.

—"Update," a publication of the National Association of Manufacturers.

The figure released stated that corporate profits rose 26.4 percent from the last quarter of 1977 to the last quarter of 1978. Administration sources and labor leaders were "shocked" by this figure, saying that it proved that while labor was complying with the President's anti-inflation program, business was seemingly trying to make a killing.

However, all of these leaders failed to realize how the figure was compiled by the Commerce Department and what it actually means. First, the 26.4 percent figure is a pre-tax amount; i.e., it is a non-adjusted figure. However, by adjusting the initial profit figure for inflation-caused overestimations of the value of inventory and underestimations of the cost to replace capital, the actual after-tax corporate profit increase was 10.9 percent, significantly less than the 24.6 percent figure that made headlines.

In addition, dividends are the only part of the profits which become income for corporation owners. The remainder is reinvested to improve productivity and expand jobs and output. Dividends increased by only 12.1 percent.

Finally, in the period 1972 to fourth quarter 1978, profits lagged behind other forms of income, increasing only 62.8 percent compared with an increase of 90.2 percent in the compensation of labor.

In what direction are we heading?

Being sick has became a bit more complicated than it once was. But then our chances for recovering or being cured have also taken a sharp upturn. Diagnosis is more accurate, treatment is more effective and medicines are certainly more specific.

Your pharmacist has also taken on an increasingly new role. Where once most of the time was spent actually making up your medicines, now he or she must spend a great deal of time studying about the drugs he dispenses.

Your pharmacist must be able to give each patient important information about the medicines they take. We enjoy this new role.

"A GREAT MANY PEOPLE ENTRUST US with their prescriptions, health needs and other pharmacy products. We consider this trust a privilege and a duty. May we be your personal family pharmacy?"

Did you know—

—that Assistant Ag Secretary Carol Tucker Formen says the department bought $600 million worth of food for schools participating in the national school lunch program. Deliveries are expected to be completed by June 30. Included are peas, corn, potatoes, canned and frozen meat, vegetable oil, dairy products and grains. The commodities are purchased through surplus removal, price supports or appropriated funds. (Since this food is used for school lunches, it means that children, regardless of family income, are eating subsidized meals—which is a form of taking from one pocket and putting in another. —Ed.)

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

One of the happiest people in the area this week is John Paul Hill, pastor at the Coburn Corners Church of Christ. He stopped in at the News Office Tuesday and declared, "I'm free!"

The joy was the result of his doctor's telling him everything was OK with his heart pacer again, and John Paul can get back into action.

He apparently strained while working on a fence row recently and an electrical connection was broken. With John Paul's recent hospitalization and surgery, doctors "clamped" the connection, and that ought to take care of any further "disconnect" possibilities.

Another reason for joy was the dedication of the new building by the Coburn Corners congregation, just one year after ground-breaking.

Oh, yes—another reason for joy was that the likeable motivated-motivating pastor can now pull his belt back to the fourth hole.

With all the good news, there was only one disappointment, but John Paul can live with it. He'd sure like to play softball again, but that's out—no pun intended.

Loxie (Roberts) Kees stopped in Tuesday to subscribe to the paper. During our conversation, thoughts turned to Saint Joe and she had this to say: "I couldn't ask for a better town to grow up in."

As I headed toward Fort Wayne Monday morning and was just the other side of Spencerville where those new homes have been built, I was reminded that white bikinis are my favorite color. The young Mrs. was mowing the lawn.

But later when I headed back to the shop after going to the bank, I passed a couple of local misses in those terrific terry shorts that are "in" now—and I concluded that pink and blue are pretty good colors, too.

Monday was a very refreshing day.

'The Lights Are On!' - or, We Did It Ourselves!

"THE LIGHTS ARE ON!"

This enthusiastic declaration was made Monday evening by Frank Sechler. He was talking about the lights installed at the tennis courts at Saint Joe.

Mr. Sechler served as chairman of the project which brings more useable time per day to those using the tennis courts or the basketball facilities on the courts. The local Booster Club had been investigating the cost of installing additional courts for tennis starting two years ago. But prohibitive costs prevented serious consideration of new construction.

Then Jim Hudson, an employee at Sechler's Pickles, came up with the idea of installing lights to allow tennis playing after sunset. Frank then proceded with getting cost estimates which, at first, also appeared somewhat high. Some frustrating moments almost led to abandoning the project. But with some changes in certain specifications, such as substituting lost-cost wood poles for costly breakaway metal po les, the total cost was reduced to an affordable level.

The Saint Joe Lions Club, the local Vulcraft plant, The Booster Club and Sechler's Pickles each put $700 into the "kitty" and the lighting project was begun. With help from Indiana & Michigan Electric Company, the poles were put in place last fall. Jim Hudson and Donnie Sechler had installed the eight low-energy-consuming metal-halide fixtures on the poles—their labor courtesy of Frank Sechler, on "company time."

Thus, an additional feature has been added to recreational facilities available for residents of the Riverdale area.

Those who use the courts at night can turn on the lights for use of the tennis and basketball facilities. When they are through, they can turn the lights off if there is no one else wishing to use the courts. An automatic timer turns the lights off at 10:00 p.m., the "curfew" agreed upon last year when the project began.

The local town board agreed last year to pay the cost of electricity to operate the lights.

"Look what we have—and we did it without a federal grant!"

I can't help saying that because our small community has more recreational facilities available for all ages than most communities of similar size.

With the hookup of the new lights at the tennis courts, look at what we have:

Lighted courts for tennis or basketball, giving day and night use.

Lighted softball diamond since 1952, with total new installation of energy-saving metal halide fixtures in 1978.

Ball diamond at the Riverdale School for Pony League use.

A new Little League diamond, also at the Riverdale School, installed just this spring through the Youth League and other interested adults.

Ball diamond at the Vulcraft plant which the company installed a few years ago.

And Wild Cherry Park with playground facilities for kids plus picnic tables and pavilion for group get-togethers. It also has two footbridges, one a unique suspension type. Much of the park's attraction is due to the many many hours devoted to its improvement by former resident Willard Hurni who now resides in Auburn.

It is often heard that the reason kids get into trouble is that we adults "don't give them any place to go." Well, that statement is an exaggeration, if you ask me. To some of the kids, "a place to go" (such as Shoaff Park in Fort Wayne in recent months) represents destructive rather than constructive or useful purpose. If "a place to go" involves a place to smoke cigarettes and "pot" without interference, to drink alcoholic beverages without interference, or participate in sexual activities or "playing around" without interference, then my opinion is that we are better off WITHOUT "a place to go" for young people.

But rather than dote on the negative or "bad" side of things, I prefer to keep the positive and constructive things uppermost in mind. We have a summer recreation program, we have a swimming program (the latter for many years) to go along with the facilities mentioned above. Let's take pride in—and continue to work for—our community's accomplishments gained through local support. Let's remember with thanks the names through the years—the Frank Sechlers, the Forre st Bevingtons, the Joe Robinsons, the Lions Clubs, the Jim Rinards, the Booster Clubs, the Youth Leagues, the Wilbur Johnsons, the Duane Voirols, the Larry Emenhisers, the Vulcraft plants, the Jerry Vinsons, the Knisely Banks, the Donna Ramers, the Lavon Harts, the local businesses, the school boards, the town boards, the Pete Timmermans, the Church Leagues, the parents, the kids—all who have through the past three decades supported financially, participated in, or just watched in pleasure the recreational activities in our community as they have started, grown and continued to exist. I know I have omitted some names which should have been included and I am sorry that my memory does not bring them to mind at the moment. But you get the idea.

Remember the TV commercial with a kid saying, "—But I want to do it myself!" That's the most gratifying thought in my mind. Through the years, through the efforts of many people, we DID it ourselves!

Let's not stop.

Tape Recorder Brings Town Board Conflict

A conflict within the town board of Saint Joe resulted in a quick ending to Monday's regular meeting. It is re-scheduled for Friday, July 6, at 6:30 p.m.

The conflict arose when a member of the board, Maurice Kline, attempted to record the proceedings of the meeting on a tape recorder. Strong objection was raised by board member Loretta Loy who called The News after the meeting and gave the Friday date. She also expressed the opinion that her privacy was being invaded by the use of a recorder and she feared that such a recording could be tampered with or changed, or that a portion could be lifted out of context.

Mr. Kline informed The News that he had asked both the town attorney and his personal attorney if such a recording was legal and allowable and both attorneys gave a "yes" answer.

The reason for having the meeting recorded comes from Mr. Kline's allegations that there are some things being done beyond the authorizations given at board meetings. He cited as an example a bill presented at Monday's meeting for over $1,300 for ditching and tiling on the Mike Cearbaugh property. Repair work had been discussed at a previous meeting about a town tile at the south end of Fourth Street and the repair was authorized. However, Mrs. Loy is reported to have informed the Cearbaughs that they should "go ahead" with the tiling and give the bill to the town. Mr. Kline contends that the repair was not authorized to the extent that the town would pay for 40 rods of tiling on private property.

He refused to sign the warrant. However, it only takes two signatures out of the three board members to approve payment of bills presented. Mrs. Loy and board president Butch Coburn OK'd the bill.

It was reported to The News that clerk-treasurer Emma Frank refused to read the minutes of the previous meeting, not wanting to be recorded.

Another instance of the town paying for an obligation of a property owner has been reported to The News. A problem at the Nick Carr residence on Third Street required digging. Mrs. Loy is reported to have authorized the backhoe work and told Mr. Carr to give the bill to the town even though town regulations place the responsibility on the property owner for payment.

In the past eight years, there have been several instances of board members obligating the town without benefit of a meeting and vote. Mrs. Frank has on occasion told The News that she oftentimes did not know "what was going on" because of informal and spur-of-the-moment get-togethers.

It appears that the meeting for Friday was set to allow time to investigate the legality of tape recording of town board meetings.

Ladies Lit'y Club

—Fern Carr, reporter

The Ladies Literary Club mid-summer meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Carl Carpenter with Mrs. Roy Baker as co-hostess.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Forrest Bevington, with all reading the collect and giving the pledge to the flag. Business included a review of the 1979-80 club program and making corrections and additions.

The club welcomed Mrs. James Miller as a new member.

Mrs. Baker had entertainment after which the guests visited and told of something exciting they had done this summer. It was a very enjoyable evening.

Club adjourned until the first regular meeting September 12, 1979, with a 6:00 p.m. dinner at Hickory Hills Country Club.

The hostesses served refreshments.

From The Editor's Desk....

You Win One.....

My recent comments about wasting newsprint and money in the distribution of occasional "sample" copies of this paper were also sent to the Postmaster-General. A reply from one of his aides pointed out that postal regulations had been "amended" in relation to sample copies and it was not necessary to address each individual piece.

A second letter from The News to Washington pointed out that my question was not about addressing the mail; it was about duplication of distribution. I thought I had made that point very clear in the first letter.

Another letter from the aide last week explained how the regulation is interpreted by the department and that interpretation does NOT require duplication.

So, for once I "win" one.

However, the "win" is a puzzling one because the postal department's interpretation of its own regulation does not agree with the wording of the regulation. The interpretation does give me what I wanted, as our postmaster pointed out — I need not send samples to subscribers as well as non-subscribers when I want to "hit" everyone in the community for such things as the recent town "open house" day. That saves newsprint and postage costs.

It's rather disappointing, though, in one respect. Sometime, when a citizen expresses a complaint and points out some flaw in government regulations, not necessarily just the postal department, wouldn't it be refreshing to get a reply like, "You're right. We are changing (or removing) the regulation"?

Why do "public servants" have such an aversion to admitting error? It's a sign of honesty to admit one's mistakes. And we all make mistakes.

Anyhow—on the few occasions when I do send out sample copies, there will not be a duplication because the postal department has officially said it is not necessary, as it interprets its own rules.

.....And You Lose One

On the other side of the fence is a postage increase of 18 to 19% this month in second class mailing rates. Second class is for newspapers and other publications. So, another burden is added to the publication of this and other media, a good example of "double-digit" inflation.

Second class rates were put on a schedule of regular annual increases a few years ago when the false philosophy of "pay your own way" was instituted in the postal department to get it to operating "in the black." The argument was successfully used that second class rates should be increased tremendously in the effort to prevent deficits in the operation of the postal department.

I used the word "false" above because a system of distributing public information is essential to a free society—in addition to providing a means of private communication. It is, therefore, a partial public tax responsibility to pay for the operation of the postal system.

First class rates are the highest, and should be, because such mail is for private benefit. Individuals and businesses pay the first class rate for first class mail; there are no discounts for quantity.

But to increase the second class rate as it has been and still is being increased adds to the cost of doing business and that must be passed on to the consumer. However, when you get to "little men" in the news media such as me, passing an increase in the cost of doing business requires extra caution, because there are those who will stop subscribing to this paper when they think the subscription is "too much" in comparison with other physically larger newspapers.

The disappearance of many locally-owned smalltown newspapers is an indication that it has become economically impossible for the most part to sustain those newspapers at a profit to the owners. There are newspapers still in those towns, yes; but they have become a part of "chains," sold by independent owners to a central company which has one printing plant. Economics has been the prime factor in losing our "grass roots" local contact through independent newspapers.

When I took over in 1948, it cost a buck a month or so to send this paper to all subscribers—that's right, a dollar a month. Now the price is over $40 a month. (And keep in mind that at a dollar a month and penny postcards and three cents for first class mail, we had a postmaster making a living, he had clerical help to a greater extent than is allowed the current postmaster, we had twice-a-day pickup and delivery of mail out of Fort Wayne. The postal deficit was made up by general tax funds and it was no problem.)

Now, if I apply the same ratio of increase in second class postage costs to the subscription price and advertising rate of this paper, I should be getting SIXTY DOLLARS A YEAR FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS and TEN DOLLARS PER COLUMN INCH for advertising.

Would you pay these prices?

The obvious answer is no. So, any increases "the little man" in the newspaper world makes MUST be tempered by practical guidelines—even though practical guidelines are not followed in second class postage rates for news publications. As in farming and every other small independent business, "the little man" is being squeezed out of existence by the trend to bigness. And that bigness is the "practical" result of governmental and legislative "impractical" theories.

These who say newspapers and other publications should "pay their own way" in postage rates are completely ignoring the absolute need for having a system of distribution of public information through news publications PARTLY at direct expense to the taxpayer. And that means operating at a deficit with the deficit paid for by general tax funds.

You win one; you lose one.

From Here And There On Education

From the national Sunday newspaper supplement "Parade":

"Today's students are learning far less in school than their parents did. So says Paul Copperman, author of 'The Literary Hoax' and president of the Institute of Reading Development in California.

"In recent testimony before the U.S. Senate Subcommittee on Education, Arts and the Humanities, Copperman declared: 'Every generation of Americans has surpassed its parents in education, literacy and economic attainment— except the present one. For the first time in American history, the educational skills of one generation will not even approach those of their parents. Only about one quarter of this coming June's high school graduates will have the average level of academic skill recorded in the early 1960's.

"The average high school student today takes 25% less English, 35% less world history, 30% less geography and 20% less science and math than students a generation ago. . . . He is assigned less than half the homework, and the textbooks he is given have been rewritten with a reading level two years lower than the grade he is in."

From the nationally syndicated column of Sydney Harris:

"Facts at large: Things I learned enroute to looking up other things:

"—That when New York University, the largest private university in the country, wanted to teach remedial writing to its freshmen, it found that the graduate assistants assigned to teach 'writing skills' were themselves deficient and was forced to recruit outside professionals to train the instructors in the program."

From the June 6, 1979, issue of "The Review of the News":

"When 43 percent flunked the latest Bar examinations in Michigan, the deans of Michigan's five law schools attributed the high failure rate to tougher exams and grading procedures by the five-member panel which administered the test to the 596 applicants. Stuart Dunnings, Jr., a Lansing attorney who has served on the State Board of Law Examiners since 1968, had a more sound explanation. He said of the students: 'They can't write. They can't complete sentences. And penmanship, you can't even read it. I gave out some zeros on this test.' "

These and similar reports are coming with greater frequency and they point to a truth which has been ignored for too long: dollars don't educate; people do.

While we have been involved in teacher strikes and contract negotiations for more pay and this and that, there has been a subtle revolution taking place in education. That revolution is notable in one significant respect:

Homework is discouraged. A teacher should assign no more work than can be accomplished during the school day.

It should be no surprise that achievement test scores have been dropping every year for the past ten years or so. That period corresponds to the grade levels at which a change in achievement would be noted, if there was to be a change. The "new ideas" in education have come in the past 20 years.

Recent reports that our own school district shows students with at least a level of the national average or somewhat above in certain instances has little comfort in them. If the national average is dropping, and you're keeping pace with the national average, that means you're dropping, too.

Some educators become very defensive whenever a parental observation is made to show concern for the degree of learning observed with a family or families of friends or relatives. But the plain truth is, we have short-changed at least ten graduating classes, here and in the county and all over the country.

"Short-changed." That does not — definitely "not" — mean we have not spent enough money on education. What "short-changed" does mean is that we have not gotten a dollar's worth of education for each dollar in taxes. The establishment of a Department of Education, as President Carter proposes, is not the answer to the problem of diminishing returns in education. Such a move would merely create an agency which would take away even more of the "local control" we so zealously guard. Of course, we are forced to face the truth that "local control" isn't what it was in years gone by. But we still regard—and rightly so—the operation of our schools as a local privilege.

With four sons now graduated from DeKalb Eastside High School, I have considerable information of first-hand nature. If any teacher or teachers take exception to these observations, I would be glad to sit down and talk with them about the matter.

In the meantime, the American public should be on guard against any suggestions or programs which involve expenditure of additional amounts of money for basic education. Additional expenditures of thousands of dollars are treating the symptoms, not curing the disease. The $65,000 in federal funds for DeKalb eastern's remedial reading and math is an example.

'Tot-finder' Fire Safety Sought

A "tot-finder" rescue program is under way locally with the authorization of Fire Chief Fred Rayle. Oval decals which are readily visible are will be available soon after a fund-raising solicitation by Steve Monroe to cover the cost of the decals. They will be distributed free of charge to any family in the area wanting a decal for windows of bedrooms occupied by children in the family. The decals are helpful to firemen in locating children in fire rescue work.

Also available without charge are decals for rooms occupied by senior citizens. Funds donated by residents and businesses will cover the cost of these decals, also.

Steve says he is "doing this on his own" with the approval of the fire chief and has received $26 as of Thursday this week toward purchase of the decals. All monies received will be used for this project, Steve said.

The decals can also be applied to inside doors for assisting emergency personnel who may enter a house or building as quickly as possible, and looking for a window decal would require too much time.

In whatever location the decals may be placed, they make people in general more aware of fire safety.

Applications are being taken for new firemen. Anyone interested in becoming a volunteer fireman and willing to take the necessary training and learn how to operate the equipment should contact the fire chief.

Paternity Suit Oddities

In a story from United Press International appearing in the Auburn Evening Star June 29, 1979, a "reversed paternity suit" is reported as "what may be the first case of its kind..."

A man filed suit in Cook County Circuit Court to prove he is the father of a child born to his former girlfriend. She is now married to another man; the child is 5 years old.

The father of the child seeks visitation rights for the child.

The mother "made it clear" during the pregnancy that the former boyfriend was the father. She allowed him to visit the child often. Now, apparently, she is denying the visits after she married another man.

But Cook County really may not be the first to have a "reversed paternity" suit. It "may" be DeKalb County.

A suit was filed May 18, 1979, in the Juvenile Court of DeKalb County by the "fugitive father" of a child seeking to be declared the actual and legal father of the child. The child was born to its natural mother out of wedlock. The actual father seeks custody of the child and a change of name for the child born October 15, 1977.

The suit is pending.

The suits are unusual in that paternity cases have always involved the mother of a child seeking to establish the identity of a child's father to place legal responsibility for the welfare of the child on the true father, thus opening the way to financial obligations for the father.

In the current cases in DeKalb County, Indiana, and Cook County, Illinois, the fathers seek legal identity and responsibility related to a child born out of wedlock. And in the DeKalb County petition, the father seeks custody of the child.

Somewhat similar circumstances have arisen in past months in abortion matters. A few cases have been publicized nationally wherein a man seeks to prevent an abortion as the father of an unborn child.

These "reverse paternity" and abortion suits are few in number and represent unusual circumstances because they contradict the public's general opinion that the "traditional" role of fathers of illegitimate children is one of "fugitive" from responsibility.

Others say. . . .

"That doesn't mean that the French agree with all our policies, any more than we accept everything their government does. They've never understood Watergate, for instance. They see Nixon as a skillful politician who wound down the Vietnam War and opened up relations with China. They can't believe that people threw him our of office just for telling some lies and tapping a few telephones. Here in France, just about every important person's phone is tapped by someone; in French eyes that's not a logical reason for deposing a leader."

—from "Parade" in an interview with Pierre Salinger, press secretary under Presidents John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson and now a European correspondent for CBS News.

In writing years ago about Joe McCarthy, I ventured the point that no attempt to understand him could be successful without understanding his critics, whose distortions and exertions made Mcarthy look almost pitiful.

Henry Kissinger isn't McCarthy, and in a few months his memoirs will take good care of the williwaws, the current dazzler being an attack on the Cambodian policies under Nixon-Kissinger....

For instance Anthony Lewis, who terms the book by William Shawcross ("Sideshow—Kissinger, Nixon and the Destruction of Cambodia") "a . . . textbook on what can happen when the American constitutional system is violated. Lies and secrecy and lawlessness were the ways by which Kissinger and Nixon evaded restraints on their power."

. . . .the record will not sustain the contention that Nixon-Kissinger thus conducted themselves. . . .Lies and secrecy and lawlessness were the ways by which Franklin Delano Roosevelt evaded restraints on his power, and most Americans are nowadays grateful he did as he did in order to prevent Hitler from becoming the master of Europe.

What happened in Indochina is that Hitlers did take command there. . . . Mr. Shawcross's complaint is not against those who frustrated what began as an alliance to contain aggressive communism; but against those who attempted to prevent the ascendency of the Hitlers.

. . . . Shawcross's contentions (are that) the bombing between February and August of 1973 (brought) wholesale civilian casualties, a general panic, a destruction of the agricultural base of Cambodia and an invitation to Pol Pot to gut Phnom Penh in order to bring the people back to cultivate the land and deliver themselves from starvation.

An afternoon of telephone calls . . . . validates the consistent claims of the Pentagon that the rules of engagement. . . . were carefully observed, with the exception of two accidents, . . . a funeral procession . . . (and) a young bombardier who mishandled a direction-finding switch and dropped a load of bombs on a friendly village.

. . . . .The bombings were designed to deter the Khmer Rouge, but congressional restrictions finally choked off any hope of success.

The stark outcome of it all is the boat people. They are not fleeing U.S. bombs. They are fleeing the men to whom Congress and the critics of Kissinger and Nixon committed them.

Even the mildest of medicines can be harmful if improperly taken. And, some of today's wonderful new drugs, prescribed for a particular condition, can be dangerous if taken by the wrong person.

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

I hope the current controversy over the use of a tape recorder at town board meetings did not draw attention from the comments I made last week about our community's recreational assets and those who have played a part in providing those "goodies" — and the fact that "we did it ourselves."

From a UPI news release this week:

"The top U.S. SALT II negotiator described today how American persistence, dating back to the Nixon administration, forced Russia to make concessions in reaching the U. S.-Soviet arms limitation treaty. . . . ."

WHAT!!!! You mean that dirty old Nixon had something GOOD come out of his administration???

—I bet some people almost had a heart attack when they read the story.

Another Nixon item:

Those in control of a foreign affairs committee purposely did NOT invite Mr. Nixon to participate in the committee's quest for all-around input from knowledgeable sources.

The reason? Those people didn't want to give the former President an excuse for returning to Washington.

—And to think we are being guided by such short-sighted small minds.

I knew about it before but forgot to make a note. Marvin Thompson, the "boss man" of Knisely National Bank, suffered a heart attack recently and is still recuperating.

'Camp' A Success

—by Rick Hudson, head coach

The first annual Blazer Basketball Camp has ended with over 140 boys and girls participating.

As basketball in northeastern Indiana becomes more competitive each year, it is important that young players develop their skills during the summer months. The campers received instruction in each of the fundamentals of the game.

I am definitely encouraged. We had as many campers as any of the schools in the area, and more than most of them. Since it was the first of its kind at Eastside, we feel it was a big success.

Valerie Gates was in charge of the two girls' sessions. She was assisted by Laurie Culler, Amy Hampel, Lisa Johnson, Kandy Kaser, Paula King, Sunda Obendorf and Darlene Smith.

The two boys' sessions were assisted by assistant coach Jim White and 1979 graduate Ed Moughler.

In addition to fundamentals, the values of teamwork, sportsmanship, dedication and desire were stressed.

Campers played in a league game each day, viewed basketball films and film strips, competed in many skills contests, and played in a one-on-one tournament during each two-week session.

The following girls participated in Session I (girls with perfect attendance are indicated with an asterisk):

GRADE 3—Monica Nelson*, Crystle King*, Susan Landrum*, Kelly Grogg*, Shelly Baker*, Stephanie Livengood*, Shelly Hudson*, Lynette Ludeker*, Lori Kreke, Tonya Handshoe, Dawn Shafer*, Julie Munsey* and Julie Blair*.

GRADE 4—Michelle Dangler*, Dawn Dallas*, Melissa Casebere* and Tina Chapman*.

GRADE 5—Joan Sechler, Lisa Krontz*, Lisa Vinson*, Yvonne Burnett*, Pam Hamman*, Bobby Gerber* and Polly Work.

The one-on-one champ was Bobby Gerber. Dribbling champ was Joan Sechler and Shelly Hudson was the free throw winner. All received trophies for their efforts.

Boys participating in Session I included:

GRADE 4—Kevin Livengood*, Jeff Shultz*, Larry Thimlar, Kirk Franz*, Tommy Weicht*, Bill Thompson , Darrin Dickerhoof, Bruce Crowl*, Tony Sparkman*, Jack Lilly and Jeff Munsey*.

GRADE 5—Tony Emenhiser*, Mike Krieg*, John Riggs*, Glen Emenhiser*, Robby Zerkle*, Billy Parker*, Noel Eck*, Brian Lane*, Mark Grueter*, Mike Prosser* and Clint Walter*.

The one-on-one champion was Tony Emenhiser. Brian Lane won the free throw award and Tony Emenhiser also won the dribbling award and the perfect attendance award. Mike Krieg made the most baskets in 30 seconds.

The following girls participated in Session II:

GRADE 6—Jacki Moore*, Debbie Riggs*, Mindy Maker*, Toby Shinabery*, Jodi Baker, Christy Surface , Yvette Harrold, Misty Smith*, Melissa Hullinger*, Stephanie Kurtz*, Bobby Burnett*, Julie Hollabaugh*, Jennie Hollabaugh*, Shanna Crowl*, Barbara Haines*, Renee Hiler*, Valerie Cook*, Dyan Armstrong*, Theresa Gollmer*, Mechelle Dallas*, Kim Pope, Lori Mason, Lillian McConnell and Lisa Petre.

GRADE 7—Michelle Freese*, Holly Ferguson, Rena Smith*, and Angie Gollmer*.

GRADE 8—Melinda Krontz*, Pam Wade*, Marilyn Bishir, Ann Stanton, Kelly Hoover*, Lisa Fetters*, Diane Smith*, Charlene Thimlar*, Pam Spencer*, Jane Hollabaugh*, Sheila Herrick* and Mary Obendorf*.

The one-on-one champ was Ann Stanton, the dribbling champ Misty Smith, and Jane Hollabaugh the free throw champ. Yvette Harrold was the perfect attendance award winner.

The following boys participated in Session II:

GRADE 6—Curt Vinson*, Keith Crowl*, Tim Rayle*, Scott Dove, Kevin Cook*, Rick Lilly, Paul Lucarelli and Terry Bacon.

GRADE 7—Dennis Moughler*, Steve Lengacher*, Joe Camp*, Craig Underhill*, Clair Lengacher*, Dennis Hildebrandt*, Aaron Willard*, Jeff Kaiser*, Craig Lake, Doug Schiffli*, Phil Carper*, Mark Eck*, Greg Morris*, Tom DePriest*, Rick Kessler*, Bruce Everetts*, Jennings Rowe and Scott Nagel.

GRADE 8—Ron Mausteller*, Mitch Snyder*, Skip Keltner*, Roger Prentice , Jeff Vinson, Vince Freese*, Rich Kaiser*, Greg Kaiser*, Vince Grogg*, Troy Shuman*, Joe Coats*, Steve Carper, Terry Strock* and Mark Mullett*.

Mark Mullett was the one-on-one champ and the tossback champ. Vince Freese won the free throw contest and Steve Lengacher won the perfect attendance award.

Every camper received a certificate of participation, a book called "Garage Door Basketball" and a camp T-shirt.

I would like to thank all those people who helped make the first camp a success. This includes the campers, their parents, the coaches, the high school administration and the secretarial staff.

We hope to expand the camp next summer to include more features with the same quality instruction.

Tape Recorder Conflict Still Unresolved

The town board met briefly Friday evening at 6:30 p.m. to continue its meeting of the previous Monday evening. A discussion was held at the outset concerning the use of a tape recorder by board member Maurice Kline. Immediately after board president Butch Coburn called the meeting to order, member Loretta Loy submitted a motion to postpone the meeting further. Another motion was made later to bar the use of a tape recorder, with Mrs. Loy and Mr. Coburn voting in favor of the motion. Mr. Kline refused to turn the recorder off, however, stating that he was entitled to record the meeting if he so desired.

Ted Haberkorn asked the question, "What are you afraid of?" and Mrs. Loy said she wasn't afraid of anything; she just didn't think the recorder was necessary, stating that "everything is in the minutes." The editor took exception to that statement and said that everything isn't in the minutes, that the content of the minutes is as detailed as the clerk may see fit to make them and to the extent that the clerk has knowledge of board action.

From a legal standpoint, the minutes need only contain a record of action taken by the board through resolutions voted on by the board.

Both sides of the controversy felt that town attorney Brad Thomas had given each side an answer favorable to their side. A possible misunderstanding of what he said came with his comments at the meeting that the town board has the authority to establish procedure. But banning the press from meetings, banning the use of recorders, is an entirely different question. He noted that an executive or "closed" session cannot be used to propose and pass resolutions. Action taken by the board must be in open session.

During the exchange, Mrs. Loy said the editor was at the meeting only because he was looking for a story about a fight over a tape recording. No comments were directed toward Tonda Miller and Paula Tintsman who also attended the meeting.

Mrs. Loy again made a motion to postpone the meeting, but Mr. Coburn said there were a few matters which required immediate attention.

The meeting did end a short time later with no date set for another try.

The controversy comes at a time when the town budget normally would be under consideration. The budget must be prepared by the beginning of August for publication in two newspapers, the local paper plus another of opposite political affiliation, as required by state statutes.

New Residents 'Caught In Middle,

Some of the information contained in last week's report of town board problems was not explained adequately to avoid some misunderstanding. It led some people to believe, apparently, that a couple of town residents sought personal gain at the expense of the town. I should have made the circumstances more clear.

Nick Carr stopped in at the News Office Saturday to give some further details related to a digging problem at the Carr residence. The problem is due to the fact that a new sidewalk (poured before the Carrs purchased the house) was poured over an old sidewalk AND extended wider than the old walk far enough that it was impossible to locate the water shut-off unless some digging was done.

Beyond that, the matter becomes a question of who should pay for locating the shut-off. Though the property owner is responsible for keeping the shut-off accessible at all times, this particular one became inaccessible before the Carrs bought the place. So, they did not think they should pay — which is the way anyone would feel. Town board member Loretta Loy obligated the town as an act of cooperation, considering the circumstances.

Mike Cearbaugh came over to the church league ball diamond Monday afternoon as I was raking some dirt back into the water-filled low spots after the Sunday night rain. He pointed out that only a small portion of the property involved in the laying of some new tile was the Cearbaughs'. There is other property benefitting from the tiling. And be noted that the whole town benefits from the tiling because a mosquito-breeding area has been "dried up" to a certain extent. He said there was sewage flowing in the water which surfaced due to tile breakdown.

During the conversation, Mike noted that he donated his labor last year in doing some tile work in the same area. I was not aware of that fact before.

The Cearbaughs have changed a mosquito-breeding unsightly "swamp" into a grassy, attractive sightly asset to the town. I mentioned this months ago, along with a mention of the Ron Hensleys, also new residents in Saint Joe, who have done their part in making the same block area a pleasant sight.

Most important to me is the fact that Nick and Mike volunteered information which I obviously had not "dug up" (no pun intended). Without their frank and open cooperation, it would not be possible to correct any injustices which may have been done in last week's article about the matter. These were friendly conversations; there was no anger shown.

In this situation, as in many others which bring problems, it is obvious that there are certain legal technicalities about who's supposed to do what that oftentimes "just don't seem right." And while it may seem better to "bend the rules" a little in order to get things done, there is always the possibility that the next "bending" may be to your disadvantage, rather than advantage. Then where is your protection???

"Rule bending" must be very selective, based on unusual circumstances. This is where the judgment of public officials enters the picture, and support of those officials by the public must be based on the public's confidence in that judgment.

A regular practice of "bending the rules" leads to continual competition to seek favor from town officials.

It's best to know what the rules are and stick to them. That way, everyone knows where they stand.

Another thing. Mike said the estimated cost of tiling for the Cearbaugh-Hensley-Miller property area was given to Mrs. Loy. However, in answer to my question, board president Butch Coburn confirmed the fact that the estimate was not presented by her to the board as a whole for discussion.

In town matters, you just do not go around OK-ing $1,300 obligations. You may have that amount of money in the bank, but it is controlled as to how it may be spent. It isn't the same as a personal bank account where you can take on every kind of obligation governed only by "X" number of dollars in your account.

Just a few years ago, a town board member obligated the town for some $1200 in materials. According to town clerk-treasurer Emma Frank, the town attorney had to be contacted to "finagle" town finances in order to get the bill paid.

Somehow, for the past eight years, it just hasn't seemed to "soak in" that running a town isn't the simple process of just saying "let's do it" and do it. There is much more to it.

36 In Pre-School For Handicapped

—by Mike Graham, executive director

Another school year has come to completion. This has been our biggest year ever, with 36 children being enrolled at the year's end. It is a time when we look back and try to evaluate what has been accomplished. We believe that for most of the children it has been a year of growth, in spite of our inadequacies. Ten of these children will be moving on into the public school system in the fall. Our hearts will go with them as they enter this big new world of learning.

We are saddened by the departure of two of our staff members. John Honess has served as a teacher assistant during the past semester. He is one of those multi-talented persons who can and does do well at all that needs doing. He has made so many valuable contributions to our work and we will miss him as a staff member and a friend. Our social worker, Carol Juergensen, has returned to Indiana University School of Social Work for her masters degree. She was loved by the staff, the children, and by most everyone whose life she touched. Her talents as a social worker are second to none. The lives of the children and staff have been deeply enriched by John and Carol.

In discussing developmental disabilities, we must include cerebral palsy (CP). CP is the label given to a group of disabling symptoms resulting from permanent damage to certain portions of the brain. The child with CP may have impaired ability to use his or her hands, arms, feet, legs and body. The ability to coordinate eyes and hearing with other body movements may also be impaired. Some or all of these symptoms may be present, depending upon the extent and severity of brain damage.

While children afflicted with CP vary as to the severity of their symptoms, they share in this hope: with early diagnosis, parent awareness and education, early infant stimulation and subsequent early childhood programming for physical, perceptual and language development, a level of adjustment is possible, which for many would otherwise have been unthinkable.

The developmental years (birth to 18 years) are crucial for attaining maximum muscular functioning. Once physical maturity is reached, most of the opportunity for physical development is lost. This, of course, is the function of the preschool. We hope to give them all the advantage we can during their first five years.

I do not intend to imply that the problems presented by CP are easily dealt with. Families of CP children struggle to learn to cope with and adjust to problems most of us do not know even exist. At the preschool we strive to provide not only direct service in the form of treatment and education of the child, but also support services to the child's family.

An estimated 25,000 children a year are newly afflicted with cerebral palsy.

It is listed by the National Health Education Committee as one of the twelve major illnesses and diseases in the United States.

As many as two-thirds of all cerebral palsy children may also be afflicted by some degree of mental retardation.

Sewage Treatment 'Costs Too Much' - !

PART I

(News release from Indiana University. Substitute "Saint Joe" for "Smalltown, U.S.A." in the article; it is appropriate. —Ed.)

Smalltown, U.S.A., and its 495 inhabitants had a problem.

Their sewage system was polluting a nearby lake.

State and federal agencies, charged with legislative mandates to clean up the nation's rivers and streams and make them "swimmable and fishable," advised Smalltown's government to clean up the act or face punitive action.

Small town did just that. A new, centralized sewage collection and treatment system was constructed at a cost of more than $600,000.

Now, the people of Smalltown and future generations of Smalltown residents have an even greater problem — paying for the new sewer system.

Although the name Smalltown is fictitious, the problem and its solutions are very real in rural communities throughout the country — from Earl Park and Whitestown in Indiana, to Lake Villa, Illinois; Napolean, Ohio; Munising, Michigan; and Rangely Lake, Maine.

This became obvious during a recent two-day water quality management workshop in Terre Haute conducted by Indiana University's School of Public and Environmental Affairs under a grant from the Indiana Commission for Higher Education.

Delegations came from Terre Haute, Danville, Hillsboro, Earl Park, Rockville, Wakarusa, Clinton, Greenwood, Washington, Scottsburg and other Indiana communities in search of answers.

One participant noted that even with federal and state funding of up to 85% of the expense involved in installing a new sewage treatment plant, the cost still would be more than the assessed valuation of the entire town.

"The town could be purchased, lock, stock and barrel, for less money than it would take to construct the plant."

Individual after individual rose in the IU meeting to express the same concern, and to plead for help in finding more cost-effective methods of sewage disposal.

They spoke of monthly user charges of $20 to $30, spread out over 20, 30 and 40 years, to pay for new systems.

Defining the problems of small towns was part of the reason Indiana University conducted the workshop. The other was to find answers, through dialogs between local, state and federal officials involved in water quality control.

Government is sympathetic, they were told, and is mending, or amending, its ways to provide much-needed assistance.

For instance, Douglas M. Costle, administrator of the U. S. Environmmental Protection Agency, said at a similar conference in Virginia in 1977: "In setting national priorities and developing plans for abating pollution, the special conditions and advantages of our smaller communities have not always been taken fully into consideration.

". . . . some of the costs and planning approaches that have been developed now appear out of step with small town realities."

EHS Baseball

Reports to the News Office of the summer baseball activities of the DeKalb Eastside Blazers have been nil. But picking up from reports in the Auburn Evening Star, it is encouraging to note the team's 7-3 won-lost record thus far.

Individually, a few names of players from the Riverdale area are noted. Gary Rinard came within one strike of having a no-hitter Saturday as the Blazers faced Central Noble. But a single spoiled Gary's chances for his second no-hitter this year.

Another name popping up frequently (no pun intended) is that of Gary Kaiser. He has been described by Coach Kris Kropf as the team's "old Mister Reliable" and the "Sparky Lyle" of Eastside.

Lonnie Emenhiser, another local boy on the team, pitched 4 2/3 innings Monday before needing relief help from Gary K. At the plate, both Emenhiser and Kaiser had key hits in the 6-4 win over Angola.

Another name not making the headlines but "really in there" is Rich Timmerman. Physically small compared to most other players, Rich makes up for lack of size with hustle and savvy. Just a couple of years ago or so, Gary K was a "little man" on the Blazer squad. Now he's an important member of the team. So Rich has the same pattern of progress to be followed in his high school sports career.

The Blazers lost to Bellmont Tuesday night.

In the first win over Sports Den, Lane Warner was the winning pitcher and had 5 strikeouts. Tony Michael was the starting pitcher for Vulcraft and had 13 strikeouts.

Todd Schowe had a home run for the winners and Warner had two doubles.

Against Barnharts, Steve Warner started and had 10 strikeouts but was relieved by Lane Warner, the winner.

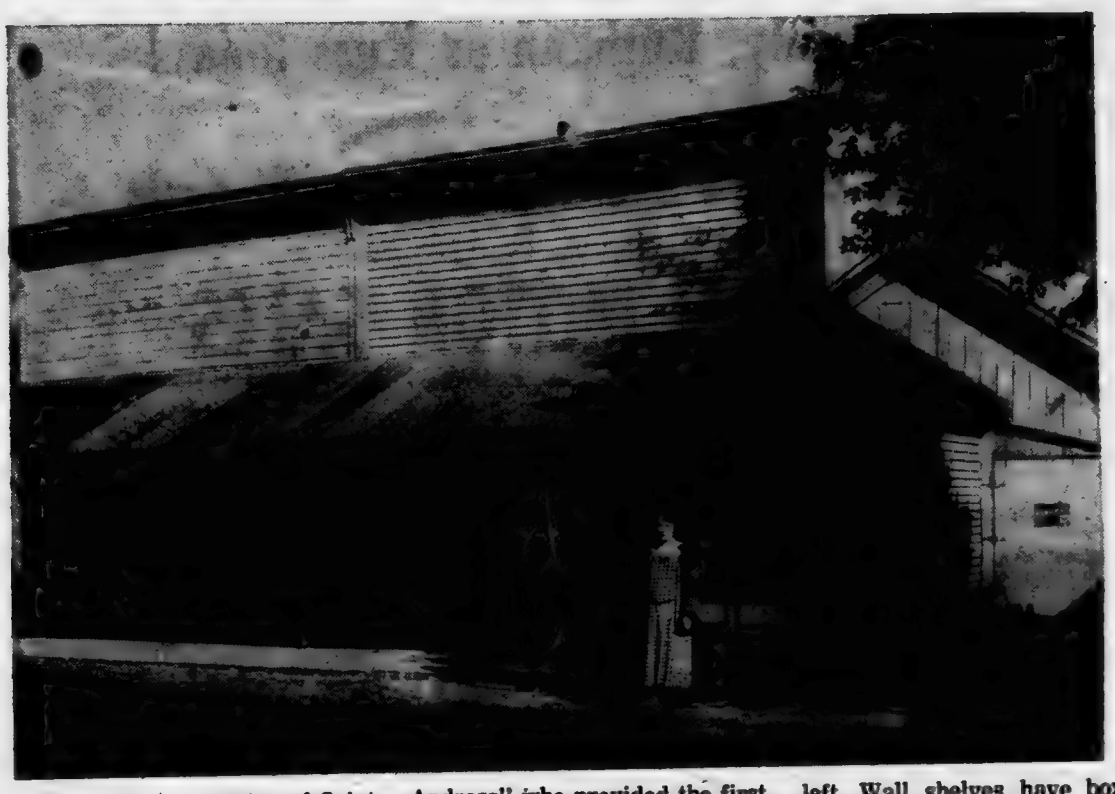
Old Photos Show Hursh General Store Of 1920's



Neva Hursh, a native of Saint Joe who has resided on School Street for many years, has sold her home and will take residence soon at the Betz Nursing Home at Auburn.

In making preparations for the move, she came up with a couple of photographs dating back to the 1920's when she and her late husband, Harry G. Hursh, operated the "Central Grocery." Later the Hursh's added to the variety of merchandise available at the store and it became a general store. "The only thing we didn't have was meat," Neva said, in relating the store to community needs. "The Baileys had meat and Buckingham's Meat Market was across the street," she added.

Neva (Andress) Hursh was born in the house now occupied by the Fred Durst family at the west end of Saint Joe. Her father, Marshall Andress, was Saint Joe's first town marshall So it was "Marshall Marshall Andress" who provided the first law enforcement locally.

Before opening the store at Saint Joe, Mr. Hursh clerked in a grocery and men's clothing store at Garrett. The Hursh's operated the Saint Joe store for 13 years, then closed. The store was torn down and some of the lumber went into a small house built by Willard Hurni at the west end of town. Mr. Hurni had rented the rear of the store building for a cream station.

Mr. Hursh then worked as a sort of "handyman" in the community before the couple went to Ann Arbor to work on the University of Michigan campus. They were there six years, then he died of leukemia. Mrs. Hursh returned to Saint Joe.

The accompanying larger photo shows Mrs. Hursh standing between a heating stove and a showcase which appears to contain a number of cigar boxes and candy. Straw hats are on top of the case at the left. Wall shelves have boxes of clothing items.

The other photo shows Mrs. Hursh standing outside the store next to a gas pump. (She does not remember how much gas cost in those days, although she said she pumped gas many times.) The store appears actually to be two separate buildings which were at some time joined by making an archway between the two, as is the case with the old News Office building which is now the east third of Brown Furniture & Hardware and used for furniture display since 1967.

The Hursh store was located on what is now a vacant lot across from the hardware and is now the property of Steve Monroe.

The News appreciates the cooperation of Mrs. Hursh in providing the photos for the benefit of those who may be interested in the history of Saint Joe.

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

The tears slowly formed and were wiped away from time to time as Edna Morr's remembrance of son Norman overwhelmed her when she brought in the little memorial appearing elsewhere in this issue. She said, "Oh, if he could just see his boys now." Jeff and Tom are helping Grandad Walter in field work. And Tom always has lunch with his grandparents, "just like Norman did," Edna fondly reminisced. "And he always stopped at the house before going home," she said.

—Just a few lines, in a little weekly newspaper. But oh what memories they hold—of love, of devotion, of family ties and little personal habits that are so precious to parents, and grandparents—and eventually to the young ones as they grow up and themselves become parents, and grandparents.

Some people think such closeness is a "handicap" to young people as they grow up. I feel sorry for those who are that critical. They don't know what they've missed.

Agencies' Administrative Trickery

The question is often asked: "How did the governmental agencies get so much power? How can they establish regulations and nobody seems to know about it?"

The answer is in the legislative trickery which has characterized acts of Congress for the past 40-plus years. The trickery has become very pronounced in recent years.

Under the guise of making the general public a "participant" in the formulation of regulations, public meetings are set up in several locations across the nation. However, these locations are so far distant for the majority of people that they hardly give a second thought to attending one of these meetings, if indeed they know about the meetings in the first place. So much regulatory paperwork is spewing out of Washington, filling the wastebaskets of the news media because of the volume, that there is a sort of "numbness' which creeps in related to public information. (A similar situation exists at the state level and occasionally even down to the local level).

A news release received recently from the Food and Nutrition Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture stated that "the public will have one additional week to comment on a proposal to give schools participating in the national school lunch and breakfast program an option in the way they announce income eligibility criteria for free and reduced price meals."

Now how many people are going to comment on that subject? How many people know what it's all about? (Should people be expected to know what it's all about???) Who says the free and reduced price lunch program is needed? Who says a breakfast program is needed?

I know, I know. The reply will come, "You should see some of the students in our school. The school lunch is probably the only decent meal they get in a day."

I'm not talking about those who need the program. I am talking about those who WORK in the program as a full-time occupation at taxpayers' expense. I am talking about the supposed "public participation" or "public input" in the program through such meetings as referred to in the above news release. I am talking about the huge bureaucratic system which starts with the needs of a few and slowly expands to include more and more people considered "needy" by the bureaucracy.

It's pretty slick. You set up a federal or state program and announce public meetings from time to time. Then, if anyone raises a question about the program later on, agency personnel can say, "Well, there was a public meeting on such and such a date. You should have said something then."

See how it works? The agency already has a plan or proposal it wants to institute. The failure of the public to attend and raise questions serves as an automatic "stamp of approval" on the proposal. (Governmental agency personnel do not understand that John Q. Public can't attend these meetings due to job commitments and the distance involved. After all, attending "public input" meetings by governmental personnel is part of their work day.)

The above-mentioned news release sets the pattern of justification for itself in the following concluding statement: "The proposal was published in the Federal Register on May 25."

Why sure, I remember it now. How forgetful of me. I should have gone to the public meeting or sent my comments to the USDA's Food and Nutrition Program right away. I guess I have no right to complain. After all, they DID announce a public meeting or gave time for public response.

. . . . That's how we come under the control of governmental agencies without our legislators' actually having approved rules, regulations and procedures. Who could possibly keep up with all the meetings of all the governmental agencies related to our everyday living? Who could possibly find the time to participate in EVERY announced program seeking public input? Such constant "watchdog" efforts by every citizen are required — if you are going to protect yourself from social and welfare planners. Somehow I don't believe that's the way it's supposed to be in this country.

It's administrative trickery and it exists because our legislator's do not look in practical terms at the implications of todays so-called "public input" meetings and programs.

.....And More Of The Same

My ignorance was showing Thursday of this week.

I went to a "public hearing" at the court house concerning an unfair labor practice complaint filed by Donna Hollabaugh as representative of the Eastern DeKalb Education Association. The "public hearing" was the responsibility of the Indiana Education Employment Relations Board.

I went because I had some questions in my mind which I thought I would have an opportunity to present. But I didn't have the opportunity because I misinterpreted the meaning of "public hearing." At least that is the impression I ended with after a conversation with the man who was present only for the purpose of setting up and operating tape recording equipment used for the hearing. My conversation with him came during a recess, after some 2½ hours of statements, examination and cross-examination

During the 3½ hours I was at the "public hearing," no mention was made of any time to be devoted to public input after the recess.

Here are some impressions I gained in total from the first part of the hearing (I left after the recess):

1. The use of the unfair labor practice charge can be abused in that obvious "nit-picking" accusations (or as school attorney Charlie Winans put it, "feelings") bring on time-consuming and costly public hearings.

2. Advance notice of "public hearings" do not require reasonable advance notice to the public (this "hearing" was announced to news media in a Monday, July 16, press release received Tuesday, July 17, about the Thursday, July 19, "public hearing").

3. Negotiations on a new contract between the eastern district and the teachers, including the school calendar, were still in progress when the school board voted early in April to adopt school calendars for school years 1979-80 and 1980-81. (My conclusion is that the board did so to let its negotiations representatives know what it wished to adopt.)

4. This year was the "best year" in negotiations for some time, an admission gained from Mrs. Hollabaugh by Mr. Winans during cross-examination—then came the unfair labor practices accusation by the teachers against the school board.

5. UniServ, the teachers' protective arm of the Indiana State Teachers Association at the local level, was representing the eastern teachers and providing counsel at the "public hearing" on a matter (the school calendar) being discussed at negotiations, but UniServ was not present at negotiation sessions and did not know firsthand what had transpired and what had been discussed.

6. Teachers, through UniServ, actively seek to keep negotiations and even just informal discussions a secret. (During the recess Thursday, the hearing examiner raised no objection to my remaining in the hearing room during the recess. But when informal comments began to be exchanged by the hearing examiner, Mr. Winans and the UniServ representative, Gerald Geen, Mr. Geen suggested that they talk in private. (It was obvious who he didn't want to hear the conversation.)

The above are adequate reason to cause concern. But the most disturbing realization is this:

Though the questions and answers and statements at the "public hearing" dealt with details related to the charge of unfair labor practices aginst the school board, the REAL reason for the whole costly procedure is that teachers do not want to start school after Labor Day. THAT'S the real "down to earth" reason. But in the legalistic procedures followed in these matters, the REAL reason is only referred to as a passing thought.

Thus, in matters pertaining to the function of our school system, THE PUBLIC IS IGNORED. Not once did I hear any question asked (as I asked at the April meeting when the calendars were adopted): "Why are you changing back to opening school ater Labor Day?"

As far as I can tell, from the procedure followed at Thursday's "public hearing," there is no consideration given to or sought for the general public, parents of school children in particular. The reason given at the April meeting, in answer to my question, was that the early school opening of the previous three years caused great inconvenience to parents. THAT'S what ought to be discussed at any hearing about the current charge of unfair labor practices by our teachers against the school board, because THAT'S the reason—the ONLY reason—a complaint was filed in the first place.

Here we have less than 100 people (the faculty) causing a big fuss, resulting in a lot of time and expense including a "public hearing"—and no consideration is given to the hundreds of families affected.

Here are a few of the questions I wanted to ask but could not—and they are relevant to the complaint filed by Mrs. Hollabaugh in behalf of the DeKalb eastern teachers:

How many are on the faculty in the entire school district?

How many are involved in post-graduate study?

How many seek summer employment as a NECESSARY source of income?

How many actual INSURMOUNTABLE barriers are encountered in taking post-graduate study or in seeking summer employment, when school starts AFTER Labor Day?

These are the questions which get to the heart of the controversy, not the ones being asked during 2½ hours of a portion of a "public hearing."

President's Speech A 'Near Miss'

As I listened to President Carter's speech Sunday night, I found myself encouraged by his obvious easy-going easy-speaking pattern of the past replaced by a more forceful and challenging approach. The TV commentators later described the speech as "almost a sermon."

We've needed a national sermon for a long time.

I thought the speech was a good one, overall, except for one thing—and that one thing was noted by one of the "ordinary people" interviewed immediately after the speech.

That one point is, after jolting viewers with a "sermon," the President outlined his "solution" to the energy problem. And the solution is a couple of new agencies and lots of dollars. As the interviewed "ordinary citizen" said, why do we need another federal agency to cope with the situation? We have too many governmental agencies now; we don't need one or two new agencies.

And—what about letting free enterprise take care of the problem?

The headlines the day after the speech told of the President's assurance that we can eliminate our dependency on foreign oil—for $120 billion!

If someone says, "Well, free enterprise hasn't come up with anything yet. So, the government must step in"—keep in mind that controls DESTROY initiative and energy production is controlled. Take the railroads. Their failure to provide efficient and prompt service brought on "Conrail" and "Amtrak." Millions of federal tax dollars have been spent for the railroads under government supervision.

What did we get? A mass of derailments due to faulty roadbeds, undependable schedules, and finally a cutback on passenger service. Governmental control was not the answer.

Look at the trucking industry. After gaining much of the freight business formerly enjoyed by railroads, the trucking industry WANTS to continue to be under federal control. Why? Because such control eliminates decision-making involved in a competitive atmosphere. Those who have in recent months been advocating the re-establishment of a competitive free-enterprise condition in the trucking industry have found their greatest opposition coming from—the trucking industry. This is weird. Ordinarily you have private enterprise seeking to be relieved of controls. But in this case we have the trucking industry WANTING to be controlled by federal regulations. At least that's the picture I get in reading pertinent material about the situation.

The President's speech about solutions to energy problems could have been even more forceful than it was; but the American public is not about to accept the fact that their demand for self-pleasure and comfort is at the root of the energy problem.

To illustrate, one of the President's objectives is to regulate the setting of thermostats in public buildings so that the air conditioning is not set too low and the heat is not set too high from season to season. I heard an employee in a government office complain the other day because is was not cool enough in that building. When I had entered the building, I had noticed that it was cooler than outside; it felt comfortable and any lower temperature would have been "chilly." That employee said the discomfort with the higher air conditioner temperature setting was also due to the fact that it was "dead air" in the building.

The fact of the matter is, an air conditioner eliminates "dead air," it sets up a circulation of air.

Thus, within a government office, the personal comfort of an individual was more important to that individual than was the problem of our excessive use of energy sources. It is a good example, I think, of how "comfort conditioned" we have become. And air conditioning is the most widely used utility that Americans have come to consider a virtual necessity.

In other words, we are "comfort spoiled."

I am not saying that air conditioning should be banned. I am saying that the reasonable use of air conditioning has been exceeded for a quite some time and it is one of the main drains on our energy sources. It takes a lot of electricity and it reduces the miles-per-gallon of automobiles.

This relates to the President's speech in that a really "tough" stand on energy consumption cannot be taken because Americans don't want to face the fact that they have been spoiled. It relates in that the answer is not in $120 billion tax dollars; the answer is in facing things as they actually are and making a change in the American lifestyle and a change in our approach to solving the energy problem—a problem which arose not because of dwindling supply but because of exhorbitant consumption.

The President's sermon was a good one. It should be accompanied by a challenge to our private enterprise ingenuity. Instead of a $120 billion government program (tax money which must be collected, recorded and dispensed and that means the total cost to the taxpayer will be closer to $300 billion or so), throw the problem out to private enterprise. Tell it, "Here, we need a synthetic fuel. All your research and development costs will be deductible from your taxes. Now, go to it!"

I am aware that I may be oversimplifying. But I also know it is cheaper in the long run to let competition seek a goal than to have business and industry waiting for federal grants for research. The competition should be in getting the first synthetic fuel, not in getting a federal grant.

Sewage Treatment 'Costs Too Much' - !

—from Indiana University

PART II

For instance, Douglas M. Costle, administrator of the U. S. Envirominmental Protection Agency, said at a similar conference in Virginia in 1977: "In setting national priorities and developing plans for abating pollution, the special conditions and advantages of our smaller communities have not always been taken fully into consideration.

". . . . some of the costs and planning approaches that have been developed now appear out of step with small town realities."

Costle added: "Our experience shows that costs that exceed $66 to $130 per year for the typical homeowner in small towns will lay a heavy financial burden on many poorer residents."

Annual user charges and debt retirement costs are $240 in Dugger, Indiana; $350 in Lake Villa, Illinois, and Napolean, Ohio.

In 89 midwestern communities, 65% of the user charges per family of four exceed $100; 31% exceed $130; 9% exceed $200; 5% exceed $300.

James L. Gamble, president of the town board in Whitestown, Indiana, told the IU workshop participants of a $12 minimum monthly charge — escalating by $2 per 1,000 gallons of water used above 2,000 gallons — that residents of Whitestown are paying toward construction, maintenance and operation of a new sewer system for that town's 569 people. The water bill is extra.

The total cost of the Whitestown project was estimated in 1968 at $370,200, or a cost to local homeowners of $6 a month, "certainly under $10," Gamble said. Revised government standards also revised the final cost to $546,000 "or just slightly over the assessed value of the entire town!"

Under a 1977 amendment to the federal clear water act, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is encouraging rural communities to consider alternative methods.

These include a community-owned septic system, individually owned septic and holding tanks, soil absorption fields, a sewer system only for those sections of town with pollution problems, aeration plants, package plants and low pressure sewers.

The EPA will increase its share of the cost to 85% (75% for a conventional sewage treatment system) for approved "alternative and innovative" plans.

Additional sources of funding of a town's share of the construction costs include Farmers Home Administration, Federal Financing Bank, Housing and Urban Development and other federal agencies.

Alternative and innovative legislation evolved out of outcries against the construction of oversized systems, high annual operation and maintenance costs and too high monthly sewer fees for small communities with a high percentage of low and fixed income people. Large cities can spread the cost of a sewage system over a larger area and among a larger number of users. As a result, people in large cities, which cause greater pollution problems than small communities, pay less in user fees.

Each community must determine the sewage disposal method best suited environmentally and economically to its people.

Your dry cows are crying for attention

It's easy to treat dry cows like second-class citizens. And it's not hard to figure out why. You take care of your milking herd first. And probably think the dry cows are on vacation.

But you can't afford to treat them that way. Because a dry cow is on the world's busiest holiday. It's tuneup time for the next lactation. It's the finishing period for her unborn calf. It's preparation for the stress of calving. Plus the heavy milk production ahead.

Your dry cows need all the help you can give. Don't let 'em down. That's why Wayne has invested so much research on dry cow care.

Let us show you today's best tuneup for hard-working tired udders, with the special Wayne dry-cow health and feeding program. Also, the precise steps to take to prevent most freshening-time problems.

It all helps you become one of the smart dairymen who have so little trouble with their cows.

Wayne cares. So do we.
That's what makes the difference.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

Legislators don't watch—and listen???

Not always true.

I put a little "editor's note" on a recent "Did you know that—" suggesting extravagance in the announced coming installation of a swimming pool at Potawatomi Inn at Lake James. With the lake near at hand, my opinion was that the pool isn't needed.

However, Norm Gerig, State Representative of our area, informed me this week of the reasons behind the project. The main one is—the inn is losing winter tourist trade, especially family groups, to a nearby Holiday Inn. Over the long run, the attraction of a swimming pool is expected to increase the number who use the park inn and thus increase revenue to meet year-round overhead at the state park.

I'm glad Norm gave me the information because the winter tourist trade never entered my mind. And I can now see that the legislature's action is reasonable and logical.

Norm said additional improvements are being made in the "warming up" facilities at the park's toboggan and ice rink.

—Thanks, Norm.

The ACD Miss Northeast Indiana Pageant is being held this week. That's the contest in which area young women compete for the honor of representing northeast Indiana in further competition—and win some scholarships along the way.

I've often wanted to attend the pageants, but stayed away out of fear—fear that those who would see me there would know I was just there to ogle the girls when everyone else is there because they look upon the girls as persons and are attending to be entertained by the girls' talents. . . . . oh???

A headine in the Auburn Evening Star brought these thoughts to mind. The headline read: "Experienced judges to select new Miss Northeast Indiana."

I read the list of judges' names and didn't recognize any of them. But it struck me—not one of the male judges is a "dirty old man"—not from what the article told.

Now how can you have a contest which includes swimsuit and evening gown competition —and not have a dirty old man on the panel of judges???

When Pastor Schuette made remarks at Carl Carpenter's funeral Wednesday, it was a rather difficult thing to do because, as pastor at Auburn, he is not particularly well acquainted with members of St. Mark church at Saint Joe.

But he did know enough about Carl to point out the "relatedness to the soil" represented by Carl's lifetime of farming. It was very appropriate.

One thing I remember about Carl and the soil, as does Violette Kline among others, is that he "promoted" for many years a Biblical teaching that every seventh year, the soil should be given a "rest." Carl was definitely not a believer in government regulation to solve farm problems. He believed that if the Biblical teaching were followed, the ups and downs of scarcity and plenty would be generally overcome.

Carl often stopped in at the News Office. As often as not, he would have some stalks of grain, or some beans, or something, in his hand to tell about.

A couple of summers ago when I was taking Mark up to Butler for baseball practice and we passed Carl's farm, I pointed out toward the fields where Carl was walking with that slow, ambling gait of his. I told Mark, "Some people think Carl is out of step with today's farming. But he knows the soil. It looks as if he if is just taking a walk. But he is actually looking around just to see how things look. He really KNOWS his land."

In the past year, Carl lost his mental faculties and eventually even had to be restrained. That is the sad part of the story. Yet, there is something uplifting even in that circumstance: perhaps it was his innermost spirit of independence struggling to free itself from confinement and get back to his soil.

This week—he made it.

Rain Delays Local Tourneys

Riverdale Youth League adults and players had the local lighted ball diamond well prepared for the start of tourney games Monday night. A lot of work went into stringing the streams of banners, filling gaps in the fence and placing boards for reinforcement and cleaning the entire area. It looked "super."

Opening night's crowd is estimated at some 300 fans and players.

The Riverdale entry won the second game Monday night to advance in the tourney. But rain Tuesday and Wednesday played havoc with the original schedule. And as this was written, it was not known how the re-scheduling would be done. However, the girls' tourney games for Thursday and Friday this week appeared to be "on."

Butler Invitational

The Butler Invitational Little League All-Star Tournament gets under way in the major division Saturday, July 28, with Riverdale playing Edon (O) at 11:00 a.m. There are ten teams in the tourney. Subsequent games are set for July 31, August 2, 3, 6, 7, 8 and 9.

It is a double-elimination tourney.

In the minor division at Butler, Riverdale lost its first game.

Hopewell Leads

The Saint Joe Church League saw its leading team go down to defeat last week. Undefeated Hopewell, in the league for the first time this year, was downed by Newville UM.

As the league goes into its final two weeks Monday, there is a chance for some surprises. Though all other teams have suffered three or more losses, one of them could emerge from the bunch to challenge Hopewell which has three more games to go. And Hopewell has seen its season-opening lineup changed somewhat due to players' moving from the community and so on.

The season-ending All-Star game is tentatively set for Friday, August 17, with some open dates in the schedule for possible rainouts in the next two weeks.

In that closing game, the league champions play a team composed of players from all other participating teams who are coached by the second place team's coach.

That night the championship trophy is awarded as is the sportsmanship trophy.

Vacation Bible School

—Nancy Garman, reporter

On Sunday, August 5, St. Mark Lutheran Church in Saint Joe will have a roundup and pre-registration for Vacation Bible School.

Beginning at the church at 4 p.m., there will be a presentation of a "Gathering of God's Given Gifts," including crafts, music, storytelling and other interesting things.

At 6:30 the children will lead a parade to Wild Cherry Park for a family potluck. Each family is asked to bring a covered dish, their own table service and drink.

Daily Bible School sessions will then begin August 6 and run through August 17, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. There will be classes for children from nursery (age 3) through 6th grade.

Included will be Bible lessons, games, songs and handcrafts, all directed to learning more about God and His love for us.

Sewage Treatment 'Costs Too Much' - !

PART III

The previous two articles on the subject of sewage treatment were prepared and issued as a news release by Indiana University. It is perhaps gratifying to some Hoosiers that a state-supported university has provided information on the high costs of sewage treatment as related to small communities such as Saint Joe.

Unfortunately, the environmental enthusiasts received an indirect boost just a few years ago when "Earth Day" was promoted in Indiana as a means to provide public input into environmental problems, especially those problems related to rivers, streams and lakes.

As a member of the news media and as a former town board member, I was invited to participate in a forum at the IU-PU campus at Fort Wayne. What I remember most is the fact that, after I had presented my observations and noted that the per household cost per month for sewage treatment appeared to be a minimum—a minimum— of $12 or $13, a representative of the city of Fort Wayne presented his observations and indicated that he had no idea of the high cost for rural communities. As I recall, Fort Wayne residents paid something like $6 a month for sewage treatment.

I bring this up because the recent news relase from IU is a help to small communities in that it directs attention to a change in attitude by the Environmental Protection Agency toward small communities. The EPA's approach now is, "Sewage treatment plants as proposed and installed during the past several years are too costly for small communities. A different approach is desirable."

It makes one wonder: if the IU-PU campus had not been so readily available to environmental extremists, would we have had an earlier change of heart by the EPA? Small communities were, at the time of "Earth Day," saying the cost of sewage treatment as required by law is prohibitive.

The answer is a matter of opinion. I mention it for the primary purpose of illustrating how access to public educational facilities can be very costly when those who seek to use those facilities are oblivious to anything except perfection.

An article in the July 8, 1979, issue of the Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette sheds more light on the sewage treatment problem. J-G staff writer Royal Calkins points out in the article that a sewage treatment district was set up for Lake James and surrounding area. The proposed installation has a price tag of $16 to $24 million. It would involve 65 miles of sewer lines. Federal grants would cover 75% of the cost, state grants 10% and the balance by homeowners at an average cost of $3,000 per lot PLUS tap-in fees.

But EPA experts have now taken a different attitude. They say that the proposed system would be too costly. They suggest "cluster" sewage systems with around 20 homes hooked into each one. They suggest the use of septic tanks in areas where suitable ground is available for effluent absorption.

The EPA has come up with a new approach to financing, too. If sewage treatment facilities are installed without current "conventional" designs, the federal grant goes up to 85%. With the state still putting in 10%, that leaves the property owner with only a 5% obligation.

Ordinarily, you would expect an enthusiastic response from the lake area homeowners at the suggestion of this new concept with less per-household initial cost. But quite the opposite has occurred. Eloise Willis, secretary of the 800-member Lake James Cottage Owners Association, says cottage owners are not too happy about the new idea. They have accepted the idea (which EPA pushed in years past) that "strong measures" were needed to protect the lake. Out-of-state renters bring in laundry soaps and detergents containing phosphates. (Indiana bans the sale of such products in the state.)

Overall, the picture is a surprising one. Instead of cottage owners complaining about the high cost of installing sewage treatment facilities, those people oppose a lower cost method. And instead of pushing for a massive sewage treatment system as it did at the start, the EPA now suggests doing it another way, with an additional enticement of 10% higher federal aid for the new idea.

A surprise to all has been the discovery that whatever pollution is occurring in Lake James is not just from septic tanks but from nearby Marsh Lake, once the discharge point for Fremont's sewage treatment plant. But some cottage owners say the tests used to arrive at that conclusion were used in late fall, not in summer during the high lake residency season. EPA officials say the tests are effective even in late fall and can detect sewage flows which have been inactive up to six months.

For residents of Saint Joe, the Lake James situation is significant. $3,000 per household, plus tap-in fee, is a pretty big chunk for Lake James property owners. What will it be for Saint Joe property owners, with construction costs here appearing to be at the $2 million mark and that's four times the total assessed valuation of the town!

If the EPA says "we'll pay a higher percentage for innovative ways to treat sewage," is that something which ought to be pursued by the town board?

Twelve years ago, Saint Joe spent twelve hundred dollars for preliminary sewage treatment plans (the total cost then was $350,000). Last year Saint Joe spent twelve THOUSAND dollars for an update of plans (the total cost $2,000,000). It was actually federal funds spent last year—but where do federal funds come from???

Contrary to what some people believe, neither the EPA nor the state stream pollution board decide HOW sewage treatment should be accomplished. They merely say that something must be done, along certain guidelines.

The ultimate decisions are made by those serving on the town board. Though the updated plans present alternatives and recommendations from the engineering firm of Clyde E. Williams & Associates of South Bend, the town board makes the decision as to which way to go.

A strange circumstance exists in that, although $12,000 in federal funds was paid to the engineering firm last year, no decision has been made by the town board as to which plan to pursue—despite the fact that the various plans have varying costs.

How much are Saint Joe property owners willing to pay, just to "get it over with"?

Should Saint Joe investigate "alternatives" and go for a higher percentage federal grant?

Are town board members prepared to make the decisions which only they can make?

(A copy of the Lake James article is available at the News Office for anyone to read if they so desire.)

Revenue Sharing Goes Astray

You probably have noticed the legal notices announcing the consideration by townships and their trustees and advisory boards on the use of federal revenue sharing funds. These are funds returned to the various taxing units for a variety of purposes—though it is difficult to understand how a federal government which spends more than it takes in can "share" revenue with lower units of government.

Not much—if any—public input comes at those announced meetings. But the Council On Aging doesn't miss a bet. That group has its senior citizens informed as to meeting dates for revenue sharing meetings and sees to it that senior citizen representatives attend those meetings and ask for some of the money. That's how they got $1,000 out of the town last year, and something like $900 out of Concord Township and some out of other townships.

Now they are attending the meetings to ask for a cut from revenue funds for the coming year.

I'm not against senior citizens. But I wonder why so little opposition comes from the general public to handing out these funds to senior citizen projects. After all, revenue sharing funds are coming to the Town of Saint Joe TO BENEFIT THE TOWN. Revenue sharing funds are coming back to townships TO BENFIT THE TOWNSHIPS. But instead, the involved public officials are handling those funds as if they were given out to be used for charitable projects. When tax money is being used that way, something is 'way out of whack!

An interesting slant to the use of county revenue sharing funds appeared in the public notice published in the county daily, announcing a July 23 meeting of the county commissioners to consider the use of revenue sharing funds. One paragraph in the legal notice said:

"All citizens, INCLUDING SENIOR CITIZENS (capitalized by me for emphasis), are invited to participate in planning the use of the money."

Why did the notice single out "senior citizens" in particular? Why didn't it say: ". . . . including parents of handicapped children" — or ". . . . including neglected children" — or ". . . including those who want a home shelter" — or ". . . . — you name it.

I think it's a shame that the elected officials in counties, cities, towns and townships are so intimidated by the term "senior citizen" that they automatically feel compelled to give revenue sharing funds just because someone attends a meeting.

I repeat — revenue sharing funds are returned to local taxing units for local purposes. In no way do I see $1,000 a year in usefulness to Saint Joe residents of the senior citizens center at Auburn. No way do I see that many dolars' worth of use to residents of the townships in this immediate area.

The greatest benefit is being derived by those who live in or close to Auburn.

I was invited to a recent noon lunch—or rather chicken dinner —of the senior citizens' nutrition group held at Wild Cherry Park at Saint Joe. I saw some 75 senior citizens having a good time. I saw the cigar box into which they put their donations towards paying for the noon dinners; I made a donation, too.

But at the same time that these senior citizens were enjoying a subsidized dinner, I also heard an announcement of a coming event to which senior citizens were invited. And I heard also, "The cost is five dollars."

I submit that there is something wrong in Denmark when a group of good, responsible people are led to believe they are "paying their way" by paying a dollar and a half for a dinner and at the same time they are considered to be able to shell out five bucks for a coming social event.

If any program serves the citizens of the entire county, then it should be supported at the county level—which sounds as if I am contradicting myself since I have pointed out the specific invitation to senior citizens in the notice about the use of county federal revenue sharing funds. Maybe I am. But I am not contradictory in saying that township and town federal revenue sharing funds should be used directly for the township and town citizens.

What ought to be done, however, is to end the entire program of federal revenue sharing just on principle: you can't share what you ain't got.

Dedication, Not Pay, Is Standard

A comment heard frequently in discussions about the caliber of those seeking public office is something like, "If you want capable people, you must be ready to pay them what they're worth. No one is going to take the harassments in public office for less money than they can get in private business."

I think that observation does an injustice to those capable people who DO serve in public office for what seemingly is low pay. We are inclined to think of these matters too much in terms of dollars and cents and we thus smother the opportunity to inspire upcoming generations with the challenge of "service for others."

There are those people who have served in public office and got out. It wasn't a matter of too-low pay. It was a matter of disillusionment and disappointment.

I can think of two people right here in DeKalb County who were elected by the people, did a good job of representing the people's best interests — and then got out of politics because what they saw going on in government was too much to stomach.

I had a conversation not too long ago with one of those individuals. I didn't need to ask the question, the answer came out voluntarily: "I decided to get out. I got sick of seeing the way taxpayers' money is being wasted in giveaway programs." That comment came after that individual had given me a "thank you" for my editorials about the expense of the senior citizen nutrition program.

When people forget principles and become swayed by emotional appeals to their sympathy, the quality of elected officials suffers. Those elected officials whose responsibilities include establishing policies by which government is carried out must be motivated by more solid standards than "how many people can I get benefits for." We have a federal debt that keeps growing simply because we have had a majority of elected officials whose intentions may have been good — to help those who need help — but whose efforts resulted in not help but handouts. And their efforts have been so far-reaching that we now cannot control the resulting bureaucracy. This "handout" atmsophere reaches clear down to the level of towns and townships.

Those who seek higher pay for themselves on the basis that they are entitled to it because everything else is going up are responsible for continuing the upward trend of the cost of government and the cost of living. We don't have "more capable people" in office for the most part because they don't cater to "appearances" or to certain interests, not because the pay is too low. Some of the "busiest" people get comparatively little done, relying on higher levels of government to tell them what to do and to ultimately make decisions which properly should be made as "close to home" as possible.

Until the public shows greater inclination to vote on principles and overall performance rather than on favoritism and emotionalism, there will continue to be the absence of capable officeholders and govern-

In the June 28 issue of the St. Joe News, a letter appeared concerning the St. Joe-Concord Township Fire Department of DeKalb County, and some of the firemen on that department not filling their responsibility as a fireman on that department.

As a citizen and a taxpayer in this community I have some questions. It is my understanding that the town board of St. Joe and the township trustee of Concord Township are legally responsible in the event of a lawsuit. If this is true, why haven't they stepped in on this matter. It can not be because they are not aware of the fact that there are firemen who are not taking the much needed training, as the training officer, John Sechler, has talked to both town board and township trustee on this matter. You say why don't the fire chief and the officers take care of this matter? They have tried and each time they were outvoted. I would like to get some opinions of the citizens of St. Joe and Concord Township. Please circle your ment at every level will tend to be wasteful and irresponsible. answers to the following questions and send your opinions to Box 205, St. Joe, Indiana 46785 or drop them off at the St. Joe News office.

1. Do you think that all firemen should learn how to operate all fire department equipment?

Yes No

2. Do you think that all firemen should take at least 3 hours of training each and every month and if they miss a training meeting that they should make it up at their convenience?

Yes No

3. Do you think that this training should include automobile rescue and first aid so they can help the public even more than just fire protection?

Yes No

3a. or have automobile rescue and first aid for just the ones that want to take it?

Yes No

In closing I would like to say that if you volunteer for something like the fire department, you should be willing to take part in the training that is being offered and to keep up with new fire fighting procedures for THEIR safety and all concerned.

Thank you.

Your dry cows are crying for attention

It's easy to treat dry cows like second-class citizens. And it's not hard to figure out why. You take care of your milking herd first. And probably think the dry cows are on vacation.

But you can't afford to treat them that way. Because a dry cow is on the world's busiest holiday. It's tuneup time for the next lactation. It's the finishing period for her unborn calf. It's preparation for the stress of calving. Plus the heavy milk production ahead.

Your dry cows need all the help you can give. Don't let 'em down. That's why Wayne has invested so much research on dry cow care.

Let us show you today's best tuneup for hard-working tired udders, with the special Wayne dry-cow health and feeding program. Also, the precise steps to take to prevent most freshening-time problems.

It all helps you become one of the smart dairymen who have so little trouble with their cows.

Wayne cares. So do we.
That's what makes the difference.

TOWN ELECTION FOLLOWS PARTY CONVENTIONS

A review of election procedures by The Editor, including portions of the publication titled "1979 Edition—Indiana Town Election Laws—A Synopsis—Issued Under The Authority of The Indiana State Election Board" (certain portions are direct quotations, as indicated by quotation marks)

1979 is an "off year" as far as elections are concerned—except for cities and towns. This year new municipal officials will be elected by cities and towns under certain similar and certain varying requirements. This includes the "Incorporated Town of St. Joe."

On Tuesday, November 6, 1979, residents of Saint Joe will elect three town trustees and a clerk-treasurer whose terms of office will be January 1, 1980, to December 31, 1983. Larger communities will also be electing new municipal officials (city mayors, city councils).

But there is a difference in the manner of determining the candidates.

In larger cities, a primary election was held in May at which members of both major political parties selected the individuals they wanted to represent their party at the November election.

In primary elections, the candidates individually announce their candidacy and declare their desire to represent their respective parties in seeking election to office in November.

But in small towns, there is no primary election. Instead, the political parties hold separate "conventions" at which those attending nominate potential candidates for each office. If only one nomination is made for a particular office, that nominee then becomes the party's candidate for election in November. When more than one individual are nominated for an office, the convention votes by secret ballot and the potential candidate with the highest vote total at the convention becomes the nominee.

In Saint Joe, there are times when a potential candidate has no competition and there are those times when two, three and even four names may be placed before the convention.

In Saint Joe there are three "wards" with the town board being composed of one trustee from each ward. Thus, the Republican and Democrat parties in Saint Joe will hold conventions this month to nominate three people to run for town board from each party. Also to be nominated at each convention is the all-important candidate for clerk-treasurer from each party.

On occasion, however, when a candidate from one party is known to be available for another term, the other party has not made any nomination; they were content with the past performance of the incumbent candidate.

The following are some of the important guidelines for town elections, as established by law:

The boundaries of the three wards are as follows:

Ward I—all residences north of Washington Street (the main street) from the eastern town boundary to Spencer Street (County Road 59).

Ward II—all residences south of Washington Street from the eastern town boundary to School Street.

Ward III—all residences west of Spencer Street and south of of Washington Street from School Street west.

Residents of the Saint Joe Mobile Home Court are not eligible to vote in town elections inasmuch as the court lies for the most part outside the north boundary of town limits. There may be one or two exceptions.

"Town elections shall be conducted in conformity with the general election laws to the extent practicable."

" 'Convention.' The word 'convention' shall mean an organized body of delegates, representing a political party, subject to the provisions of this act, assembled for the purpose of nominating candidates for office."

" 'Freeholder or Resident Householder.' The words 'freeholder' or 'resident householder' shall mean a person who is a qualified voter in a precinct who is the owner of real estate."

(With Saint Joe lying within the Concord precinct, the precinct committeeman of each of the two major political parties appoints the officers of the respective town party central committees: chairman, vice-chairman of opposite sex of the chairman, secretary and treasurer.)

"The town chairman of each such two (2) parties shall issue a call for a town convention to be held in the town, or, if there be no suitable location in the town, then either in the nearest available location within the county or at the county seat, before the last Saturday in August in each year in which a town election is to be held. . . . and shall cause notice of such call to be posted not less than three (3) calendar days in three (3) prominent places in the town, which notice shall state the time, place, and object of the meeting. All persons residing in the town who are voters or who will be voters at the time of the ensuing town election and who are members of the party holding the convention shall be admitted to the convention and shall be entitled to vote therein."

(There must be not less than 20 voters attending the convention of each party.)

ELIGIBILITY TO VOTE AT A TOWN ELECTION

"To be eligible to vote in a town election a person must meet the following qualifications:

"(a) be at least 18 years of age;

"(b) be a resident of the town;

"(c) have resided in the precinct thirty (30) days immediately preceding such election;

"(d) be registered if, but only if, the town board of trustees has passed an ordinance requiring registration of voters."

(Saint Joe does not APPEAR to have any voter registration ordinance. The validity of a voter's residence requirement thus becomes a responsibility of the officials in charge on election day.)

TOWN ELECTION BOARD

"The clerk is ex officio a member of the town election board and shall appoint two (2) other members, one (1) upon nomination by the town chairman of the party which cast the highest number of votes at the last election for secretary of state in the county, and one (1) upon nomination by the town chairman of the party which cast the next highest number of votes at the last election for secretary of state in the county. . . ."

"Additionally, the clerk is the official with whom all certificates and petitions of nomination must be filed. . . ."

"At least 20 days before the election the clerk must give official notice by publication in a newspaper of general circulation within the town or if there be no such newspaper then by posting the notice in one (1) public place in each ward. Such notice shall state the purpose of the election, together with the place where and the day when such election will be held."

In summary (there are 60 pages in the handbook quoted from above), the year 1979 for Saint Joe means:

Republican and Democrat conventions must be held by Saturday, August 25, 1979, to select candidates for the November 6 town election;

Residents of the town age 18 and over are eligible to attend their party's convention and vote therein (including those who are 17 at the time of the convention but will be 18 by November 6).

To be eligible to vote in the November election, town residents need only to have resided in town for the preceding 30 days.

Party conventions held by Republicans and Democrats in town are very important because it is from those conventions that nominees emerge.

Election laws also provide for the declaration of "independent party" candidates.

Offer Rejected

Two of the three members of the Saint Joe town board have turned down an offer of settlement in a suit against Rick Wannemacher. The suit has been pending for several months and involves violations of certain town ordinances and other actions taken without the consent of the board.

The offer to settle was made last week through Brad Thomas, town legal counsel. The offer was for $900.00, to cover the cost of installing new sidewalk, the cost of removing unauthorized curbing, and the cost of legal fees for the town.

Board president Butch Coburn and board member Loretta Loy are reported to have refused the settlement. Board member Maurice Kline has indicated he favored the settlement in order to accomplish part of the purpose of the suit and also to avoid legal fees which the town must pay with the refusal to accept the offer.

The suit came when a town ordinance requiring the installation of a four-foot fence at the site of a swimming pool was not complied with.

The pool was not covered after the owner reportedly indicated he would install a cover. Old sidewalk was removed but not replaced by new walk although the owner reportedly was told of the requirement for new walk. A length of curbing was installed by the owner without consulting the board for permission and for proper location.

Apparently, with the refusal to accept the $900 settlement offer, the board will continue the legal suit against the former Saint Joe resident.

EMS Seeks Heart Monitor

Members of the Butler EMS are currently selling raffle tickets to raise funds for the purchase of a heart monitor.

Ken Carnahan, county EMS director, says that a "Life Pac 5" monitor attaches to adhesive electrodes placed on the patient's chest. It provides an EKG readout of the heart pattern, showing the EMTs the rate rhythm of the patient's heart. This machine would be used on pending heart problems, heart attacks and critically injured patients. It will give the EMTs a much better idea of what is going on in the patient's chest, he said.

Some of the EMTs at Butler are already trained and the remainder will complete training in September.

The cost of the monitor is $3,800. To help raise money to cover the cost, EMS will hold a drawing at Butler Days to be observed August 9-11. Donations are $1 with two prizes to be given: a home base scanner and a first aid kit.

The EMTs will also be holding a garage sale during Butler Days at the EMS garage at the west end of the City Building in Butler.

Several individuals, organizations and firms have expressed interest in helping EMS fund this project, Mr. Carnahan said. Contributions for the DeKalb EMS Butler Unit may be sent to 112 Meadowmere Drive, Butler 46721, or to the DeKalb EMS Central Office, Box 542, DeKalb Memorial Hospital, Auburn 46706.

Vacation Bible School

—Nancy Garman, reporter

On Sunday, August 5, St. Mark Lutheran Church in Saint Joe will have a roundup and pre-registration for Vacation Bible School.

Beginning at the church at 4 p.m., there will be a presentation of a "Gathering of God's Given Gifts," including crafts, music, storytelling and other interesting things.

At 6:30 the children will lead a parade to Wild Cherry Park for a family potluck. Each family is asked to bring a covered dish, their own table service and drink.

Daily Bible School sessions will then begin August 6 and run through August 17, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. There will be classes for children from nursery (age 3) through 6th grade.

Included will be Bible lessons, games, songs and handcrafts, all directed to learning more about God and His love for us.

"Our theme for this year is, 'I Love To Tell the Story.' Let us all take part and encourage our children to take advantage of this worthwhile program."

State Sets 'Legals' Rates

Now that the various local taxing units are publishing proposed budgets for 1980, the question may arise as to the cost of such publication.

Last year, with new trustees in office, The News considered sending a brief note to the various new trustees explaining the method of computing the cost of publishing the budgets. But in the press for time, no such explanation was sent.

As matters turned out, such information should have been sent out, because one of the trustees called the News Office to question the amount billed for publication of his budget. A bill from another county publication for the same advertising was considerably lower than the one received from The N ews.

Upon investigation by The News at the request of the trustee, it was found that an error had been made by the other county publication. The editor of that publication said future billings would be at the proper rate.

What is the "proper" rate?

The amount which newspapers charge for legal advertising by taxing units (cities, towns, counties, townships, school districts) is not set by the respective newspapers. The legal advertising rate is set by the State of Indiana by statute.

Since legal advertisements seldom if ever involve large "display" advertising type sizes, the state has set up a system of "line" rates. Also involved are the width of the newspaper column, the size of the type face used and the frequency of publication of the various legal notices.

In addition, for legal notices requiring tabular setting (dollar amounts in columns for clarity), a 50% surcharge is authorized by law. Tabular work requires considerably more makeup time than "straight setting."

The advertising rates now charged by newspapers were set in around 1969. There has been, therefore, no increase in legal advertising rates for ten years despite the doubling of the cost of living in general. And no increase in those rates will come until the state legislature studies the matter and takes whatever action it deems necessary. Thus, for instance, publication of the town budget costs the taxpayer no more now than it did ten years ago and thereafter.

In 1969, the state-controlled legal advertising rates had been in effect so long that a large number of newspapers were actually getting less than their then prevailing inch rate.

In 1979, somewhat the same situation exists. The present legal advertising rates are in many instances bringing less income per column inch than the prevailing display advertising rate.

As readers look over the proposed budgets of the various taxing units, and the annual reports of schools, and the reports of claims to be considered by the county commissioners, a point to remember is that the income derived by this and other newspapers from legal advertising is controlled by the state legislature. Any errors in computing the amount charged for such advertising (leading to an overcharge) make the involved newspaper subject to a request for a refund of overcharges.

Any differences in the amount charged by two newspapers for the same legal notice are due to the above-mentioned factors: a difference in the width of the columns, a difference in the size of the type; and these differences in rates are a matter of permanent record imprinted on the state-required "proof of publication" for certain purposes.

GOP Convention August 16

Republican precinct committeeman Donzella Graham has announced the four appointments necessary to the organizing of the "Republican Town Central Committee of the Town of Saint Joe." State election laws designate the precinct committeeman as the organizer of the central committee when the town involved lies within one precinct. Saint Joe lies within the Concord Precinct.

Mrs. Graham's appointments include Ted Haberkorn, chairman; Gaynelle Lake, vice-chairman; Ruth White, secretary; and Paul Moore, treasurer.

Mr. Haberkorn, acting under the responsibilities accorded a central committee chairman, has announced that the town's Republican Convention will be held Thursday, August 16, 1979, at 7:30 p.m. EST in the town hall.

The purpose of the convention is to select nominees for three town board positions and one for clerk-treasurer.

A similar convention is to be set up by the Democrat Party in Saint Joe. However, The News was not able to obtain pertinent information about the convention as this was written.

The dissenters of the 1960s-70s sometimes point to Jesus Christ to justify their actions, claiming Him to be the greatest revolutionary of all time, attempting by such comparison to give a holy aura to their own ambitions. They overlook one thing: Jesus did not force Himself nor His teachings upon anyone. He spoke, surely, positively, then left the decision to His hearers. Thus did He grant to all men the freedom God created. Today's reformers could well be admonished, as in the Scriptures: "Go thou, and do likewise."

Self-discipline is a matter of courage. Anyone can do as he pleases; but it takes courage to do as one ought.

Dissent in a free society is like the cultivation of the crops in the field. A little agitation promotes growth; too much destroys the roots.

The true essence of freedom is not in the extent to which human rights are exercised; rather, it is in the restraint exercised in pursuing those rights.

Wisdom is like good whiskey. The best of ingredients are essential; but the proof requires age.

Failures are the rungs on the ladder to success.

In unity there is strength; in diversity there is freedom.

It's vacation time - be prepared

Here are a few hints to make it a more enjoyable one. First get a checkup from your physician and any needed preventive "shots." Next, take with you medicines you regularly use, plus one for indigestion, diarrhea, constipation and a good healing antiseptic. We can help you select good products.

Stop in and get from us your favorite brands of toilet articles. We have them and you may not be able to get them in distant places.

Your dry cows are crying for attention

It's easy to treat dry cows like second-class citizens. And it's not hard to figure out why. You take care of your milking herd first. And probably think the dry cows are on vacation.

But you can't afford to treat them that way. Because a dry cow is on the world's busiest holiday. It's tuneup time for the next lactation. It's the finishing period for her unborn calf. It's preparation for the stress of calving. Plus the heavy milk production ahead.

Your dry cows need all the help you can give. Don't let 'em down. That's why Wayne has invested so much research on dry cow care.

Let us show you today's best tuneup for hard-working tired udders, with the special Wayne dry-cow health and feeding program. Also, the precise steps to take to prevent most freshening-time problems.

It all helps you become one of the smart dairymen who have so little trouble with their cows.

Wayne cares. So do we.
That's what makes the difference.

Town Board

At the town board meeting of August 6, one of the matters of business was establishing the pay scale for workers at the November 6 town election. The board voted to allow the maximum allowed by the state ($30 each for a judge, sheriff and clerk from each party plus $80 for the inspector who has responsibilities prior to election day). The pay will come from a $400 appropriation in this year's budget for election expenses. Other obligations include pay for workers' meals and election supplies.

The nomination of Hearsel (Bud) Shockley as the Republican member of the town election board was accepted by the town clerk-treasurer and he received the clerk's appointment. A similar nomination will be made by the Democrat party chairman. The two nominees serve under and with the town clerk-treasurer as the town election board.

Ruth White was nominated also by Mr. Haberkorn as inspector for the election and the town board made the appointment. State laws designate this responsibility for the town chairman of the party whose candidate for Secretary of State received the most votes at the previous state election.

Bills allowed include:

Town expense—Revenue Sharing funds to the DeKalb County Council On Aging for 1979, $1,000; Farm Bureau Insurance, $887.00; Butler Bulletin, meeting notice, $2.57; Roy Eck, backhoe and labor, $175.00; Jay Cee Loy, drain labor, $45.00.

Waterworks—Farm Bureau Insurance $902.60; Roy Eck, backhoe and labor, $75.00; Rick Gfeller, waterworks superintendent salary and postage, $87.20.

TO THE EDITOR—

Dear Sir:

Thank you for publishing the article concerning the fund drive for the heart monitor for the DeKalb EMS unit in Butler. In your article you referred to me, Ken Carnahan, as the Director of DeKalb EMS. This is an error. Mr. Richard Ring is the Director. I am the Public Relations Manager for the service. I realize that mistakes do happen but I feel that for the benefit of the readers, this should be corrected.

Thank you.

Sincerely,

Town Party Nominating Conventions Aug. 16, 17

With the last Saturday in August designated by state law as the final day for town political party organizations to hold their respective conventions to nominate candidates for town offices, plans have been made for Saint Joe's party organizations' conventions to nominate three candidates for three town board positions and one candidate for the office of clerk-treasurer.

Republicans of Saint Joe will convene Thursday, August 16, at the town hall at 7:30 p.m. for their convention. The business session will be preceded at 7:00 p.m. by a pre-convention "social" including refreshments. It will provide a time for those attending to ask potential candidates if they are willing to allow their names to be placed in nomination. Such pre-convention contacts are essential to prevent as much as possible the need to fill a vacancy should an unwilling candidate be selected in his or her absence.

The convention program is as follows:

7:00 to 7:30 p.m.—social and refreshments.

7:30—call to order.

Invocation—Dennis King, pastor of the Saint Joe Church of Christ.

Posting of the colors—Girl Scouts.

Pledge to the flag.

Keynote remarks—Robert, Wilder, chairman of the DeKalb County Republican Central Committee.

Challenge to Young Voters—Mark Haberkorn, 1979 DeKalb Eastside graduate.

Introduction of Precinct Committeeman and convention officers appointed by the Precinct Committeeman.

Convention background information—Ted Haberkorn, Town GOP Convention Chairman.

Balloting for nominations.

Announcement of official candidates for the November 6 town election.

Retiring of colors—Girl Scouts.

Convention declared closed.

Refreshments.

The convention of the Saint Joe Democrat Party will be held Friday evening, August 17, at 7:30 p.m.

Ralphine Robinson is serving as Precinct Committeeman as a last-minute appointment in order to make the convention official. Town convention officers will be selected by those attending Friday's convention after which the nominating will begin.

Saint Joe residents age 18 and over are urged to participate in the nominating convention of their respective political parties. In working together to get the conventions arranged, Mrs. Robinson and Mr. Haberkorn agreed that separate action by Democrats and Republicans is necessary in order to present a choice of candidates to town voters next November. However, the election of town officials should be on merit, not on party affiliation.

Town residents age 18 and over are eligible to participate in the nominating conventions. Town elections occur every four years.

Hootman Reunion

—Carma Meek, reporter

The 67th Hootman Family Reunion of the descendants of Christian Hootman was held August 5 at the Kado-Lato Farm east of Spencerville, home of Karl and Ellen Hart.

Family members were welcomed by Bob and Linda Wilder, assisted by Bill Wilder. Although a heavy rainstorm preceded the basket dinner at noon, the day was sunny. Daniel Cole, pastor of the South Scipio United Brethren congregation, expressed thanks and appreciation for the family gathering.

The president, Lena Rose Cole, called the group together for a short business meeting followed by a program. Claudie Driver gave a reading, "Don't waste time on those who croak"; Alice Kagey told of her visit to the Hess castle along the Rhine River in Germany.

Christian Hootman was born in the Hessian area of Germany and this castle was a part of the family history.

Verona McKee Littlejohn of Santa Barbara, California, spoke of her work with the University of California, Los Angeles; John W. Hootman of Hicksville, a former resident of Iran and an employee of its government, addressed his remarks to the current political situation; Elmer Koerner spoke about the occupational changes in his family.

Pictures of the Christian Homestead in Washington, Pennsylvania, were distributed and copies of his will were given out. It was announced that through the efforts of Bob Wilder, his mother, Berniece Wilder, and Alice Kagey, an aunt, were registered members of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Newcomers to the reunion were the descendants of the Jacob Hootman family who settled in Iowa. These were MM Ralph Hootman and children of Burlington, Iowa; MM Gail W. Hootman and children of Altona, Illinois; and Mrs. Anna Bell Wilson of Farmington, Iowa, a sister of the gentlemen named above.

The nominating committee for next year are Lavon Hart, chairman; Omer Hootman and Marion Hootman.

Those receiving a Susan B. Anthony dollar were Claudie Driver, oldest one present whose birthday was August 10 and to whom the group sang "Happy Birthday"; Christopher W. Meek, the youngest, eight weeks old; coming the farthest, Verona McKee Littlejohn of Santa Barbara, California; person with the most family members who came the farthest, Ralph Hootman of Burlington, Iowa; and the man having the most pennies, Elmer Koerner.

A ceramic plate depicting the sketch of Jacob Hootman's Iowa home went to Audrew Hootman with Erin Meek drawing the winning name.

Lavon and Lora Hart provided delicious vanilla and chocolate homemade ice cream at the close of the program.

Letters were read from Jack and Ellen McCrory of Hayesville, Ohio; Mrs. Vona Reynolds of Meridian, Idaho; Max and Nadine Williams of Douds, Iowa; Clayton and Hazel Garrett of Bloomfield, Iowa; Dr. Seth Hootman of Ann Arbor, Michigan; Gene Hootman of Dover, Ohio.

The next reunion will be held at the Kado-Lato Farm August 3, 1980. Officers retained for the coming year are Lena Rose Cole, president; Alice Kagey, vice-president; and Carma Meek, secretary-treasurer.

62 family members attended including MM Lehr Wilder, MM Karl Hart, MM Lavon Hart and Lynn, Lane and Kathy, and Alice Kagey from the Spencerville area; MM Bill Wilder and Lisa and David of Columbia City; MM Bob Wilder of R1 Saint Joe; Lena Rose Cole and Dawn and Debbie, MM Wendell Meek, Omer Hootman and MM John Hootman and Jason and Page of Hicksville; MM Dan Cole of Harlan; Paula Meek of Hicksville; Dr. and Mrs. Winfield C. Meek and Erin, Angela, Christopher of Mansfield; Elva McKee and Mallo of Fort Wayne; MM Audrew Hootman of Ligonier; MM Elmer Koerner and Marion Hootman of Edgerton; Claudie Driver of Hicksville; Julius and Gladys Waltenberger of Angola; Warren and Meda Poper of Elkhart; Verona Pettijohn of Santa Barbara, California; Clark Hootman of Bryan; and the families from Iowa and Illinois for whom Gail Hootman was the spokesman.

The afternoon concluded with Karl Hart driving his wagons through the unique forest area of Kado-Lato Farm and explaining the various growths to the many riders.

Town Party Nominating Conventions Aug. 16, 17

All residents of Saint Joe who are eligible to vote in the November 6 town election are eligible to attend the Republican and Democrat party town conventions. To be eligible to vote November 6, a resident must be 18 years of age or over by November 6 and must have resided in Saint Joe at least 30 days immediately prior to the election.

The Republican convention is to be held Thursday of this week, August 16, at the town hall. Starting at 7:00 p.m. with refreshments, the convention officially opens at 7:30 p.m. with appropriate pre-balloting ceremonies.

After the call to order the invocation will be given by Dennis King, pastor of the Saint Joe Church of Christ. A group of Girl Scouts, directed by adult leader Pat Osmun, will post the colors and lead the pledge of allegiance.

Bob Wilder, chairman of the DeKalb County Republican Central Committee, will give keynote remarks. Mark Haberkorn, 1979 graduate of DeKalb Eastside High School, will give appropriate remarks as a teenager eligible to vote for the first time.

After introduction of convention officials, with information concerning the process of electing three town board members and a clerk-treasurer, the nominations will be opened and four candidates selected to represent the party at the November 6 election.

The Girl Scouts will retire the colors, the convention will be declared officially closed, and those present can once again enjoy some refreshments.

The Democrat convention will be held Friday evening of this week, August 17, at 7:30 p.m. Ralphine Robinson, Concord Township Precinct Committeeman, will serve as temporary chairman at the convention until those present select permanent officers.

The same format of nominating and selecting four candidates will be followed as for the Republican town convention.

Mrs. Robinson and Ted Haberkorn, town GOP chairman, have issued a joint statement urging residents of Saint Joe to attend a convention and participate in this "grass roots" process of representative government.

Youth League

The Riverdale Youth League had a very successful 1979 ball season—thanks to a lot of people.

It's impossible to list everyone that helped this year—but we'll do our best.

Thanks to our sponsors and coaches who put a lot of effort and time in: Sechlers (Jeff Hudson and Ron Schmucker); Teamsters (Junior Carper and Dave Doll); Lengacher Electric (Tom Haynes and Jerry Vinson); Vulcraft (Dean Emerson and Jim Miller); Knisely Bank (Barb Voirol); Laub's Shell Mart (Sherrie Edgar and Sue Beard); KC's (Greg Thacker); A's (Al and Kay Diehl); Mites (Junior Jones and Joe Crowl).

We want to thank Vulcraft for the nice bleachers they made for our new diamond. We really got a lot of use out of our new diamond—so a big thanks to all the people who helped and put a lot of time in: Dennis Baker, Terry Bosserman, Jerry Vinson, Larry Emenhiser, Tony Beard, Duane Voirol, Tom Haley (and a few women had some blisters also).

The concession stand did super this year—our thanks to Paula Tintsman, Sharon Baker and all the ladies who worked.

We want to thank Jim Miller who donated candy throughout the season and for most of the pop for our ring toss booth. Thanks to Al and Kay Diehl for heading that up and to all the people that worked.

Karen Baker also gets our thanks for the great job done on the raffle tickets. The kids all worked hard at selling tickets but three that sold the most received watches—Jodie Baker ($55 in ticket sales) and Matt Miller and Tom Diehl (tied with $125 each in ticket sales).

The umpires did a great job and we thank them all very much.

Last but not least we want to thank all the kids that made up our teams. We have a real great bunch of kids and they did a super job this year.

Teamsters took 1st in their division and Sechlers are tied for 2nd. Lengacher's tied for 1st in their division.

The Minors All-Star team got 2nd place in our Riverdale All-Star Tournament (the 1st time in the history of the tournament).

The girls teams did a great job this year also.

Our league picnic was held August 4 at Wild Cherry Park and was very well attended—we went through about 250 hot dogs.

The raffle ticket prizes were won by: 1st $100 Mary Mull, Spencerville; 2nd $75 Inettia Walter, Saint Joe; 3rd $50 Shirley Mack, Saint Joe; 4th $25 Frank Beerbower, Saint Joe.

The new officers for 1980 were elected:

President—Donna Ramer.
Vice-president—Tony Beard.
Secretary—Sherrie Edgar.
Treasurer—Larry Emenhiser.

Many things were discussed at the meeting and one was about having a Senior Girls Team. GIRLS—don't forget to sign up next year if you are interested in playing.

Thanks to everyone for making this year a big success.

Attention all senior citizens

The ageing process can cause hardening of the arteries and liver. Elderly people are more subject to arthritis, heart trouble, bronchial coughs, prostate and bladder troubles.

If you will immediately visit your physician at the very first signs of such troubles, the odds are you will not only get relief from distress, but also learn how to take care of yourself and live a longer, healthier life. We now have sustaining medicines to keep ageing ailments controlled.

"A GREAT MANY PEOPLE ENTRUST US with their prescriptions, health needs and other pharmacy products. We consider this trust a privilege and a duty. May we be your personal family pharmacy?"

Where will she be 2 years from now?

Will that replacement heifer be ready to produce to her full bred-in capacity? Or will she lag behind, not ready to give her all? How you treat her from day one makes all the difference.

To ensure a healthy, quick-nursing calf, treat the dry mother cow right the Wayne way. Then start her calf on day four on a Wayne milk replacer. (Twenty-five pounds replaces 225 pounds of milk). Also start dry feeding Wayne Calf Krunch.

Four months and your Wayne-fed heifer is a lively 300 pounder. At 14 she can hit up to 750 pounds and be ready for breeding. See us for the program that works.

Wayne cares. So do we.
That's what makes the difference.

New Lights Add New Dimension To Local Recreation

A pretty girl can't be beat to draw attention to some of the good things existing in the Riverdale community. So, The News took advantage of the presence of Brenda Beaty at the local tennis courts one recent night to lead off this photo resume of some of the summer recational activity taking place locally due to the installation of new lights at the tennis courts, replacement lights at the lighted ball diamond and other improvements and additions.

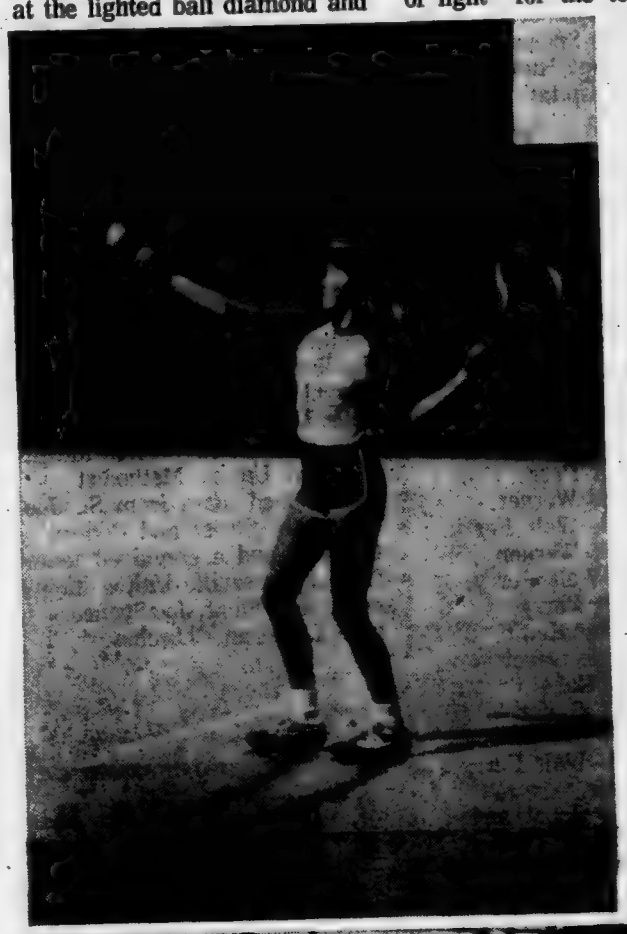
Brenda's good form as she served shows how much light is provided by the four-pole eight-fixture lighting system. That photo, and the other nighttime photos on this page, were taken without the use of flashbulbs, with ASA400 black and white film. The high-lumen low-energy-consuming metal halide fixtures provide a "bath of light" for the tennis courts, the lighted ball diamond and the surrounding area.

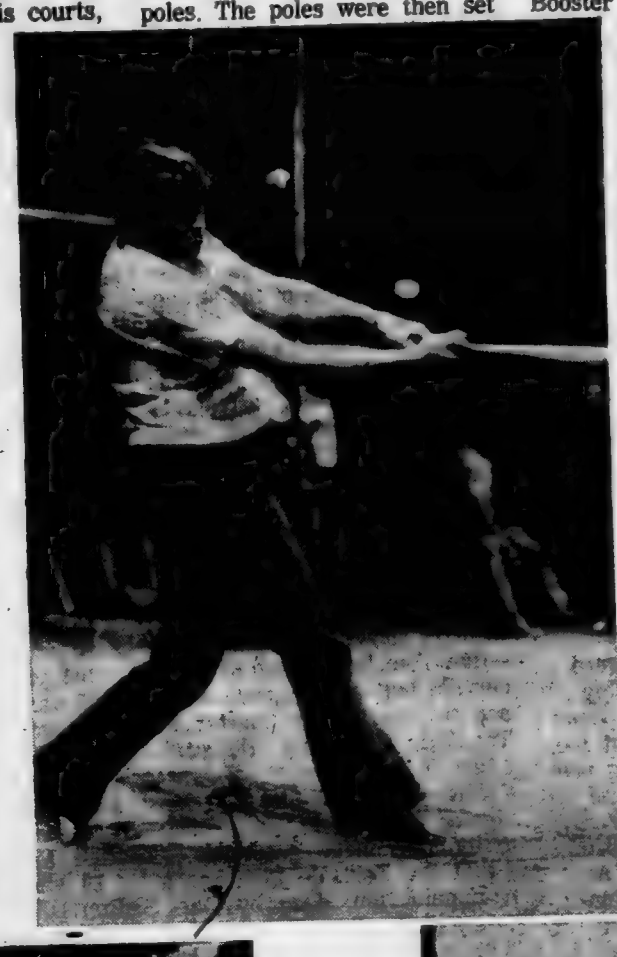
18 metal halide fixtures at the ball diamond now give more light at less cost than the 26 old incandescent fixtures did since the original installation in 1952.

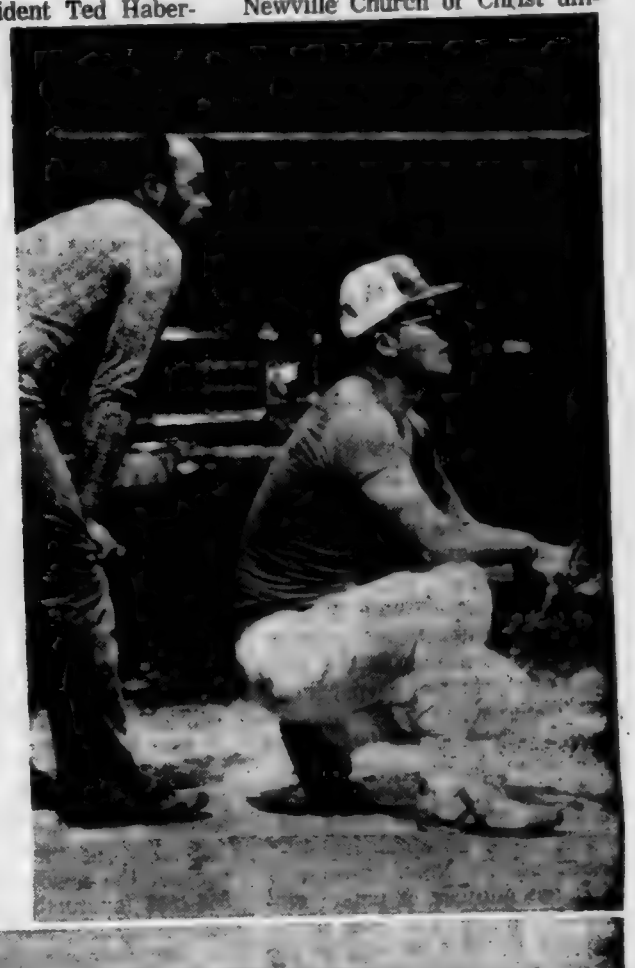
The lights at the tennis courts went up under the supervision of Frank Sechler with Jim Hudson and Donnie Sechler installing the fixtures on the poles. The poles were then set by Indiana & Michigan Electric Company.

The low "do it yourself" total cost of approximately $2,800 was paid by $700 contributions from the Booster Club of Saint Joe which instituted the project, Sechler's Pickles, the Saint Joe Lions Club and the Vulcraft steel girder plant at Saint Joe. The orginial proposal was to install a complete additional tennis court. But when Booster president Ted Haberkorn investigated prices and found the cost would be near $10,000, Jim Hudson's suggestion to install lights on the already existing pair of courts was followed up and completed.

Another lighted photo shows "slugger" Randy Reinhart of the Mt. Pleasant UM Church League team taking a hefty cut. And then there's a photo of two of the Church League's "old pros," Roger Cook of Newville Church of Christ umpiring and Bill Sipe of Newville UM catching.







The Riverdale Youth League was very active again this past summer. And among its activities were a Little League tourney and a girls' softball tourney. One photo shows a view from right field toward the infield as early evening play was under way. The other tourney photo shows a portion of the crowd back of home plate with the Youth League's portable concession stand just out of view at the right, a popular place to get refreshments during the tourneys.

Add to these facilities the new Little League diamond just installed this summer at the school site by the Riverdale Youth League, and the "old" Pony League diamond also at the school — and you have a LOT of opportunities for youth to be able to "do something" in this little "old-fashioned typical" smalltown community.

And don't forget Saint Joe's popular Wild Cherry Park!

— Who won the tennis game? — We didn't notice — —.

Sgt. Robinson Receives Commendation For Scout Work

Gyn. Sgt. Stanley Robinson, son of MM Joe Robinson of Saint Joe, is shown above right as he received a commendation for reorganizing a Scout troop composed of sons in families based at the Marine Strategic Command Base at Albany, Georgia. Sgt. Robinson has been in the Marine Corps 17 years.

The Scout troop had been active in the past but had gradually lost its participants. Stan gave the troop new life with his efforts and as a result received a commendation. He has received two or three other commendations through the years for efforts in other areas of Marine Corps activities.

Stan's wife is the former Becky Lynn Hubbard, daughter of Biz Hubbard of Saint Joe and the late Bil Hubbard. The couple have two children, Jody 16, and Todd 13.

Hopewell UB Wins Church League Title

The annual All-Star game which officially concludes activity in the Saint Joe Slow-pitch Softall Church League could not be played this year due to persistent rainy weather. The game was originally set for August 17 but the diamond was not in playing condition for over a week thereafter and with vacations and opening of school at hand, it was decided to cancel the game.

This year's champion is the Hopewell UB team which participated in the Saint Joe league for the first time this year. Hopewell had a 14-2 won-lost record. A team from the Courn Corners Church of Christ came in second with a 13-3 record.

The sportsmanship trophy was awarded to the Newville Church of Christ. The winner is determined by vote of all players and teams in the league.

Other teams represented in the league came from Norris Chapel United Methodist, Newville United Methodist, Hicksville Church of Christ, Mount Pleasant United Methodist, a combined team from St. Joe Church of Christ and Coburn Corners, and a combined team from Spencerville United Methodist and Saint Joe-Spencerville Lutheran Churches.

HOT TIME AT TOWN BOARD MEETING

A potentially explosive situation in Saint Joe town matters was evident at the Tuesday, September 4, meeting of the town board.

With several local residents attending, the meeting centered for a time around discussion of a conflict related to carrying out the provisions of the local stray dog control ordinances. Town Humane Officer Betty Baker presented a letter given to her by Ted Haberkorn who could not attend due to hospitalization for surgery. The local editor referred to information which indicated that Mrs. Baker had been threatened in the course of carrying out her duties as humane officer, that it had been suggested to her by board member Loretta Loy that Mrs. Baker resign to avoid any bodily injury, and that, "Mrs. Loy had in the past told you not to pick up that certain dog even if it was allowed to run loose."

The letter backed Mrs. Baker in her efforts as humane officer and noted that an effective program of controlling stray dogs cannot be accomplished "if favoritism is going to be shown certain residents in return for the good things those residents are said to have done for the town."

Former humane officer Larry Mason confirmed the fact that it is difficult to impossible to maintain a working relationship with the public in dog control if the public does not think everyone is being treated as equals to as great a degree as possile. Board president Butch Coburn is reported to have stated that favoritism cannot be allowed to become a part of the dog control program.

In another portion of the letter, the editor said town residents have "cooperated to a commendable degree" once it had been established that the dog control ordinances would be enforced. He noted that "confinement and control of dogs under our ordinances is not a penalty on the owners; it is a protection for all."

In other matters, Jim and Tonda Miller offered to donate their time to paint the fire hall and town hall if the town would provide the materials. The board accepted their offer.

Investigation is continuing into the matter of liability protection for volunteer firemen The board was recently informed of new requirements of such protection.

Board member Maurice Kline asked to have read into the minutes a letter from the Cities and Towns division of civil government at Indianapolis stating that in no way could the town board prevent the use of a tape recorder by a board member or anyone else at town board meetings except in case of a properly announced executive session.

Mr. Kline began using a tape recorder a few months ago when he became concerned about the manner in which certain town matters were being handled. Board member Loretta Loy had strongly objected to use of the recorder, to the point of successfully moving to cancel two meetings of the board before all town matters had been discussed. She was backed in her motions by board president Butch Coburn.

Attorney Brad Thomas was asked to get a legal opinion from the state. That legal opinion now establishes that the use of a tape recorder is legal and allowable at public meetings of the town board.

Mr. Kline brought up the matter of the use of town materials in a private driveway. He said he had been told by a former town employee that the employee was ordered by Mrs. Loy to place some gravel in a driveway on property which she owns. She said she did not recall giving such instructions. The application of the gravel was substantiated by certain residents attending the September 4 meeting.

In another matter, Mr. Kline noted that a pay scale of $5 per hour had been established by the board some time ago. But a bill presented for payment at the August meeting for Jay Loy for labor was at the rate of $10 per hour.

Mr. Kline also noted that the water pump at Wild Cherry Park still is not repaired. The need for repair was noted last spring and supposedly was being taken care of by Mrs. Loy. It was not apparent what has caused the delay in repair nor was it clear exactly what repair was needed.

Mr. Kline brought these matters before the board as a result of his contention for several months that certain obligations were being brought upon the town which were not voted upon by the board as a whole.

Our letter to the NFIB pointed out that metric terms were used in the comparisons despite the fact that a majority of NFIB members oppose conversion to metrics and polls indicate that the American public does not see a pressing need for such conversion.

Residents of Saint Joe and the surrounding area responded with $409.05 in donations for the muscular dystrophy program promoted nationaly by the Jerry Lewis telethon carried on Channel 33 in Fort Wayne. Door to door solicitation by kids in town plus donations in cannisters in places of business brought the outstanding local collection.

In addition, another $37-plus was raised when Margaret Wisler at the Bita General Store had the kids pick up tin cans in town and pledged a penny to the telethon for every can brought in. The kids came in with over 3700 cans. Mrs. Wisler gave prizes to the top can collectors.

Teacher Minority 'Upset'; Costs Eastern Dist. $5,000

Ted:

The Indiana School Boards Association publishes a monthly report on teacher collective bargaining developments throughout the state, called "Negotiation Notes".

I am enclosing a copy of the most recent edition for your perusal because of the rather revealing remarks of one UniServ Director that are quoted.

In your report on the calendar unfair labor practice hearing you made an observation that perhaps what is happening in the teacher-school board continuing legal hassle is not so much the result of an attempt to satisfy the teachers' needs and demands, but more accurately, it is a result of pressure brought to bear by the administrative officials of ISTA and UniServ. This is so true and it is constantly exemplified by their continuing search for the one or two disgruntled rank and file members so they can push a cause and prove their worth to the remainder of the dues paying members. In truth, most teachers do a very good job, and most teachers could care less about the petty ISTA-UniServ quarrels with school boards. The DeKalb Eastern calendar litigation is a perfect example. Of the 87 teachers on the staff, she admitted to me, only "thirty or so" bothered to express an opinion to Mrs. Hollabaugh, the person who brought the labor law suit, when she asked for their "input" last spring. Of those that did respond 18 did not like the board's calendar and so she felt that she "had to follow the will of the majority". Majority of what? Majority of the staff? When I asked her if we could have some proof of this straw vote, she indicated that "I guess you'll just have to take my word for it". This conversation all took place during the "secret" negotiation sessions earlier this summer, and no doubt would be vehemently denied. I hate secret sessions of any kind and I resent the fact that when I am hired to negotiate the spending of taxpayers' money, that I can't be wide open to the media. The new changes in the "Open Door Law" still leaves the question of whether the media can be present at the actual bargaining session unanswered. It says that both sides can now make a report to the media of what is going on. When tax dollars are being spent, the whole world ought to be allowed to view the proceedings and I am one lawyer that would certainly like to see the media challenge the secrecy of not only teacher negotiations, but every other governmental proceeding including judicial proceedings.

Finally, a word about the hearing officer's recess comments at the calendar unfair labor hearing. The exact quote is "It seems to me as if we are wasting our time here and the taxpayers' money."

Mr. Goen, after asking you to leave the room, said, I strongly disagree, we have a very important fundamental issue here. In spite of the hearing officer's cogent observation, I will bet you two doughnuts to one that he will make some namby-pamby ruling that says to the effect that no harm was done here but the school board should not have adopted a calendar before negotiations were complete and therefore there was a technical violation here. Some of the public probably feel that the local school board is being charged with being bull-headed and unresponsive to a very simple request by the teachers. If they can control the starting date of school during negotiations they can stop school from opening every year until their demands are met, and never have to strike. So the board simply said we will negotiate it with you but we are going to adopt a calendar so that we can have an official schedule on record and if we have to change it through negotiations later we will. Mr. Goen, who does not pay taxes in DeKalb Eastern and does not work in the DeKalb Eastern system said that upsets "us" because it cools the bargaining process. His "upset" feeling has thus far cost the taxpayers of DeKalb Eastern about $5,000.

Ted - do you know of any other job arena where the employees can dictate what days they are going to work?

Best regards,
H. Charles Winans

'Independent' Nomination Fails

An effort to place present town board president Butch Coburn on the ballot on an "independent" ticket for the November 6 Saint Joe town election apparently has failed. A petition failed to gain the required ten signatures.

When the Republican town convention was held, Mr. Coburn's name was placed in nomination by Mrs. Loretta Loy, also a member of the present town board. However, she placed the nomination in Ward 3, but Mr. Coburn resides in Ward 1. Mrs. Loy had previously nominated Jeanette Duke for Ward I but the majority of those attending the GOP caucus voted to have Ted Haberkorn as the party's nominee for Ward 1.

Mrs. Loy was then informed by Mr. Haberkorn, town GOP chairman, that nominations on an independent ticket could be made by a petition. With further information provided by county chairman Robert Wilder, Mrs. Loy placed a petition in the local hardware so that signers' signatures could be notarized. The petition calls for designation of another party name other than the Republican and Democrat majority parties.

Apparently there were only four names on the petition, including that of Mrs. Loy who already participated in the Republican caucus as a qualified voting elector. Voters in any civil election do not legally have the right to participate in the nominations of more than one party.

County Women Planning Annnal Prayer Breakfast

The DeKalb County Women's fellowship prayer breakfast steering committee is holding weekly meetings in making plans for this eighth annual event. Each Tuesday morning at 9 a.m. they get together for a devotional period and breakfast at Richard's. Thais LaRue (Mrs. Ross) gave "A Paraphrase for Women" based on I Corinthians 13, at the August 14 meeting.

The Prayer Breakfast will take place on Thursday, October 25 in the First United Methodist Church in Auburn. A continental breakfast will be served from 9 to 10 a.m. At 9:30, the singing group known as "The Family of God" will give a musical as the women are assembling in the sanctuary. These young people are members of various church groups in the county. They sang at the 1978 breakfast and are returning this year by popular demand.

The soloist for the program will be Mrs. Cal Thomas. She has been a radio and television artist since she was thirteen. In New York and Washington D.C., she enjoyed a successful career in the professional theatres as a musical comedy star, then later on toured with Music Fair Enterprises. She has sung at the White House, the State Department, and at Foreign Embassies. Her album, "A Ray of Sunshine", displays her beautiful contralto voice in a blend of traditional and gospel songs. She often accompanies her husband Cal on speaking engagements. He is a television and radio news reporter. He spent 7½ years with NBC News in Washington and is the recipient of the coveted Peabody and Headliners Award. His voice can be heard over radio station WBCL-FM, Fort Wayne. He gives a fifteen-minute news report known as the "Rest of the News" which has a religious flavor, at 8:30 a.m. daily.

Barbara Priddy, Washington D.C., will give the message in which she will tell of the prayer groups around the world as well as those in the nation's capital.

There are thirty-two women serving on the committee at the present time, representing many different churches in the county. It is the hope of those now involved that many more churches who do not have a representative will appoint someone to attend these committee meetings.

The DeKalb County prayer breakfast is an outgrowth of the National Prayer Breakfast which is held annually in Washington, D.C. The Prayer Breakfast is non-political and non-denominational. The purpose is to pray for our government officials not only at the local level, but also for the state, national, and world leaders. These National groups have been meeting since 1941 when Congress is in session. In 1953 President Eisenhower was invited to attend a Senate group for a time of Fellowship and Prayer Out of that invitation, the National Prayer Breakfast developed into an annual affair which brings together people in positions of responsibility not only from the United States but from other countries. Since the initial breakfast in Washington, many smaller events such as we have in DeKalb County have been held throughout the world as well as on the state level.

Women from Garrett now serving on the steering committee are: Thais LaRue, Dorothy Pfeiffer, Victoria Ort, BirdieBowerman, Ethel Sherman, Geneva Nissly, Nell Souers, Maxine Weddell, Anna Sarpa, Sally Ross, Lois Cobler, Mary Pearson, Fara Lee Carr, Karen Dennison, Pauline Balliet, Ann Conkle, and Bonnie Russell.

Fire Decal Donations Reach $62

Donations to pay the cost of Tot Finder and Senior Citizen fire safety decals have reached $62 according to Steve Monroe of the Saint Joe-Concord Township Volunteer Fire Department.

Those who have contributed to the fund include Ila Coburn, Dick Gabet, Julie Mishler, Kevin White, Steven Monroe, Grant Baltz, Bill Mansfield, Mako Sports Center (Gary and Beth Norton), and Elwood Savage of Saint Joe; Betty Rigby and Tim Mershon of Butler; and Debbie Brown of Auburn.

Samples of the decals can be seen on the front door of the News Office. The decals are free, courtesy of the money donors, to anyone who wishes to provide a visual aid in locating children or older citizens in case of fire.

Ladies Lit'y Club

—Fern Carr, reporter

The Ladies Literary Club opened the 1979-1980 club season with a 6 p.m. dinner at the Hickory Hills Country Club.

Grace was said by President Mrs. Forrest Bevington. After the meal, we had a small business session and Mrs. Roy Baker read a poem about "Paper Bags."

There were nine members present.

Club dismissed to meet September 19 with Mrs. Carl Carpenter. Mrs. Harvey Carr will have the lesson.

Reps. & Dems. Hold Local Caucuses

The Republican Town Convention of Saint Joe was held Thursday, August 15, at the town hall.

Opening of the meeting was delayed 20 minutes until the required minimum of 20 eligible delegates were present. With 21 then present, Town GOP Chairman Ted Haberkorn introduced County Chairman Robert Wilder who gave keynote comments. Mark Haberkorn, a 1979 graduate of DeKalb Eastside High School, presented comments as a teenager now eligible to vote for the first time. He noted the challenge to young people to exercise their right to select and elect capable candidates.

After background information was given by the chairman on the process of nominating candidates for the November 6 town election, those present named the following candidates:

For Trustee, Ward 1—Ted Haberkorn.

For Trustee, Ward 2—Loretta Loy.

For Trustee, Ward 3—Larry McKown.

For Clerk-Treasurer— Emma Frank.

Other members of the Republican Town Central Committee are Gaynell Lake, vice-chairman; Ruth White, secretary; and Paul Moore, treasurer.

Dennis King, minister of the Saint Joe Church of Christ, gave the invocation and a color guard of Girl Scouts under the direction of Pat Osmun and Lynette Longardner, presented the colors.

Refreshments of punch, coffee and a large cake were served, the cake decorated in red, white and blue with a large grey-frosting elephant in the center.

Saint Joe Democrats held their convention Monday, August 20, at the town hall.

Dennis King gave the invocation and Precinct Committeeman Margaret Robinson opened the meeting as temporary chairman. The 21 people present named her town chairman and Loretta Musser was named secretary.

Those selected to run for election in November include:

For Town Trustee, Ward 1—Joe Robinson.

For Town Trustee, Ward 2—Ken White.

For Town Trustee, Ward 3—Maurice Kline.

For Clerk-Treasurer—Harvey Carr.

A resume of background information about all of the candidates will be published in this paper in a future issue.

NOTE: After the above was written, it was announced that the name of Mr. White was withdrawn as a candidate. A new "election reform" law prohibits a state or federal employee from holding public office. Mr. White is employed by the State of Indiana.
As a result, Loretta Loy will have no opposition in Ward 2 in the November 6 town election and is, in effect, now automatically elected to a new term in office.

Use Less - Pay More! . . .

The "New" Economic Efficiency

There has been a lot of fanfare in recent weeks about the introduction of front wheel drive "economy" automobiles reportedly getting 25 to 30 miles per gallon. It all sounds great. And it all seems to substantiate what a lot of people have thought for many years—that better gas mileage has been possible but the automobile companies and the petroleum companies have bought up any patents on carburetors or fuel-saving gadgets—to keep the money flowing "normally."

A national news report told recently of a man who had modified a diesel engine and was getting 80 miles per gallon. The inventor said the automobile industry could be geared to produce the modified diesel in three months.

I haven't seen anything more about the matter since.

The stopper on that idea, however, is that the man modified a mid-size mercury—for $10,000.

$10,000????

Why must it cost so much to use less????

The same question arises concerning the front wheel drive "economy" cars. You can't touch one for less than $5,000—not counting sales tax, state excise tax and insurance costs.

I wonder if the American public realizes how they are getting ripped off in the automotive field. What is happening? Well, for one thing we are getting better gas mileage—BUT we are also getting smaller automobiles using the same model names as we have associated in the past with full size vehicles. Prices keep going up; cars keep getting smaller. And the "better gas mileage" is not due to greater efficiency in the internal combustion engine. The better mileage is due to reduced weight and reduced horsepower.

($10,000 for a Monte Carlo????)

When anyone talks about fuel economy, I don't know what you are thinking about, but I think about lower cost. However, there "ain't no such animal" as things now stand.

We have the strange circumstance that, in order to economize, we must spend more money!

Something's fishy.

Teacher Contract Inequity

With the increasing cost of living, the continuous negotiating (or so it seems) for new wage scales for teachers is no more out of line than the continuous rise in wages and fringe benefits in other occupations. (Actually, they're all out of line because they're all contributing to the rising cost of living and the lesser purchasing power of the dollar - but that's another story.)

However, there is one area in which there is total imbalance as far as teachers and school corporations are concerned. That area includes hiring, signing of contracts, firing and resigning. In that area the teachers have privileges which are totally unjustified.

A school corporation, through its school board, is required to notify teachers in the spring if the teachers are going to be dismissed. (And dismissing brings in most instances the filing of "unfair labor practices" by the dismissed teacher and prolonged hearings which virtually strip a school corporation of its power to make adjustments in the curriculum and faculty as the need arises.)

But teachers have no obligation to remain in the school corporation even after they have signed a contract. Just recently, letters of resignation were accepted by the DeKalb eastern school board just before the beginning of the new school year. Other school districts face the same problem of late teacher resignations. It is common practice. And the practice confronts the school corporation with the need to make almost last-minute arrangements for hiring replacement teachers. You can hardly expect to maintain a standard of quality when such last-minute efforts are required. So, the cry for "quality education" coming from teacher spokesmen has a somewhat hollow ring to it.

While it is true that employees in any business or industry can leave one employer and take other employment without being penalized (but the employer has a much more difficult time dismissing or firing an employee if there is a big-union organization in the industry), it is also true that one employee leaving unexpectedly in business or industry does not leave the gaping hole represented by the late resignation of a teacher. The faculty of any school is a close-knit group with a great amount of interdependency. Remove one teacher and you have thrown the curriculum off balance.

In view of the long-standing practice allowed teachers to resign at will and the problem created by late resignations, the state legislature ought to consider placing teachers under the same obligation as the school board — when you sign a contract with a school, you cannot sign another contract with another school.

It is difficult to understand how such an unfair labor practice has been allowed to exist for so long, except that the teachers union lobby is the strongest lobby there is at the state and national level.

Either teachers should operate under the same obligation as school boards in contract obligations, or school corporations should be allowed to dismiss teachers without facing the legal entanglements now faced when a teacher is dismissed.

It seems only fair that the general obligation faced by one party to a contract should be binding also on the other party to the contract. Anything else is an "unfair labor practice" at the expense of the public and the students.

Exploring Pros & Cons of Microwave Cooking

by The Editor

One of the recent innovations in the preparation of food for human consumption in American homes is the microwave oven. It was available several years ago but the price was out of reach for the average family. Now, however, the "newness" of the idea has worn off and prices are down to the range of something over $200 and up, depending on the size and the number of extras on the units.

The microwave oven offers some definite advantages under certain circumstances; it also has its disadvantages.

We have had a microwave oven in our home for two years or so. In that time, we have had the opportunity to observe the "pluses" and the "minuses" in its use. We are far from experts in the use of a microwave oven and have admittedly not fully utilized its potential. But there are some things which might interest readers as a result of our limited experience.

PLUSES

For a quick warmup of leftovers, the microwave oven is hard to beat. Meat, potato and vegetable can be placed on a plate and be ready to eat in the time it takes under conventional cooking just to get the food and cooking utensils out and the burners turned on.

If you start looking around for bread for sandwiches and only a couple of slices are at hand but there's a loaf or two in the freezer, it takes only seconds in a microwave to have four slices thawed and warmed. A whole loaf can be thawed, also in a short time.

Since microwave energy involves use of molecules in the food itself to generate cooking heat (they rub against one another and the friction generated does the cooking), the heat dissipated into a home is minimal. This is particularly welcomed in summer months when families are trying to keep the house cool and comfortable.

Right now, during the sweet corn season, a microwave oven offers a quick way to prepare corn on the cob. Though the user manual we have suggests removing the corn silk but leaving the husk on in preparing sweet corn, I have stuck three or four ears in the oven "as-is" cooking for four minutes, turning the ears over, then cooking for another four minutes. Another minute or two allows the corn to continue "cooking itself." The husks pull back easily and the silk comes off easier than it does when you remove it before cooking. If you want, the butter can be put on the corn under the husks before placing in the microwave. Overall, there is no waiting for water to boil, no steam heat filling the kitchen and raising the humidity.

To prepare a toasted cheese sandwich, you can have two slices of bread in the toaster while you get out the cheese and slice it. Place the cheese slices on the toast, put in the microwave oven and, 50 seconds later, you have a sandwich. Total elapsed time: a little over 2 minutes. Another plus in this case (if you are one of those like me who is "turned off" by the commercial bread advertised as "fresh" but it is more like "soft nothing") is that microwaving seems to "do something" to bread to make it chewier. One brand in particular gives you a good chew from microwaving—"Hillbilly."

Those are some of the "pluses" which come to mind right off the bat. Now for the

MINUSES

If you have a large family or are preparing for several guests, the limited size of the microwave ovens now available presents a problem. However, the microwave can be used in preparing part of the total menu you have planned and be a time and energy saver.

Microwave preparation of ground beef "does something" to the beef to make its texture somewhat "small-chunky." However, for those who must watch their intake of fats, the preparation of ground beef on a paper plate with a double thickness of paper towel underneath the meat results in a comparatively fat-free hamburger; the paper towel soaks up the fat as the meat cooks. The same type of preparation for bacon brings a "predrained of fat" plateful. The same technique can be adapted for preparing leftovers of pork and beef roasts and chops.

Baked potatoes can be prepared in much the same manner as corn on the cob. But if you prefer a crispy skin on the potato after cooking, microwave won't make you happy. Food in a microwave cooks from the inside out. Thus potato skin is not subjected to a prolonged exposure to heat as is the case in a conventional oven. The inside is just as good by microwaving but the skin is softer and has a little moisture still in it. Probably the "toasted" effect on the skin can be obtained in a microwave with a "browner" element. But that means heat from the browner element which means more heat in the kitchen and more electrical energy consumed — just for a crisp skin on the potato. It's a matter of personal taste. (And in winter the additional heat is an asset on a cold day.)

Fried eggs have a tendency to come out very chewy, almost rubbery. But if you're like me, you like things on the chewy side and the fried egg is no problem. On the other hand, you can mix up a batch of fluffy, tasty scrambled eggs in the microwave with no "chewy" problem.

Baking cookies becomes less time consuming with microwave. On one occasion, I mixed a batter for chocolate chip cookies. And in no time I had 8 dozen cookies baked. In the time it took to plop the gobs of batter on wax paper, the batch already in the oven was done. So it was a case of good timing with the microwave and no excessive oven heat, to produce good homemade chocolate chip cookies.

As I said, our experience with the microwave is somewhat limited. But that experience indicates that the "pluses" outnumber the "minuses."

In preparing our daily dinner, Esther uses the microwave regularly for part of the food preparation.

The decals are free to anyone who can make use of the fire safety program of the local fire department. They can be obtained from Fire Chief Fred Rayle or firemen Steve Monroe, Don Moore and Kevin White.

Sample decals are now visible on the front door of the News Office for those who may wish to see first hand what the decals look like.

The department is planning a chicken barbecue to be held at the fire hall. Donations will be $3.50 for adults and $2.75 for children 12 and under. The dinner includes two sides and a beverage.

80 Petitioners Seek Referendum On Sewage Plant

Reported $2,000-$3,000 Hookup Fee Brings Fear Of $2 Million Installation - 4 Times Assessed Valuation

Lack of information about approximate costs of individual hookups to a proposed sewage treatment plant installation at Saint Joe apparently has triggered an effort to get the matter of the sewage treatment plant on the November 6 ballot of the Saint Joe town election.

A petition circulated in Saint Joe has apparently been signed by 80 or so residents, ten times more than the number required by law to get such a referendum on the ballot.

The petition reads:

"The undersigned individuals, all registered voters in DeKalb County, State of Indiana and residents of the Civil Town of St. Joe, request that the issue of the Town of St. Joe establishing and constructing a sanitary sewer system, complete with treatment plant and collection system within the Town of St. Joe be placed on the ballot in November, 1979."

Very little information has come from the town board about facts in sewage treatment matters, despite questions raised publicly at board meetings and in the columns of this paper. It was at a special board meeting several weeks ago that the degree to which the proposed project had progressed became evident. With representatives of Clyde E. Williams & Associates and from a finance consulting firm, the special meeting indicated that the type of treatment plant had been decided some time ago but the exact date was not given in answer to a question about the matter. Only a reference to a

May 1977 public hearing was made. At the regular August meeting of the town board, it was shown that no minutes of the 1977 hearing were recorded in the clerk-treasurer's minute book and questions about the sewage treatment matter were still left unanswered. It was stated by a board member that the town attorney had a recording of the 1977 hearing and that he should be contacted by the editor of this paper to get the answers to his questions. The editor's reply was that it is the responsibility of the town board to answer questions and not the responsibility of town residents to search for the answers.

Applications for federal and state grants began 13 years ago, were abandoned for several years, then reinstituted a few years ago. At the present time, approval of applications for federal and state grants are pending, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) having the power of approval. The applications apparently contain information about costs for the various phases of the proposed installation. But no answer of any kind, even in approximate dollars, has ever been given to the question, "How much will each Saint Joe household pay out for its hookup?"

Although the consulting firm presented a resume of another sewage treatment project elsewhere in the state with a projected cost about the same as Saint Joe's, any comparison on household hookup installation charges was totally discouraged. The situation appeared to be one of "look at these figures, but don't look at those." or "these figures give you some idea of what is involved, but don't pay too much attention to them."

With such a confusing situation and with growing concern that household hookup costs will be in the $2,00 to $3,000 range, a group of local residents decided to petition for a November referendum to allow the residents of Saint Joe to voice their approval or disapproval of continuing the project.

The cost of the proposed sewage treatment plant is over $2 million, four times the total assessed valuation of the entire town.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

Belated happy anniversary greetings to Evening Star columnist Jane Kempf and hubby. —And Saturday was the wedding anniversary date of Estil and Thelma Taylor, and Esther and yours truly.

While it isn' the most pleasant experience to anticipate — surgery for a double hernia — still there are some things arising from that experience which leave me with the general feeling of pleasure.

With Docs Edwards and Harvey, the nurses in surgery, and all the other nurses, aides and others at DeKalb Memorial Hospital providing extra good care, I caught myself saying, "There's my hospital," the next time I drove past after being released. I smiled at the thought because there have been times when some folks thought I was "anti-hospital" in years gone by — and here I had just used "my hospital" in my thoughts!

My attachment to the hospital obviously is not because of the building; it's because of the people in it. Mike Schuller of Butler was my roommate (he had an appendectomy) and we both agreed that we had received top care from everyone. He even noted that the longer we stayed, the better looking the nurses got—but that might have some implications beyond good looks.

If I tried to name everyone from "home" who works in the hospital and had a part in providing for my care, I would miss someone, just as I would miss someone if I tried to name all those who sent their best wishes either in person or by other means.

But one I remember in particular is LuAnn Baughman who is in vocational training as a nurses aide while attending DeKalb Eastside High School. She was a "fun" conversationalist and, whether she knew it or not, motivated me to get on my feet more than I wanted to. When your gut hurts and burns, you don't feel like walking; but she unwittingly challenged me with a friendly, "—And we're going to get up again today later on." (Of course, there is another possible factor — a dirty old man will do just about anything to keep from appearing "too old"!)

There is only one criticism I have—and I can't totally blame hospital personnel. It's sort of a sign of the times. That one thing is noise. A couple of times it sounded like a party was going on at night. I don't mean music, laughing, drinking and so on; I just mean a steady stream of conversation with no apparent effort to avoid disturbing patients. And the opening of utility storage and the handling of metal items also were done often without apparent awareness of how disturbing the noise can be.

I say it's a sign of the times because so many things have become "loose" in their doing in the past 25 years. Time was that you walked very quietly, some people even tip-toed, down the halls of hospitals and conversation in the halls was hushed. Even the nurses at the floor desk talked very quietly in those days.

Now you have normal conversation, sometimes loud laughter or conversation. And to top it off, we now have the din of TV to add to the problem.

I suppose I am making some people very unhappy because of my concern over the loss of the "sh-h-h" atmosphere in hospitals. To today's younger generation of nurses and aides, the suggestion of a hushed atmosphere is probably "far out." But I am speaking not to be fault finding but to suggest, as a recent patient, that there is too much noise in hospitals today and it is disturbing to some patients. —And sleeping pills are not the answer.

I am not alone in my concern about hospital noise. When I mentioned the matter during a Sunday School adult class session a couple of Sundays ago, there were four or five heads nodding in agreement. One suggestion had to do with removing TV from patient rooms. I don't want to deprive some people of their pleasure in watching TV as they convalesce. But I do think that there should be a "shield" around the TV sets, to direct the sound toward the viewer. As it is now, the structure of TV sets has the sound coming out the side or back of the set. Thus, it is possible that the TV sound is louder to a patient across the way than to the patient who has the TV at their bedside.

I realize that the speakers are placed in the TV sets to take up the least possible space and provide for easier handling. Unfortunately, the hard walls and floors, necessary for hygienic purposes, serve as a sound chamber for any kind of noise, including TV sound, and it carries across and down the halls.

Not all personnel were unaware of the noise factor. A couple of nights it was very quiet. And one night I could hear the swish of a nurse's uniform as she glided into our room during the night (she was tall and wore a long flowing lightweight robe over her white nurse's outfit). She brought memories of my maternal grandmother, Mollie Rathert, who was a nurse for many many years at Lutheran Hospital in Fort Wayne. When I was a kid, I occasionally was taken over to the hospital "to see where Manu works"— and I remember the swish of her uniform and the quiet atmosphere that was closely guarded by everyone.

I hope this will be taken as constructive criticism, because I really appreciate the care and attention I received from everyone at "my" hospital. They made my stay an enjoyable experience.

RE: Microbiological Standards Exceeded

The St. Joe Water Supply failed to comply with the drinking water standard for coliform bacteria, for the three-month period of June, July, and August 1979. The coliform organism is used as an indicator of microbiological quality of drinking water. Coliform indicates contamination and a possible presence of disease-causing organisms. Presence of the coliform organism means that we cannot guarantee the safety of the drinking water.

ILLEGAL VEGETABLE GARDENS?

Q. What is the right answer? Is it going to be illegal to grow vegetables in my backyard?

—F.X.C., Clover, S.C.

A. Legislation filed by Senator Frank Church (D-Idaho) and Congressman E. de la Garza (D-Texas), and supported by the Department of Agriculture, would make it against the law to grow certain varieties of tomatoes, cucumbers, peppers, celery, carrots, and okra. The patent laws will be extended over these vegetables, formerly excluded, if the 1970 Plant Variety Protection Act is amended by this proposed legislation. The Agriculture Department says it favors the proposal so the United States can join in an international effort to establish uniform varieties of vegetables. Indeed it is already illegal in England — even in backyard gardens—to grow certain cross-pollinated plants, with fines for violation ranging up to $800. According to the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, there are 2,100 varieties to be banned by June 30th of next year; and three-fourths of the varieties grown in Europe may be extinct in a decade. Senate hearings on the botanical legislation have yet to be scheduled.

From The Editor's Desk....

Who Pays For The Pope??

A current topic causing a lot of discussion nationally is the visit of Pope John Paul II to the United States. Objections are being raised to the expenditure of public tax money to provide adequate facilities in certain cities. The other side of the argument is that public tax money is spent for other visiting dignitaries.

In his "Bayh-Lines" column from Washington, Senator Birch Bayh points out that the use of public funds was involved during the anti-war demonstrations and civil rights protests of the 1960's and during the farmers' protest on The Mall, "a massive park owned by the American people in the capital of our country," as the Senator states.

Well, I know it's difficult to determine that fine line which separates a violation of the principal of separation of church and state from government seemingly promoting a particular religious denomination. And sometimes it seems that our government is abandoning the basic recognition of THE one God which is a part of our nation's heritage.

However, I think the Senator and others are overlooking the fact that the use—or rather abuse—of The Mall in Washington by demonstrating groups was not looked upon favorably by many Americans, perhaps a majority of Americans. No way can anyone justify to me the use of a memorial pool as a place to wade or use as a latrine on the basis of "it's public property."

So I am inclined to think that if a religious leader from across the sea is going to visit the United States, it is his people who should be providing for most of the needs in connection with a visit. I'm not speaking against Roman Catholics; after all, they're my brothers and sisters. I am, however, recognizing that the Roman Catholic Church is the richest in the world. And if the coming visit is so important, it should provide most of the funds as a "mission" obligation.

If there are going to be public masses in places the Pope visits, those masses are the responsibility of his people, not the citizens of the United States and its states and cities.

Feed Replacement Heifers For Earlier Freshening

You probably replace at least one-fourth of your older cows each year with heifers. Getting heifer calves up to breeding size at an early age is probably much more important than you realize from a dollar and cents standpoint. Early development and breeding can result in over $150.00 more income during the first lactation. The Wayne Way gets the job done right. (1) Make sure calf gets colostrum (2) Start calf on Wayne Calfnip along with Calf Krunch at 4 days of age (3) Continue to feed Calf Krunch to 4 months (4) and, at 4 months switch to Wayne Fitting Ration.

Come in and get all the facts on the most modern program available for developing replacements for your dairy herd.

Deaf Man Designs Tiny Hearing Aid

Offers free model

A remarkable tiny hearing aid has been perfected by a man who has been hard of hearing for nearly ten years.

This small device has no dangling cords or separate transmitting units and is worn completely in your ear.

It was developed especially for those persons who can hear but can't understand. This hearing instrument provides "ear-level" hearing with the wearer picking up speech, sounds, television and radio at his ear. Due to the use of transistors, the user cost is extremely low.

A true life actual size replica of the smallest all-in-the-ear hearing aid ever made will be given absolutely free to anyone sending in this advertisement while supply lasts. So we suggest you write for yours now. No obligation whatsoever. Write to Hear, Box 390, Garrett, Indiana 46738. (Adv.)

Questionable Referendum Caused By Lack Of Inpnt-Output

—By The Editor

I am very much aware that what I say about town affairs in these pages must be very carefully considered because, as a candidate for town board in November, I am in a position wherein I should not take unfair advantage and use these pages in a way that other candidates cannot. Since what I say becomes a matter of printed public record in these pages, I can also be called to account if and when I mislead others.

This situation has been on my mind for a long time, even when I was not running for office. Reporting the happenings in town affairs has not always brought pleasant relationships with those who have served in town office. Despite my statements that questions in the mind of the public often remain unanswered, I incur the wrath of town board members and the clerk-treasurer on frequent occasions in seeking or giving information and in expressing opinions.

An illustration of this situation occured at Monday night's town board meeting. When comments were made by others that the petition for a vote on the proposed sewage treatment plant for Saint Joe is useless, I pointed out that a warning had been passed along to board member Maurice Kline by Neil Wisler that per-household hookup fees are now in the $2,000 to $3,000 range. Mr. Wisler is by occupation directly involved in the field of construction as related to such projects as sewage treatment. (A few years ago the cost was in the $1,000 or so range.)

When I noted that approximate costs of hookups were not available, three of the four town officials were obviously not too happy. And their answer was that no definite figures could be given about these costs. They also said the federal government in effect writes a blank check for the total project - whatever the engineering firm says is needed, the government will pay it.

I don't buy that.

And as the somewhat heated discussion continued, the clerk-treasurer began leafing through the minutes and came up with an April 1977 meeting at which it was stated the town's share was over $200,000 at that time. She said now the local share was higher by some $70,000.

Now, if we know the local share is up some $70,000 in just two years' time, it is obvious that the costs involved in installing a sewage treatment plant have been estimated by the engineering firm. And if the federal government, through the Environmental Protection Agency, specifies how much is awarded to a community on the basis of the community's application for federal funds, the federal government must have been given cost estimates on which to base its approval of grants. Surely the engineers can come up with an estimated cost of hookup at the same time they are estimating the cost of sewer lines (as they did in the 1977 report), the cost of the treatment plant (as they did in the 1977 report), the cost of repairing and replacing sidewalks and streets after all the digging is done (as they did in the 1977 report), and so on.

If you think you have been misled by statements made in this newspaper about the sewage matter, keep these FACTS in mind:

—The EPA is now DISCOURAGING high-cost sewage installations and offers a 10% "bonus" for "innovative" ideas which will achieve pollution control at a lower cost. (A representative of Clyde E. Williams and Associates noted that some of the ideas incorporated in the sewage treatment plan for Saint Joe fall into that "innovative" category - but that information did not come out until a troublemaking, irritating local newspaper editor pointed out the EPA's changed attitude as evidenced in Steuben County.

—The Steuben County sewage matter finds a surprising situation in which the majority of people WANT the $16 to $24 million project carried out after being "sold" on the idea by the EPA over the past several years; but the EPA now says that's too much money and smaller localized treatment facilities should be installed at less cost.

—The estimated cost of Saint Joe's sewage treatment facility is FOUR TIMES the total assessed value of the entire town. Question: If Steuben County's original sewage treatment plant cost is "too much money" in an area of high real estate values, isn't four times a town's assessed valuation also "too much money"?

It is true - the referendum to give town voters a chance to express their opinion on the proposed sewage treatment plant is "useless" in a sense, inasmuch as grants have been applied for already. Howevef, town residents did not have an opportunity to express their opinions in the past in a way that was obviously intended to result in widespread public participation. The fact that a hearing was held in May of 1977 for public input does not mean that widespread public input was gained. One local resident noted recently that, at the 1977 hearing, his questions were not too welcomed and he was given the impression that he should "sit down and shut up."

The town clerk-treasurer noted as did a board member Monday night that in 1977 the engineering firm's report was available for public inspection at the local bank, the post office and perhaps one other place. However, the public notice which appeared in this paper on April 7 and 14, 1977, giving the public notice of the hearing, said the engineering report could be inspected "during regular business hours" at the fire hall. The report never was available at the fire hall and there never was public notice given that the report could be examined at the bank, post office or elsewhere. If you saw the report, it was by accident. If you wanted to see it, you had to ask around to find out where it was.

The question which has remained unanswered, and is still unanswered even after Monday night, is: when did the town board select the type of sewage treatment plant based on the engineers' recommendations? The board insists that the EPA selects the type of plant or "tells you" which one to install. However, that 1977 engineers' report contains the following:

"After the aproval of the Facilities Plan, the Town has to authorize the Engineering firm to go ahead and prepare the plans and specifications for the wastewater collection system and wastewater treatment plant under the Step II grant."

The way I read that paragraph, it says the town board approves "A" plan for facilities first and tells the engineers to go ahead second.

Since no answer has been given to the question "when did the town board select a treatment plant," a doubt is raised as to whether or not the applications for federal and state grants are "legal." The town has no record of the May 1977 hearing at which the engineering firm said the board gave its approval to recommendations.

If there is no record of board approval and if, after two or three occasions on which the question has been asked by this editor, no answer has been given as to when such approval has been given, and if no one seems to remember that approval was ever given, the referendum becomes "useful," not "useless." And any town residents who go on general statements by town officials concerning the sewage treatment plant are being misled by town officials, not by the editor of the local newspaper.

What is the purpose of the referendum? —to give the public a chance to say whether or not they want to proceed in the sewage matter on a "blank check" basis and whether or not they think sewage treatment should be installed regardless of what it may do to their pocketbooks.

A statement made several times at town board meetings to counteract questions asked is, "We've been mandated to put in a sewer system." That statement apparently is supposed to settle the entire matter.

Well, "mandate" doesn't mean a thing if you don't have the money. Actually, Saint Joe was mandated to have a sewer system completed IN 1977!

That's right—the system was supposed to be in by the end of 1977. A letter to the town board, dated February 12, 1973, from the Stream Pollution Board of the State of Indiana, "mandated" the installation of sewage treatment facilities.

That was six years ago.

—So much for "mandates."

It's too bad this appears to be a "fight". We should be working together for the common good. But when answers are not given to questions, and when it appears that answers are not sought by those in public office to satisfy the doubts which are in the minds of the public, it remains a matter of opinion as to whether there is a "fight" going on or whether there is justification in seeking answers to questions having a big dollar sign in front of them.

Quayle Criticizes "Funny" Money

Indiana's Fourth District Representative Dan Quayle believes forcing acceptance of a new dollar coin by withdrawing $1 bills from circulation is a bad idea and he has urged the Secretary of Treasury to abandon the proposal.

Mr. Quayle said last week he will join with Representative Thomas B. Evans, Jr. (R-Del.) in sponsoring legislation which would prohibit government officials from removing the dollar bill from circulation without prior congressional approval.

The Indiana congressman had earlier joined with other House members in writing to Secretary of Treasury G. William Miller warning against such action.

"The new dollar coin is not being accepted by the American public," Mr. Quayle pointed out. "In fact, it has caused confusion and mistakes for many businesses and consumers because it resembles the quarter," he explained.

Mr. Quayle said that the Treasury Department has circulated a study recommending the phaseout of the dollar bill in favor of the two "dollars" in the monetary system, the Eisenhower and the Susan B. Anthony dollar coin.

"Government should be devoting its time to strengthening the dollar by fighting inflation —rather than assisting with coins and paper bills," the Indiana congressman said.

TO THE EDITOR—

Dear Mr. Haberkorn:

Enclosed is some information on the Wolf Park of the North American Wildlife Park Foundation, which is a unique research and educational facility near Battle Ground, Indiana. We are open to the public, and provide special instruction to visitors, schools and other groups for a general appreciation of wildlife, especially the wolf.

We have had a good response from visitors all over the state of Indiana and surrounding states. We think that your readers would also be interested in our facility.

At a time of increased gasoline shortage, trips to such places as ours can be a worthwhile weekend activity for the entire family.

Thanking you for your consideration, I remain

Sincerely yours,
[illegible]
Director

North Central's Wolf Park is open to the public [illegible] Saturday and Sunday. Howl Nights are Tuesday and Thursday nights at 8 and 9 p.m. in all kinds of weather except rain. The park is closed December 1 to April 30 except for Wolf Howl Nights. Reservations can be made by calling (317) 567-2265. —Ed.

Town Board

One of the bills presented for payment from Saint Joe town funds recently was for $240 for legal services. It came from town attorney Brad Thomas who handled the town's suit against former resident Rick Wannemacher. The suit cited some four or five violations of town ordinances.

Several weeks ago, an offer was made to the town of a settlement of $900 by Mr. Wannemacher's attorney to the town attorney. That amount was to cover removal of an unauthorized curb and installation of a sidewalk, plus the town's legal costs. However, two of the three town board members, president Butch Coburn and member Loretta Loy, refused to accept the offer while member Maurice Kline urged that it be accepted.

As a result of the refusal, the town must pay out $240 in legal fees which would have been paid by the settlement if the settlement had been accepted.

Little Hoosiers

Riverdale Little Hoosiers held their organizational meeting Friday, September 21, in the Riverdale cafetorium.

Donna Clark showed the group slides of activities past Little Hoosiers had participated in. Betty Wagner and her class helped all the members learn the Little Hoosier Pledge.

Election of officers was held. Those elected include: Jerry Baker, president; Mike Powell, vice-president; and Jarod Olson, secretary.

This year, Little Hoosiers is for fourth graders only. Since Indiana History is taught in fourth grade, Little Hoosiers will be an extension of material which is studied in the fourth grade social studies program.

Breakfast Tickets

Tickets for the October 25 annual DeKalb County Women's Prayer Breakfast are available locally from Mrs. Nancy McNabb, Mrs. Ruth Coburn and Mrs. Doris Stuck.

The breakfast will be served in the Auburn United Methodist Church starting at 9 a.m.

Every town in DeKalb County was represented at a recent steering committee meeting at the home of Mrs. Donald Ruegsegger in Waterloo.

Ticket prices are $3 and include a Continental Breakfast followed by the program in the church sanctuary.

Saint Joe Man Dies In One Vehicle Accident

Philip E. Garrison, 32, of Saint Joe was killed in a one-car accident on State Road 8. He apparently was traveling at a high rate of speed when he lost control of his car just east of the Norfolk & Western railroad crossing. The car went airborne over a ditch and hit an embankment on the opposite side some 700 feet away from the railroad crossing. Mr. Garrison was dead when investigating officers arrived at the scene. He suffered a broken neck.

The accident occurred at 2:45 p.m. Tuesday.

Mr. Garrison is survived by his wife, Sandy; two daughters; a step-son, David; his father; a sister; and a brother.

Funeral rites were held in Bailey Mortuary at Huntington Thursday of this week.

—that Indiana has lost 17 per cent of its intercity bus service in the last ten years.
—that after a two-year study of Indiana's Food Stamp program the U.S. Ag Department says the state's program is in full and complete compliance with federal regulations. The group had constantly insisted that Indiana wasn't doing a good job while Stanton contended that "dead weight" had been removed from the state program through diligent administrative policies.

Some medicines need special protection

You know what happens to a delicious custard if you permit it to be exposed for some time in a warm place. It can turn into a dangerous killer. Therefore, you refrigerate custards to prevent this. Many medicines must be protected against a similar change or they too can be harmful.

Pharmacists are taught at college how to store all medicines and to date those which lose potency after a certain time. Some of them must be kept away from heat or light. Others we keep refrigerated till ready for use. When dispensing such medicines which are subject to change, we will always inform you if there are any precautions you must observe.

"A GREAT MANY PEOPLE ENTRUST US with their prescriptions, health needs and other pharmacy products. We consider this trust a privilege and a duty. May we be your personal family pharmacy?"

Sweet Bulky Makes Dairy Rations even Better

SWEET BULKY really knows how to impress today's dairyman. Its ingredients, minerals, vitamins, beet pulp, dehydrated alfalfa meal AND MOLASSES tell the story . . . and, make the feed. It's sweet and bulky just like the name implies. When mixed into dairy rations, Sweet Bulky increases feed intake because it makes feed taste better and makes it more digestible. Wayne Sweet Bulky increases intake and, by so doing, increases production.

We'll bet you didn't know how annoying that drippy faucet of yours really was.

It costs $24.00 to heat the 2400 gallons of water you lose each year from one hot water faucet that drips once a second.

And maybe a 10¢ washer is all it would take to stop it.

There are other ways you can cut your hot water costs, too.

Take showers instead of baths. Use the cold water cycle on your washing machine. Turn off your electric water heater when you go on vacation.

And, since your hot water costs will go up as you raise your water temperature, make sure your water heater isn't set too high. You can easily get by with 140° water in most cases.

We have some S.A.V.E. booklets that not only show you how to save electricity all around your home, but also how to become part of our Save America's Valuable Energy Program.

Stop in your nearest I&M office for your free copies.
At I&M, we want you to get the most out of your electric service.

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

Every so often, as I head up the stairs for bed after watching a couple of hours of TV, it dawns on me how stupid it was to sit there and watch some of the "junk" that is presented, sometimes repeats.

That happened after watching "One Day At a Time" in the past wek. The story was that the younger daughter (age 18) of a divorced working woman was feeling the pressure from her boyfriend to "go all the way" in their showing of affection for one another. The daughter was puzzled because she had misgivings about going along with the boyfriend's amourous actions but also had natural impulses of affection.

To get to the point, the daughter obtains contraceptive material from some agency, the boyfriend has obtained his own apartment, and they have a date that night.

It all ends well because the daughter realizes that to give in does not mean true love exists and the boyfriend shows his selfishness by complaining "what about me" when the young lady says no.

What didn't "end well" however was the fact that I, along with millions of others watching that show, was laughing at the conclusion which showed the mother, an older daughter and the friendly building supervisor, waiting back at the family apartment for the young daughter to return. The thought occurred to me then, "My gosh, I was laughing at a situation in which mom and sis are waiting at home for a report on what happened between the younger daughter and her boyfriend. It was a case of "well, how did it go" being an appropriate line for mom or sis when the perplexed young lady returned home.

And I felt ashamed that I had sat there to the program's conclusion involving a situation that was not funny nor did the presentation of the situation (which I recognize is reality) had nothing involved beyond human reason. There was nothing sacred suggested or implied, and that is what really got to me as I headed for bed.

And watching "Taxi," I was again ashamed of myself (and disappointed in the program's writers) when the last laugh came with a crippled boy's lifting of a billfold from one of the program's main characters.

And it seems that when the writers come to a stalemate as to a storyline, they always fall back on a homosexual theme either for the "heavy" stuff or for laughs. And they all seem to reach the same stalemate at the same time.

—And after using up the homosexual bit, now the powers that be in TV have gone into incest.

One of our boys made a wise observation recently as we watched a two-hour "special" that sounded from the title as if it would be a program with some action but the title was misleading. I believe it was Mark who said, "Everything is a soap opera nowadays."

Town Board Candidates - Town Election November 6, 1979

Voting- age residents of Saint Joe will go to the polls Tuesday, November 6, to elect those who will serve on the town board and as town clerk for the four-year term 1980-1983.

Since there are no other elections being held (at the county, state and federal level), it means that town residents will vote solely on their interest in the town alone.

To assist town voters in deciding whom they will give their support to at the election, the background of the various candidates is presented here. Undoubtedly, there will be certain information overlooked which is significant in the minds of certain residents. Any such omissions are unintentional, but The News will gladly add to the following information if contacted by interested citizens. The resumes will be published every issue until the election in order to reach as many people as possible. With many new faces in town, information about town candidates is essential to help newcomers vote intelligently.

There are three wards in the Town of Saint Joe. All residents of the town vote for candidates from each ward. The town-clerk is elected every four years as an at-large candidate, that is, party nominees for clerk-treasurer can come from any ward in the town.

The opposing candidates are:

WARD 1—Joe Robinson (D) v Ted Haberkorn (R).

WARD 2—Loretta Loy (R) unopposed (the Democrat nominee was forced to withdraw because of a new election law which prohibits state or federal government employees from serving in an elective office).

WARD 3—Maurice Kline (D) v Larry McKown (R).

THIRD WARD

MAURICE KLINE

Maurice Kline has resided at Saint Joe for 37 years. He and his wife, Violet, operated an independent dairy at Saint Joe for many years. In the dairy's early years, it was housed at the Kline residence, then on Widney Avenue (Second Street on some town maps). Later the dairy was located in the building on Spencer Street from which a discount food outlet now operates. The trend to bigness in business in general and rising costs of operation forced the local dairy to close in 1970. Mr. Kline now does some farming and Mrs. Kline serves as teacher's aide at Riverdale Elementary School.

Mr. Kline's activities include:

*Served as town board president for the 1964-1967 term during which a new well was drilled for the town's water system.

*As board president, led the move for the first sewage treatment survey for the town.

*As board president, led the move to purchase a new fire truck for the town.

*Member of Saint Joe Volunteer Fire Department 25 years.

*Member of the Saint Joe Lions Club for the past 37 years and served as president in 1951.

*For several years has given preliminary training to pups for the Leader Dog Foundation at Rochester, Michigan.

The Klines have three children: Jim, a school principal at Sherwood, Ohio; Jane, a civil service employee at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base at Dayton, Ohio; and Jerry, an electrical engineer with the IBM Corporation in New York.

LARRY McKOWN

Larry McKown has resided in Saint Joe for 11 years. He is currently employed at the Vulcraft plant at Saint Joe and has been with the firm since it began operations in 1972.

Mr. Kown was well-known in the area as a member of the Brush College Gospel Singers. He and two brothers, plus Jim Grimm, sang gospel songs for many organization meetings and Mr. McKown provided accompaniment on the piano as well as providing vocal harmony.

Mr. McKown and his wife, Jeanette, have three children: Larry, Jr., married and employed at Vulcraft; Janet, employed at Butler; and Tracy, a sophomore at DeKalb Eastside High School.

CLERK-TREASURER

HARVEY CARR

Harvey Carr has served two terms as clerk-treasurer in the past. He was elected to that office in 1959 for the 1960-63 term and in 1963 for the 1964-1967 term.

He and his wife, Fern, have resided in Saint Joe 35 years. He retired from full time employment at International Harvester in 1972 after 28 years with the company.

The Carrs have four children, Andrea, Melanie, Renee and Nick.

She is employed at the local Vulcraft plant in the office and began there when the plant opened in 1972. Prior to that time she was employed at the Rhinehart Company at Spencerville.

Mrs. Frank and her husband, Jack, have resided at Saint Joe for 16 years. They have four children: Tom, married and a civil engineer at Mount Carmel, Illinois; Christina Meyer of Hamilton; Nanette of Butler; and Jack, a sophomore at DeKalb Eastside High School.

Harry Logsdon Killed In Crash

Staff Sergeant Harry Logsdon, 31, son of Elmer Logsdon of Saint Joe and Ruby Logsdon of Fort Wayne, died Saturday of injuries suffered in an automobile accident at Fort Gordon, Augusta, Georgia, where he was stationed with the Army.

Sergeant Logsdon had been recovering recently from injuries suffered earlier this year when his parachute failed to open. Some sources said it was "unbelievable" that he was still alive after the parachute failure. He had made thousands of jumps during his Army career.

Sergeant Logsdon had been in military service ten years, including duty in Korea, Okinawa and Panama with airborne units, special forces and the Green Berets.

Survivors include the parents; his wife, Young Mi; a daughter, Shannon, at home; four brothers, Paul of Fort Wayne, Elmo of Antwerp, Ohio, Thomas of Sarasota, Florida, and Richard of Luther, Oklahoma; and two sisters, Brenda Hamm and Sondra Mays of Fort Wayne. The deceased was born in Kentucky.

Funeral services were set for Thursday of this week at the D. O. McComb & Sons Lakeside Park Funeral Home. Burial will be in Highland Park Cemetery at Fort Wayne.

The Blazers scored a touchdown in the first quarter on a 5 yard run by Keith Sanders. The kick for the extra point failed.

Then in the third quarter the Blazers scored again on a 5 yard run by Chris Wood. Faking a kick for the extra point, the locals scored two points on a pass from Chuck Barkley to Chris Kelsey.

In halftime ceremonies, Kim Powell, daughter of MM Tom Powell of Spencerville, was crowned homecoming queen by last year's queen, Cherri Schmucker.

Others seeking the queen title were Brenda Beaty, Wendy Stine, Sharon Frakes, Jenny Haines, Kim Mullett and Tammy Gilvin.

Community Club Hears Covered Bridge Report

—Marjorie Shook, reporter

The Spencerville Covered Bridge Investigative Committee appointed by the Spencervillt Community Club president, along with invited guests, met in the Commuunity Club dining room at 6:30 p.m. Friday, October 5.

Those attending included:

Special guest Craig Leonard, architect, Architectural Preservation, Inc.;

Lawrence Bomar, chairman, DeKalb County Council;

Ronald Feller, DeKalb County Councilman;

Robert Forrest, DeKalb County Commissioner;

James Herzer, DeKalb County Commissioner;

John Reinhart, DeKalb County Commissioner;

Wallace Paul Graham, DeKalb County Highway Superintendent;

Mary Mountz, Garrett Historical Society representative;

Harold M. Murphy, Spencer Township Trustee;

Marjorie Shook, committee member;

Charlotte Hudson, committee member;

Glenn Moore, committee member;

Virginia Laux, committee member;

Robert Wilder, committee member.

The meeting was called to order with Robert Wilder presiding. Mr. Leonard spoke informally about his specialty of architectural historic preservation. Brochures relative to historic preservation grants-in-aid for acquisition and development projects, the National Register of Historic Places, as well as photocopies of successful bridge preservation projects were presented. Mr. Leonard referred to federal government funding now a possibility to be used in preservation and restoration by the Bridge Replacement Act of 1978.

Attorney John Martin Smith has a nomination form completed except for minor clarification, for mailing to the state review board for evaluation. If the bridge meets the criteria, the nomination form is signed and forwarded to the National Register for final approval. Placement on the official list makes the project eligible for grant funding programs. Six months time, approximately, could be expected for processing the project.

The county commissioners stated a desire to keep the covered bridge, recognizing it as the only one remaining in northern Indiana, one in which there is community pride, and a heritage to share with visitors.

A desire for the 1873 bridge to be made workable, if feasible, to enable school buses, farm machinery and the new Spencer Township fire truck to pass through safely was expressed as a prime desire for the county officials to consider.

The commissioners reported that M&W of North Manchester made a 1974 bridge inspection and recommended replacement in 1979. Weber Associates have made a re-inspection this year with no report in to the state at this time.

Residents of Allen County brought petitions with hundreds of signatures requesting consideration to keep the covered bridge in working order.

Mr. Leonard said money, labor and materials could be accepted for such a preservation project. An invitation was extended to "sign up" on available sheets stating intent.

Officials noted no plans were made to remove curves in the roadway approaching the bridge.

A question relative to the possibility of establishing a county park board was directed to the county officials. In response, it was stated the mandate power granted such a board by the state legislature made it a potential "monster" and as such would not be given favorable consideration.

Other statements of concern included:

Feasibility study for determination;

Any feasibility funds made from the county cumulative bridge fund could be considered a part of matching funds for a later project;

A sprinkling system, alarm, chemical means of dampening a fire, fire detection and so on were requested to be included if funding became a possibility for a feasibility plan.

Coffee and cookies were served following adjournment.

Our legacy from the medicine man

Who woud ever think on entering today's streamlined pharmacy that many of the medicinals available there had their early beginnings with the medicine man? Of course, they have undergone many changes and refinements. In early days, Indians chewed on roots of certain plants in order to extract a "magic substance." This later evolved to a "more sophisticated" technique of cooking the roots for hours and then boiling down the resultant liquid.

Thousands of years have passed since these earliest processes were begun. Our contemporary drugs may bear little resemblance to their crude ancestors. But, many of the basic chemical substances do date back to the medicine man.

"A GREAT MANY PEOPLE ENTRUST US with their prescriptions, health needs and other pharmacy products. We consider this trust a privilege and a duty. May we be your personal family pharmacy?"

Start Feeder Calves the Gentle Wayne Way

All of the experts "preach" the importance of starting feeder cavles right. Wayne agrees. The first few days in the feedlot are critical. We have feeds that offer a one-two punch that all but knocks out feeder calf losses in the early stages. Start smaller calves on all-natural protein WAYNE FEEDER CALF CONDITIONER and larger calves on FEEDER CALF STARTER. Both contain high quality protein, lots of Vitamin A, electrolytes and health-protecting Aureo S-700R. Calves take to these pelleted stress-fighting feeds quickly. There's no better or surer way to start beef calves.

Monday, October 8, was called "Columbus Day" and the post office was closed for the so-called "national holiday." But Columbus Day is actually October 12 traditionally. So, the Congress-established "long weekend" Monday observance means that inflation was given a boost—because you paid for service that was not available.

Better we should call these Congress-established "long weekend" Monday holidays by a more accurate name — "Inflation Day."

Shirley Mack had an ad in this paper two issues ago for babysitting service. Then last week Harold Curie called and wanted to know why his telephone number was listed for babysitting. I said if it was wrong one week, it was wrong both weeks—not knowing that Mike had reset the ad from small type to larger type and in the process a "9" became an "8."

So, in case you were wondering — no, Harold isn't doing any babysitting on the side.

Town Board

At a special meeting Tuesday evening, the town board of Saint Joe moved to allow the question of proceeding with a proposed sewage treatment installation to be placed on a referendum ballot at the November 6 town election.

With two of three board members present, Maurice Kline moved that the referendum be held. Board president Butch Coburn supported the motion. However, Mr. Coburn stated he was doing so only to allow Mr. Kline "have his way" in the matter. "I think the referendum will only add to the confusion," Mr. Coburn said.

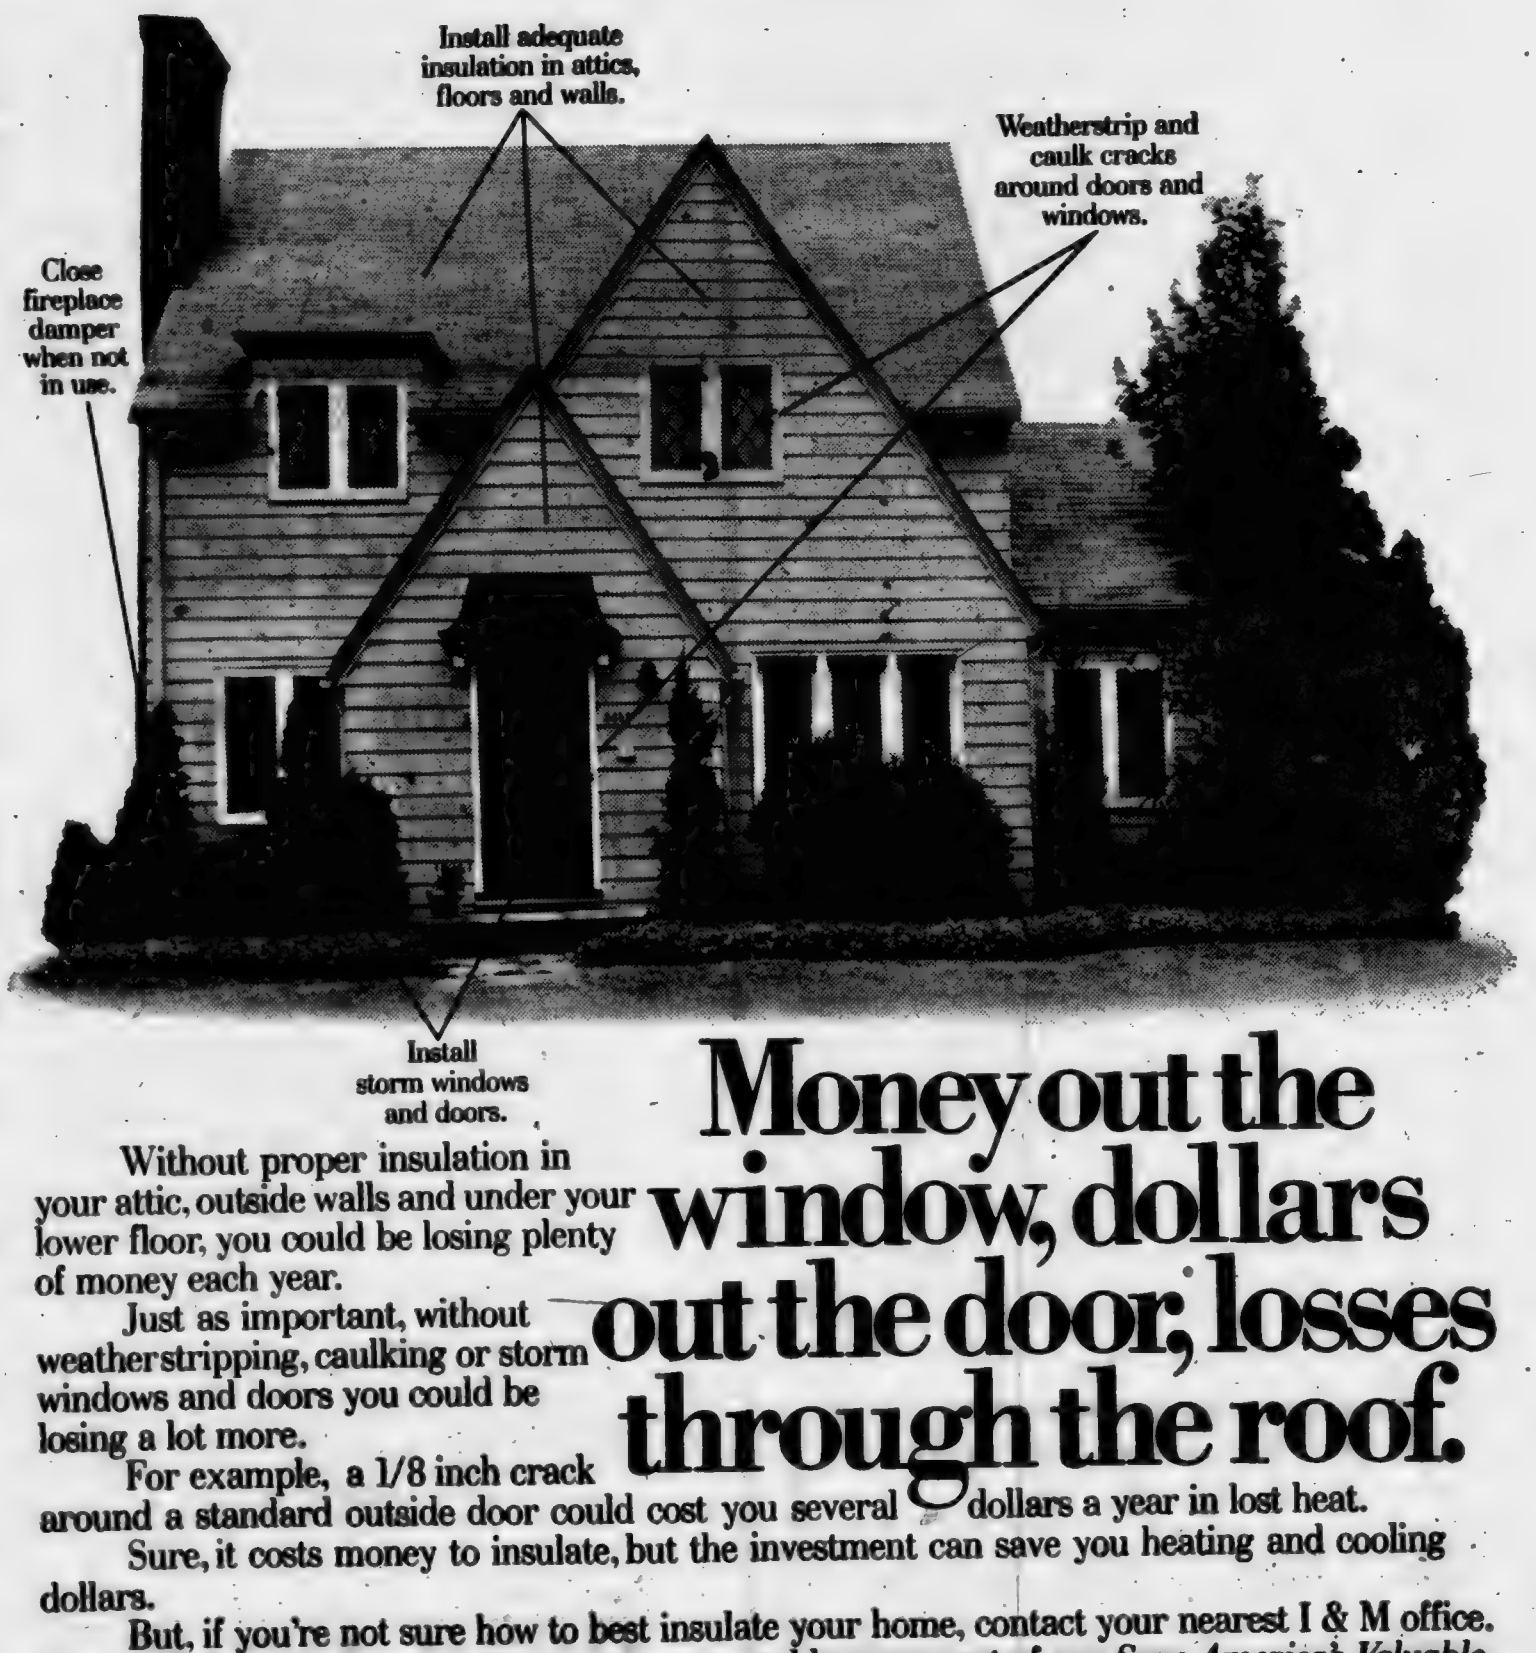
A conflict of opinions from legal sources appears to be a big factor in the "confusion." One source says a sewage treatment facility is not a "public utility" and therefore does not fall under public utility laws. Another source says the sewage treatment facility does come under the category "public utility."

Clerk-treasurer Emma Frank presented a letter to the board Tuesday evening in which town attorney Brad Thomas indicated he could find no legal status for a referendum. The Indiana Stream Pollution Board was said to have indicated a referendum will have no bearing on the sewage proposal inasmuch as federal and state grants have been applied for. Mrs. Frank said approval of the grants is expected in a short time.

Editor Ted Haberkorn was invited to attend the meeting and pointed out that the Environmental Protection Agency has reversed itself in the Steuben County sewage plant proposal. A few years ago the EPA urged that a total sewage treatment facility be installed for the Lake James area. Now the EPA says it will not fund the $16 to $24 million project because "it's too much money" and says smaller localized facilities should be installed.

The editor noted that the EPA now says that septic tank installations are not the heavily polluting source they once were thought to be.

Mrs. Frank noted that "everyone knows something must be done about sewage here." It appears that most of those who signed the petition asking for the refereidum are of the same opinion. The real question involved appears to be "how" to approach the problem and the petition-signers believe the current plans are too costly.



Money out the window, dollars out the door, losses through the roof.

Without proper insulation in your attic, outside walls and under your lower floor, you could be losing plenty of money each year.

Just as important, without weatherstripping, caulking or storm windows and doors you could be losing a lot more.

For example, a 1/8 inch crack around a standard outside door could cost you several dollars a year in lost heat.

Sure, it costs money to insulate, but the investment can save you heating and cooling dollars.

But, if you're not sure how to best insulate your home, contact your nearest I & M office. They will show you how you can save energy and become part of our Save America's Valuable Energy Program.

Sewage Referendum Wording Adds To Confusion

—By The Editor

When Saint Joe voters go to the polls Tuesday, November 6, to elect town board members and a clerk-treasurer to serve for the next four years, they will also have an opportunity to express themselves about a proposed sewage treatment facility for the town.

Unfortunately, the wording on the referendum ballot concerning the proposal does not indicate the purpose behind the petition which brought about the referendum. The petition asked that "the issue of the Town of St. Joe establishing and constructing a sanitary sewer system" be placed on the ballot. Probably the petition should have had an additional phrase in it to be absolutely specific— ". . . . due to the extremely high costs involved in the proposed project. . ."

Those who signed the petition are not necessarily against a sewage treatment improvement project for the town. At least two solicitors carrying the petition stated that they were not against improvement but they were against the proposed plan because of high costs.

The November 6 referendum ballot asks, "Shall the Town of St. Joe, Indiana, enter upon the policy of undertaking the project of establishing, erecting, constructing, acquiring, operating, maintaining and managing a wastewater treatment system . . . ."

Since the town already has "entered upon" that policy, the referendum is considered meaningless by some. But that is because the wording of the official referendum ballot, prepared by the town's legal counsel, does not reflect the intent of the petition.

If residents of Saint Joe are confused, it is no surprise. An atmosphere of confusion exists all the way up to the Environmental Protection Agency. The EPA, though setting out definite standards related to wastewater treatment, has also been responsible for changes in requirements for wastewater treatment. Proposing a sewage treatment plan is not only subject to cost changes, it is also subject to regulation changes.

The EPA has demanded total area sewage treatment, as for instance in the Lake James area in Steuben County. Now, after "selling" the people in that area on the need for total centralized sewage treatment, the EPA says such a plan is too costly and lake residents should use several small satellite sewage treatment areas UTILIZING INDIVIDUAL PROPERTY SEPTIC TANKS. In the past, the EPA has condemned individual septic tank systems as major sources of pollution. Now the EPA says septic tanks are not the major polluting agent they were once thought to be.

If the Steuben County project is considered by EPA now to be too expensive as it has indicated, there is reason to believe that the proposed sewage treatment plant for Saint Joe is also "too expensive" because the projected cost is .. four to five times more than the total assessed valuation of the town.

And that's why there is a referendum ballot for Saint Joe voters on November 6.

To momentarily rise above the confusion, keep in mind on November 6 that if you believe the proposed plan is too expensive for this little town, vote "no" on the referendum ballot — because that's what the whole matter of a petition and a referendum is all about.

The dedication recital will be representative of various styles of musical composition and periods of organ literature. Included in the works are: Was Gott tut, das ist Wohlgetan by Pachelbel; Fantasia in G Major by J. S. Bach; Fantasy "The leaves on the trees," by Finney; Prelude and Fugue in F Minor by Bach; Musical Clocks by Haydn; and Chorale in A minor by Franck.

Sheets Needed

Brownie Girl Scouts will have sort of a trick or treat project going Saturday, October 28. On that day, the young Scouts will go door to door soliciting old or new sheets to be used for making bandages for cancer patients.

So, everyone check the linen closet and be ready for the kids when they come around.

—No, they aren't going to use them for Halloween ghost costumes!

SchoolBoardWin!

The DeKalb Eastern school board "won" in a court case filed by former faculty member Dorothy Whitney.

The school board had not renewed Mrs. Whitney's contract a year ago because student enrollment had dropped and it was considered necessary by the board to reduce the faculty because of funding difficulties. The teacher then filed suit.

The LaGrange Circuit Court ruled in favor of the school board and denied any recovery of damages for Mrs. Whitney.

Contract Settled

Agreement apparently has been reached by negotiators in the DeKalb eastern school district.

School board attorney H. Charles Winans said the contract calls for a 7.5% raise for this year and a 5.8% raise next year. This does not include an approximate 2% automatic pay raise built into every contract.

The agreement reportedly means there will be no need for negotiating next year.

A state-appointed fact-finder recommended the pay raises.

Teachers had asked for a 12% raise and the school board had offered 3.8%.

Town Board Candidates - Town Election November 6, 1979

Voting- age residents of Saint Joe will go to the polls Tuesday, November 6, to elect those who will serve on the town board and as town clerk for the four-year term 1980-1983.

Since there are no other elections being held (at the county, state and federal level), it means that town residents will vote solely on their interest in the town alone.

To assist town voters in deciding whom they will give their support to at the election, the background of the various candidates is presented here. Undoubtedly, there will be certain information overlooked which is significant in the minds of certain residents. Any such omissions are unintentional, but The News will gladly add to the following information if contacted by interested citizens. The resumes will be published every issue until the election in order to reach as many people as possible. With many new faces in town, information about town candidates is essential to help newcomers vote intelligently.

There are three wards in the Town of Saint Joe. All residents of the town vote for candidates from each ward. The town-clerk is elected every four years as an at-large candidate, that is, party nominees for clerk-treasurer can come from any ward in the town.

The opposing candidates are:

WARD 1—Joe Robinson (D) v Ted Haberkorn (R).

WARD 2—Loretta Loy (R) unopposed (the Democrat nominee was forced to withdraw because of a new election law which prohibits state or federal government employees from serving in an elective office).

WARD 3—Maurice Kline (D) v Larry McKown (R).

Start Feeder Calves the Gentle Wayne Way

All of the experts "preach" the importance of starting feeder cavles right. Wayne agrees. The first few days in the feedlot are critical. We have feeds that offer a one-two punch that all but knocks out feeder calf losses in the early stages. Start smaller calves on all-natural protein WAYNE FEEDER CALF CONDITIONER and larger calves on FEEDER CALF STARTE R. Both contain high quality protein, lots of Vitamin A, electrolytes and health-protecting Aureo S-700R. Calves take to these pelleted stress-fighting feeds quickly. There's no better or surer way to start beef calves.

Our legacy from the medicine man

Who woud ever think on entering today's streamlined pharmacy that many of the medicinals available there had their early beginnings with the medicine man? Of course, they have undergone many changes and refinements. In early days, Indians chewed on roots of certain plants in order to extract a "magic substance." This later evolved to a "more sophisticated" technique of cooking the roots for hours and then boiling down the resultant liquid.

Thousands of years have passed since these earliest processes were begun. Our contemporary drugs may bear little resemblance to their crude ancestors. But, many of the basic chemical substances do date back to the medicine man.

"A GREAT MANY PEOPLE ENTRUST US with their prescriptions, health needs and other pharmacy products. We consider this trust a privilege and a duty. May we be your personal family pharmacy?"

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

Geeminy krauts! Monday I was running around in shorts and going baerfoot, what with the nice weather. And 24 hours later it was shivering cold. The weather is changeable as the weather.

Bob Work of Spencerville called at the house one evening to express his concern over an incident at a recent football game. It has to do with proper handling of the flag. (I didn't ask where this occurred.)

As Bob left the game, he saw a school custodian dragging the flag on the ground as he removed it from the flag pole. Bob mentioned the matter to a nearby deputy sheriff, and the officer asked, "What's wrong with that?"

If you note that the expiration date of your subscription (the month and year are printed next to your name on the address on your paper) is not correct, let me know. All of the renewals have been brought up to date. But I found a couple where subscribers paid twice. I made those corrections but there may be others.

Newville UM Annual Supper

The Newville United Methodist Congregation will have its annual Ham and Chicken Supper Thursday, November 1, at 5:00 p.m.

The church is located on State Road 8 in Newville.

A free will offering is asked from those who attend the supper and everyone is invited to attend.

Spencerville UM Harvest Dinner

The 6th Annual Harvest Dinner sponsored by the Spencerville United Methodist Church will be held Saturday, November 10. The church is located just east of State Road 1 in Spencerville. Serving will begin at 5:00 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall.

The menu includes roast turkey with all the trimmings, dressing, whipped potatoes, gravy, vegetables, dessert and the much-requested salad bar.

There is no set charge for the dinner. Rather, diners are simply asked to make a donation for the meal.

Residents of the community and other friends are invited to join members of the church in enjoying the annual Harvest Dinner.

Frank Chew, Sr.

Funeral services were held Monday at the Johnson Funeral Home in Butler for Frank Chew, Sr., 84, of Butler, father of Bob Chew of Saint Joe. The elder Chew died Friday at DeKalb Memorial Hospital. The family formerly resided at Saint Joe.

Other survivors include his wife, Guadalupe; three daughters, Mrs. JoAnne Keller of Butler, Mrs. Alice Smith of Waterloo and Mrs. Teresa Volrol of Fort Wayne; three other sons, Frank, Jr., of Merrillville and John and Joe of Fort Wayne; a step sister, Mrs. Joan Luna of San Antonio, Texas; 12 grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Burial was in Butelr Cemetery.

Mr. Chew was a member of Immaculate Conception Church of Auburn. Father Henry Mascotte of that congregation officiated at the funeral.

Revival Services

Coburn Corners Church of Christ will hold revival services Wednesday, November 14, through Sunday, November 18.

Walt Zorn will be the evangelist with Shockley Flick serving as song leader.

The theme of the 7:30 evening services will be, "Services of Praise," to reflect the Thanksgiving season. The messages presented will praise the Lord for the Gospel, the covenant relationship with God, for Christ, for the divine invitation, for the emotion of love and for the second coming.

As a climax to the series of special services, the choir will present "The Festival of Praise" at the Sunday evening, November 18, service.

An invitation is extended to all residents of the community to attend any or all of the revival services.

Hallowe'en Party

The annual Halloween Party sponsored by the Saint Joe-Concord Township Volunteer Fire Department will be held Wednesday, October 31. A parade will form at the Knisely Branch Bank corner and proceed to the Riverdale cafetorium for the party.

There will be judging of costumes for all ages in various categories with Freida Guilford, Joe Robinson and Ted Haberkorn serving as judges.

There will be a sawdust pile for a kids' scramble for candy, free movies and maybe a disco for a half-hour or so.

The firemen's auxiliary will have the refreshments.

Trick-or treating in the community will be limited to Tuesday, October 30, as is the case in surrounding communities.

Gifts Sought

Malinda Lutz is serving as chairman for this area for the collection of Christmas gifts for patients in state mental hospitals. Brown Furniture & Hardware is the collection depot for the Riverdale area.

Gifts costing around $3 each are sought from donors. A list of suggested items is available at the hardware.

A total of 46 gifts is sought from the Riverdale area. Gifts should be new and unwrapped. A committee from the county mental health association does the wrapping.

If it is more convenient for donors, they may make a cash or check donation and the committee will purchase suitable gift items.

Donations should be made by Thanksgiving to allow time for wrapping and distribution.

"Share — and show that you care."

Kay Benbow is county chairman of the project.

Calling All Singers

Singers in the Riverdale area are asked to mark November 18 on their calendars. That is the date when preparations begin for the annual Christmas Choral Vespers.

The Christmas Vespers will be presented Sunday, December 16, at 7:30 p.m. in St. Peter Lutheran Church at Spencerville. Rehearsals are also held at St. Pete's.

Jr. High Gridders Are Champs

The DeKalb Eastside junior high football team has just completed an undefeated season to come away with the North Division championship of the Allen County Athletic Conference (ACAC). Overall, the team had a 7-won no-losses season with a 3-0 ACAC record.

The final victory came Saturday in a 14-0 win over Garrett.

According to Coach Fiedler, "The first half we did everything right except score." But in the second half Tom DePriest scored a touchdown with an 80-yard kickoff return. DePriest later threw a 60-yard scoring pass to Jennings Rowe.

Defensively, Mark Eck sacked the Garrett quarterback three times in a row for a 30 yard loss.

The Blazers scored 134 points this year for an average of just under 20 per game. Their opponents scored only 14 points for an average of 2 points per game.

With this year's impressive record for the junior high, Blazer football fans are already looking to the near future as the junior high squad grows into varsity football.

Coburn Corners Church History

When the Coburn Corners Church of Christ holds its public auction Saturday, November 10, and furnishings from the old building are sold and the building itself is "sold" for materials before being demolished, one of DeKalb County's historic landmarks will become a matter of history.

The story of the Coburn Corners church was chronicled by Walter H. Coburn in 1937 to commemorate the congregation's founding in 1837. Mr. Coburn's writing, "A History of the Church of Christ at Coburn's Corners, DeKalb County, Indiana," will be presented in these pages in this and future issues. Readers may wish to clip and save this historic account of a church building from its beginning to its end.

Part 1

"A HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF CHRIST AT COBURN'S CORNERS, DEKALB COUNTY, INDIANA"
—by Walter H. Coburn

The earliest record of the church at Coburn Corners is found in a leather bound, plain ruled note book with a leather slide fastener. On the outside is lettered the words "Church Record Book". The earliest writing is in ink now faded brown but still legible. In later entries the ink is still black and easy to read. The last entry is in pencil. The date of the first entry is not known. The oldest date must have been after March 5, 1838 for it was written after the changing of the name of the township from DeKalb to Concord. This occurred on the date given above. It was probably written before July 1, 1846, for a revision is made of the roll at that date. The last entry was made in 1890.

The church book now used was opened as a record of church meetings in 1915 although the indications are that the rolls were kept from 1890. Just what happened to any records kept in the intervening years is not known. This is unfortunate but since many are still living who were active in the work during those years we have a memory record for the time.

(Editor's note: keep in mind that this history was written in 1937.)

We do not know who wrote the first entries. The only officer named was the Bishop. If the clerk or secretary was named it would probably be safe to name him as the writer. There is just one clue. Benjamin Alton Sr. is the last named male adult. This would be the natural order if he were the writer.

We quote the first entry as follows:

"A record of the origin and proceedings of the Church of the Deciples (writer's spelling) in Concord Township formerly called DeKalb. (This township is now divided. The Alton home was in what is now Concord. The "corners" are in Spencer.)

"In the year of our Lord one thousand and thirty six, a few deciples having moved into the township from Trumbull Co., Ohio, facing (or possibly 'feeling') their obligation to God to keep his institutions and commandments and to exhibit Christianity as far as was in their power, met accordingly at the house of Benj. Alton and formed into that order which we believed the scriptures require in the month of February 1836."

The date of the organization is a point of controversy. In the history of the church written in 1894 for the anniversary the date is given as Feb. 17, 1837. It is certain that the date of Feb. 17, 1836 is incorrect for the first settlers did not arrive here until March of that year. The History of DeKalb County states that James Hadsell arrived here on March 1, 1836. John F. and Asher W. Coburn entered their land on March 9, 1836. Wilmot P. Coburn the son of John F. tells us that his father gives the date as given by Russel Coburn. The second entry of an annual meeting records the election of James Hadsell as bishop in a meeting of March 1838. There is no entry for 1837 except that at the top of a page following the roll of charter members this date heads a list of names of members received. Winifred Coburn Hart states that her grandfather Charles Coburn said that when he came to the neighborhood with his father in the Fall of 1836 services were being held in various homes. Among the names of those received into membership in 1837, Charles' name appears with that of his father, Ebenezer and brother Russell G. If these men came in the Fall of 1836 and the church was organized in 1837 why are they not charter members? Charles Coburn may be mistaken in the date of their arrival for their land was entered on August 15, 1837. We believe that the date Feb. 17, 1837, is the correct date. The date 1836 for a year later is a natural mistake as any letter writer will testify.

In the history by R. G. Coburn we read:

"The Christian Church at Coburns Corners was organized on the 17th day of February in the year 1837 by Elder Benjamin Alton, who was the first minister of the Gospel to locate in DeKalb County and who preached the first sermon ever preached in the county, and the church here at Coburns Corners was the first church of any denomination organized in DeKalb County.

"It was organized in the house of Brother Alton, a little log cabin, about 16x20, one and one-half miles north of the corners on the bank of the St. Joe River."

The log cabin stood on the farm now owned by Roy Maxwell just North of the present brick house and near the river.

TOWN ELECTION NOVEMBER 6

Town Board Candidates - Town Election November 6, 1979

Voting- age residents of Saint Joe will go to the polls Tuesday, November 6, to elect those who will serve on the town board and as town clerk for the four-year term 1980-1983.

Since there are no other elections being held (at the county, state and federal level), it means that town residents will vote solely on their interest in the town alone.

To assist town voters in deciding whom they will give their support to at the election, the background of the various candidates is presented here. Undoubtedly, there will be certain information overlooked which is significant in the minds of certain residents. Any such omissions are unintentional, but The News will gladly add to the following information if contacted by interested citizens. The resumes will be published every issue until the election in order to reach as many people as possible. With many new faces in town, information about town candidates is essential to help newcomers vote intelligently.

There are three wards in the Town of Saint Joe. All residents of the town vote for candidates from each ward. The town-clerk is elected every four years as an at-large candidate, that is, party nominees for clerk-treasurer can come from any ward in the town.

The opposing candidates are:

WARD 1—Joe Robinson (D) v Ted Haberkorn (R).

WARD 2—Loretta Loy (R) unopposed (the Democrat nominee was forced to withdraw because of a new election law which prohibits state or federal government employees from serving in an elective office).

WARD 3—Maurice Kline (D) v Larry McKown (R).

All medicines must be potently fresh

You know what happens to a delicious custard if you permit it to be exposed for some time in a warm place. It can turn into a dangerous killer. Therefore, you refrigerate custards to prevent this. Many medicines must be protected against a similar change or they, too, can be harmful.

Pharmacists are taught at college how to store all medicines and to date those which lose potency after a certain time. Some of them must be kept away from heat or light. Others we keep refrigerated till ready for use. When dispensing such medicines which are subject to change, we will always inform you if there are any precautions you must observe.

"A GREAT MANY PEOPLE ENTRUST US with their prescriptions, health needs and other pharmacy products. We consider this trust a privilege and a duty. May we be your personal family pharmacy?"

Blazers Lose

The Blazer varsity football squad was downed Friday by Adams Central 14-0.

A fumble by the locals set up Adams Central's first scoring opportunity in the first quarter. Another Adams touchdown and run for the extra 2 points in the second quarter ended the scoring.

The Blazers had 124 yards gained in rushing and another 75 in passing, and had 15 first downs to Adams Central's 11, but the locals couldn't get the ball over the goal line.

How To Grow Heifers Fast!

Wayne Calf Krunch builds smooth, growthy heifers . . . fast! Young calves love its sweet, grainy texture and molasses - covered vitamin pellets, laced with milk products. It's so tempting they eat earlier, grow faster, mature and freshen sooner, adding MONTHS to their productive lives. When heifers freshen at two years or earlier, you KNOW it works. In tests between Wayne Calf Krunch and a typical herd milking ration for starting heifer calves, the Wayne-fed calves GAINED 15% MORE WEIGHT ON 9% LESS STARTER FEED! Try it and see.

Feed for the difference innovations make. Feed Wayne.

'No Tillage' Saves Gas, Stops Erosion

A conservation tillage system can save from 40 to 80% on farmer fuel costs! The three most-used systems are chisel-plant, till-plant and no-till. Choice of systems should match the soil type and the erosion hazards, according to Randy Moore, district conservationist.

Fall is the ideal time to initiate the chisel-plant system he says, as chiseling should be done when the soil is dry. Soil shattering will occur under dry conditions.

The Grogg brothers, Dick and Pete of Butler, like to go 12 to 15 inches deep in the fall. They have used the chisel-plant system on 800 acres for several years.

According to Pete, freezing and thawing leaves the soil in ideal condition. "We only work the soil shallow in the spring. We level it off, work in the herbicide and the soil is decent for planting." In addition to saving approximately 40% on fuel, the Groggs obtain excellent erosion control with the chisel-plant system. Crop residues are left on or near the surface.

John Alexander of Fountain City is a believer in the till-plant system, often called the ridge system. Alexander has used the system for 13 years and carries out his tillage in July. Tillage consists of building high ridges with a special cultivator during cultivation time. However, ridges can be built in the fall as was done in Wabash County last year.

17 Wabash County landowners tried the till-plant system with help of a tractor, cultivator and planter made available through the local Soil and Water Conservation District.

By skipping all tillage operations except cultivating, Alexander says, "Fuel costs are cut way down." He uses one and two-thirds gallons of fuel per acre to cultivate, spread fertilizer, chop stalks, plant and spray his 250 acre corn crop. This is about one-third the amount required for conventional tillage.

Merle Turley and sons, farmers in the Lexington community, go all the way by using the no-till system. No summer, fall or spring tillage is used, and fuel costs are 20% of conventional tillage.

Further information about tillage systems best fitted for soil and erosion problems is available from the Conservation Service Office at 400 Erie Pass at Auburn, phone 925-3066.

TOWN ELECTION AND REFERENDUM NOVEMBER 6

On Tuesday of next week, November 6, voters in Saint Joe will have the opportunity and responsibility of selecting four people to take care of civil town matters for the 1980-1983 period. Three town board members and a clerk-treasurer comprise the town's governing body of elected officials.

The function of the town board is to establish policy and authorize and oversee various programs and projects. The clerk-treasurer keeps records of town affairs and serves also as bookkeeper, not only for town matters but also for the local waterworks system and for the local cemetery. The town-clerk has no voting power but the clerk's views are taken into consideration from time to time.

Opposing candidates in Ward 1 this year are Joe Robinson and Ted Haberkorn. Ward 2 has no contest with Loretta Loy the only candidate on the ballot. In Ward 3, Maurice Kline and Larry McKown are the opposing candidates.

A referendum ballot will also be given to town voters. The referendum was sought by some 80 people who signed a petition recently asking for an opportunity to vote on the proposed sewage treatment plan.

Federal and state grants have been sought and reportedly are to be approved in the near future. However, the petitioners reflected concern over the high cost of the proposed plan and the hookup charges as well as monthly fees.

Wording of the referendum ballot does not indicate accurately what the petition sought to achieve, according to Mr. Kline who did all of the work necessary to get the sewage matter before the public on a ballot. He says the purpose of the petition and the referendum is not to oppose improvement in sewage treatment; it is, instead, to express opposition to the somewhat vague but obviously high hookup charges and monthly charges of the proposed plan.

When the voter marks the referendum ballot, the following guidelines should be followed:

If the voter thinks the proposed plan is too costly, the square opposite "against" should be checked;

If the voter believes the project should be allowed to proceed under present plans, the square opposite "for" should be checked.

On the ballot for town officials, Republican candidates are listed in the left hand column with Democrat candidates in the right hand column.

To vote a straight ticket, an "X" should be placed ONLY in the large circle above one or the other party candidates. No "X's" should be placed in any of the small squares opposite individual candidates.

To pick candidates from both parties on a "split" ticket, the voter should NOT place an "X" in a large circle at the top of the ballot. Instead an "X" should be placed in the square opposite each candidate selected by the voter.

On a split ticket, care should be taken that only one candidate from each ward is selected. Thus the selection is either Joe Robinson OR Ted Haberkorn, either Maurice Kline OR Larry McKown, either Harvey Carr OR Emma Frank.

A split ticket means the voter is selecting candidates from both parties from office to office.

Voting hours Tuesday, November 6, are from 6:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. EST.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

A few issues back, there was a letter from the North American Wildlife Park Foundation. It is operating a wolf preserve at Battleground, Indiana.

A copy of their publication, "The Predator," came to the News Office recently. If anyone is interested in wildlife preservation, the eight-page publication should prove worthwhile. The issue contains photos and lifetime histories of the various wolves at the preserve. You can even get a T-shirt with a picture of "Koko," one of the first wolves to be adopted into the preservation efforts of the North American Wildlife Park Foundation.

Here's something interesting from "Update," a publication of the National Association of Manufacturers:

"Coal mine operators have had to function efficiently in spite of the 'hassle factor.' That term, coined by Peter Petkas, director of the administration's regulatory council, is best explained with these examples:

"—A coal mine operator is required by both federal and state regulations to take ventilation readings at least four times a day. The state requires these be taken at one place in the mine, the federal rules at another place. So the operator takes and sends out two sets of readings.

"—Four separate federal agencies require mines to furnish records on coal production, each in different units and with different breakdowns.

"—At one mine, four inspectors from four different federal and state agencies arrived one day simultaneously in four separate Ford Broncos to check on the same problem."

—To which I might add that those were probably four wheel drive Broncos and if you think it's rough putting gas in the "big car gas guzzlers," you'd DIE if you had to foot the gas bill for a four wheel drive. They are the worst offenders when it comes to cutting back on the use of gas for passenger transportation.

Mmmmmm—it smells good. I like summer. But there is something about the smell of autumn and burning leaves that isn't too bad, either.

A word of caution—burning leaves on street blacktopping can damage that surface.

Jerry Mansfield stopped in Tuesday to bring his subscription up to date. He is home for some medical tests. He says he feels fine but there is something wrong internally that has not yet been diagnosed.

He is aware of the current sewage treatment discussion at Saint Joe and gave me a copy of the October 1979 "Environmental Engineering News" which contained among other items:

"The public work's department of Beatrice, Nebraska reports that its new $12,000 high-pressure sewer cleaner can force the water in some resident's toilet bowls to shoot up to the bathroom ceiling. Residents are promised advanced notice. Then, presumably, if you have to go, you'd better leave."

When Roy Eck did some tile work at the house Tuesday, he was backing away from the house after finishing the job and the bucket of his backhoe caught the overhead electric service cable going to our electric meter. The cable didn't break but Roy said he "saw some fire" where the cable snagged on the bucket. The pull on the cable broke the ground line.

Shortly thereafter I put in a call to Don Houser who lives on County Road 59 a few miles north of town and is I&M's trouble-shooter in these parts. He advised turn off all power; he would be here some time later. Shortly thereafer he was up in the cherry picker bucket disconnecting the power to the house in order to repair the cable. About 20 minutes later we were back in business with electricity in the house.

With that one section of broken cable, we could have had light bulbs burning out and freezer, refrigerator and furnace motors burning out, he said.

With all the hell that I&M catches about electric bills and building buildings in Fort Wayne and so on, I think people often forget the prompt attention I&M gives to emergency situations. Sure, that's what they're getting paid for. But it can be aggravating to be preparing to sit down to supper, as Don was, and have a call come in for help.

A company is only as good as its employees make it. And for I&M, Don Houser "makes it" as one of I&M's many people providing good service, especially in an emergency.

Keep that in mind the next time you're feeling irritated at your "high" electric bill. Everything else is "high," too—but you don't get johnny-on-the-spot help elsewhere oftentimes as you do from the employees at I&M.

Hallowe'en Party

A large turnout of Hallowe'en celebrants once again made the local fire department's party a success. The many good costumes made it difficult for judges Freida Guilford, Joe Robinson and Ted Haberkorn to select winners in the costume judging. Winners were:

Prettiest—Stacy Heyman.

Ugliest single—Brent Ayers.

Uugliest couple—Tonda Miller and Cynthia Jarrett.

Best couple—Robbi and Sherri Stiver.

Most original—Connie and Hollie Yates.

Scariest—Jerry Renfrow.

Youngest in costume—Christina Kimpel, 8 months.

Youngest not in costume—Tonya Carper, 12 days.

Oldest in costume—Freida Guilford.

Oldest not in costume—Berniece Sechler.

Those winning pies included Beverly Porter, Debbi Heffelfinger, Nora Baker, Berniece Sechler, Rachel Chew, Kenneth Loucks and Mellissa Alday.

There were several scrambles in the sawdust pile as various age groups dug for candy. Cartoons were shown for entertainment thereafter. The fire department auxiliary served refreshments during the course of the evening's fun.

Dave Yates was master of ceremonies with Bob Moore providing taped background music. Steve Monroe, Fred Bayle, Jr., Kevin White and Don Moore set up the sawdust scrambles.

Loren D. Laub

A native of Spencerville, Loren D. Laub, 59, died Thursday of last week in Community Hospital at Gibson City, Illinois. He was a resident of Bloomington, Illinois.

Mr. Laub was the son of Claude and Grace Blaker Laub and was born and raised in Spencerville.

Survivors include his wife, Louella; three daughters; two sons; a sister, Mrs. LaNore Ginn of Indianapolis; and four brothers, Frank of near Spencerville, Fred and Roger of Butler and Roy of Roswell, New Mexico.

Services were held Monday in Bloomington.

Coburn Corners Church History

When the Coburn Corners Church of Christ holds its public auction Saturday, November 10, and furnishings from the old building are sold and the building itself is "sold" for materials before being demolished, one of DeKalb County's historic landmarks will become a matter of history.

The story of the Coburn Corners church was chronicled by Walter H. Coburn in 1937 to commemorate the congregation's founding in 1837. Mr. Coburn's writing, "A History of the Church of Christ at Coburn's Corners, DeKalb County, Indiana," will be presented in these pages in this and future issues. Readers may wish to clip and save this historic account of a church building from its beginning to its end.

PART 2

"A HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF CHRIST AT COBURN'S CORNERS, DEKALB COUNTY, INDIANA"
—by Walter H. Coburn

This movement West is now a familiar story of American progress. They came from the "East" although their "East" was still the "West" to their fellow American along the Atlantic seaboard. They came to "better themselves" financially. They were the genuine settlers as distinguished from the squatters who formeed a ragged fringe as the vanguard of civilization. They sold their farms or other possessions in the East. With a load of one wagon, in the case of these men, a pretty poor wagon. and perhaps some driven cattle, the move was made.

The Northern part of Indiana was not settled although the state was twenty years old. The reasons for this do not properly belong in a local history but for background we give them here. The line of immigration from Pennsylvania was Southwest down the mountain valleys and through the passes into Kentucky and Tennessee. The adventurous New Englander went to sea and furthermore, were cut off from the West by the old settlements along the Hudson. When the Connecticut Reserve became known the New Englanders started West. The settlement at Coburns Corners was an extension of this new Westward movement.

For the reasons given above Northern Indiana was an almost unbroken wilderness, interspersed with small prairies when the tide of immigration swept over it in the 1830's. In 1835 Asher W. Coburn made a trip to the county to select land for settlement. Probably he first visited the land office in the village of Ft. Wayne and journeyed up the river. He made the selection along the left bank. Because of his selection the little group came in 1836 to their new homes. The first few months were undoubtedly spent in strenuous toil. Land must be cleared for corn for bread. Cabins must be erected. It is said that a cabin for Asher W. Coburn was first built because of the frail health of his wife This cabin stood across the road and a little north of the Cad Shull home. The old apple tree in the field stood near the house. By the spring of 1837 the most urgent labor was done. In the meeting in the little cabin the church was organized. In the faded ink of the record we read that they—

"Unanimously appointed Benjamin Alton as Bishop of the Congregation to preach the word and administer the ordinances of the house of God: the number of the names in the origin of the church is as follows

John F. Coburn;
Asher W. Coburn;
Sam'l Headly;
Nancy Babcock; (wife of Heo. Babcock;
Benj. Alton, Junior;
Benj. Alton;
Minervy Coburn (wife of John F.)
Hannah Coburn (wife of Asher W.)
James Hadsell;
Lorenzo D. Alton (Dow)
Fanny Alton (wife of Benj.)"

We must not think of these as elderly staid men. Alton was the oldest of the group and was thirty-seven, the only one born during the old century. Asher Coburn was thirty-three; John F. was thirty; James Hadsell was only twenty-three; Samuel Headley was a young unmarried man.

How To Grow Heifers Fast!

Wayne Calf Krunch builds smooth, growthy heifers . . . fast! Young calves love its sweet, grainy texture and molasses - covered vitamin pellets, laced with milk products. It's so tempting they eat earlier, grow faster, mature and freshen sooner, adding MONTHS to their productive lives. When heifers freshen at two years or earlier, you KNOW it works. In tests between Wayne Calf Krunch and a typical herd milking ration for starting heifer calves, the Wayne-fed calves GAINED 15% MORE WEIGHT ON 9% LESS STARTER FEED! Try it and see.

Feed for the difference innovations make. Feed Wayne.

All medicines must be potently fresh

You know what happens to a delicious custard if you permit it to be exposed for some time in a warm place. It can turn into a dangerous killer. Therefore, you refrigerate custards to prevent this. Many medicines must be protected against a similar change or they, too, can be harmful.

Pharmacists are taught at college how to store all medicines and to date those which lose potency after a certain time. Some of them must be kept away from heat or light. Others we keep refrigerated till ready for use. When dispensing such medicines which are subject to change, we will always inform you if there are any precautions you must observe.

"A GREAT MANY PEOPLE ENTRUST US with their prescriptions, health needs and other pharmacy products. We consider this trust a privilege and a duty. May we be your personal family pharmacy?"

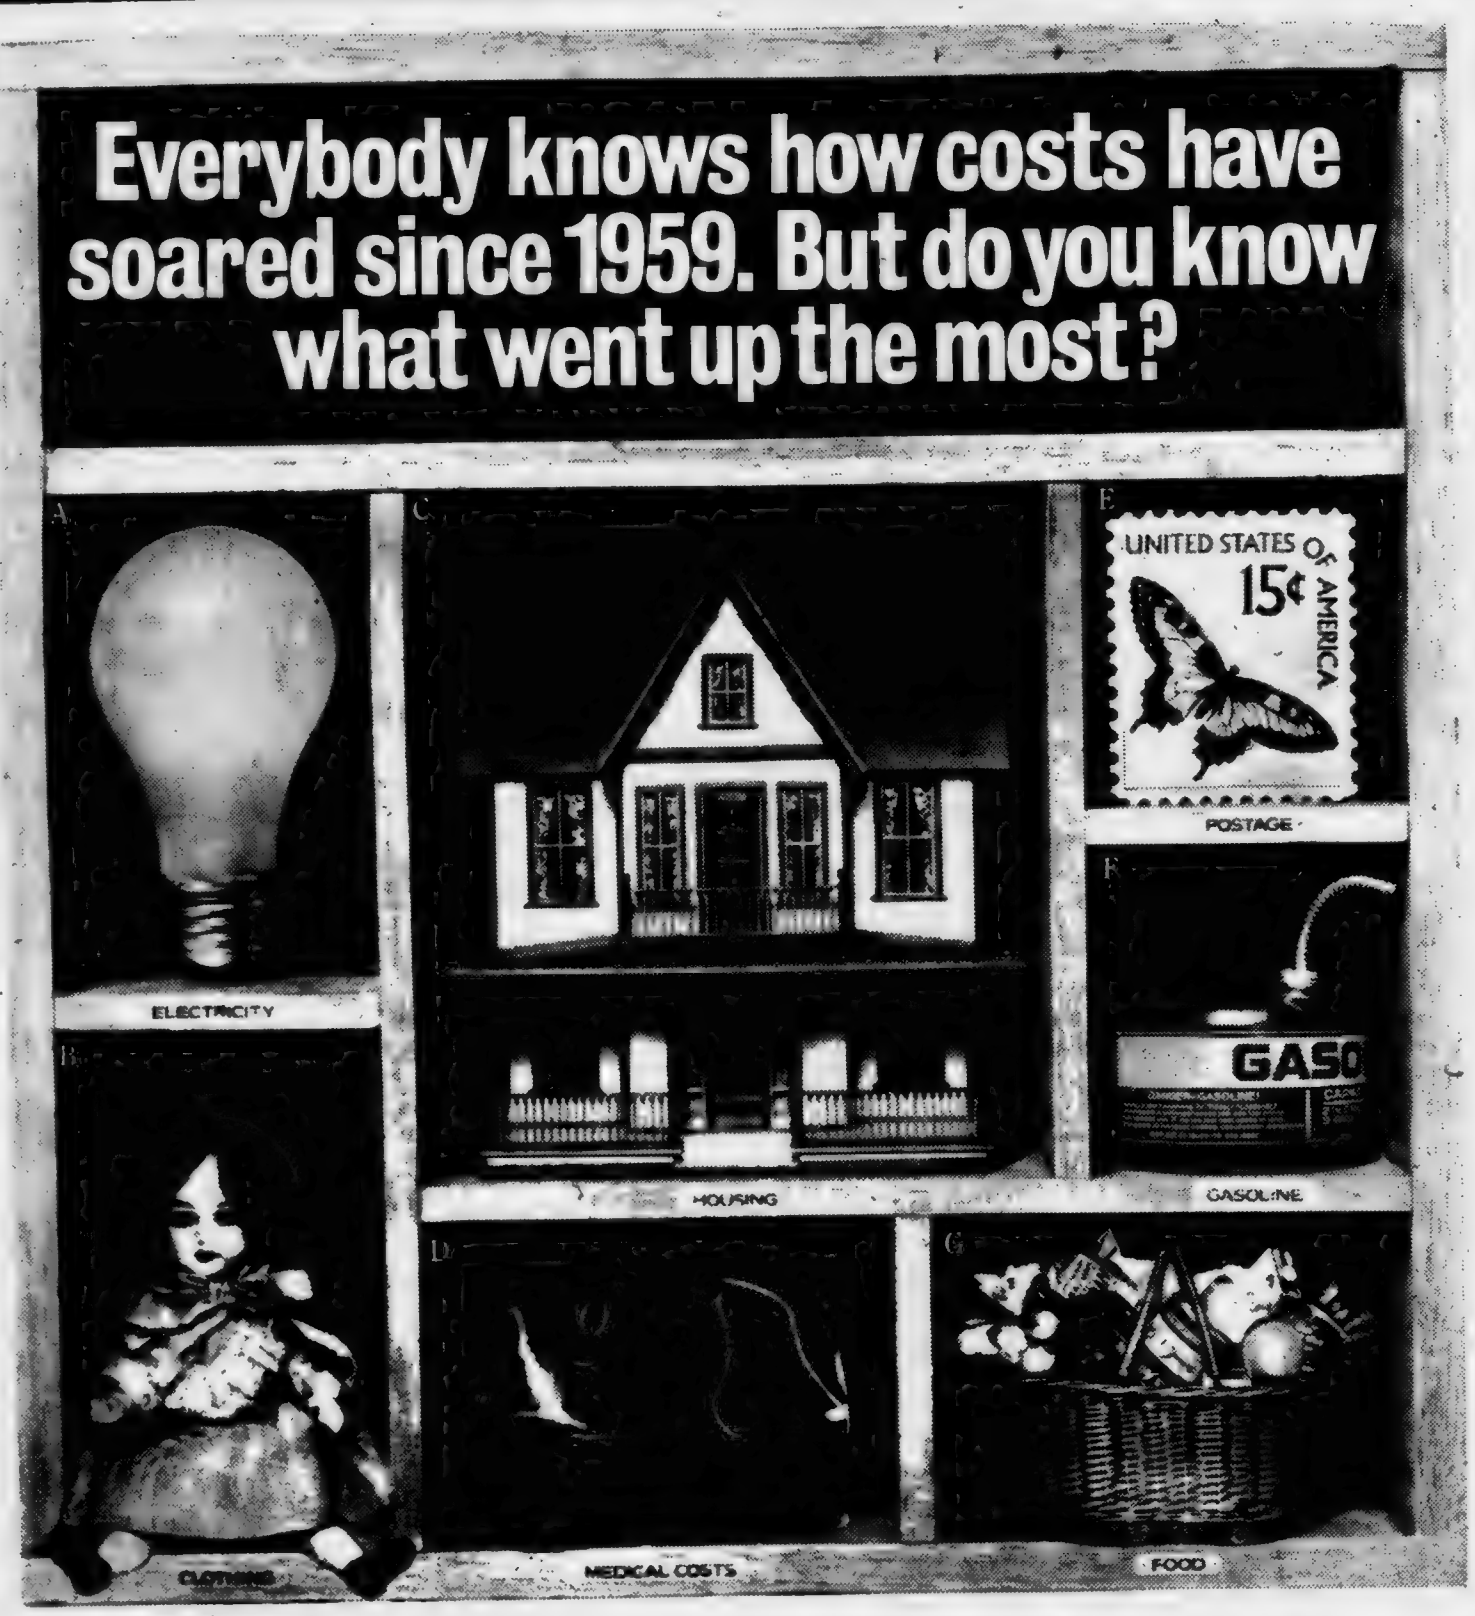
Everybody knows how costs have soared since 1959. But do you know what went up the most?



ANSWER: If you guessed electricity went up the most in the last 20 years, guess again. First Class Postage went up the most. 275%.

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

The way some things are handled in our society, one wonders if the right hand knows what the left hand is doing.

The national concern for proper nutrition involves the expenditure of millions—maybe billions—of dollars for nutrition programs for babes on up to senior citizens. Of particular concern is the health of youth of school age. Nationwide, parents in the majority have said they don't want soft drink dispensers in the schools, or at least not in operation during lunch hour. Yet, there are soft drink dispensers in many of today's schools.

Nutrition experts—especially in the recent past—have pointed out the poor nutritional value of "fast-food" outlets. It is not a matter of poor food preparation. It is a matter of poor nutritional value in the typical fare of a drivein—hamburgers, fries, soft drinks and even "shakes" (they're not called "milk shakes" because they have comparatively little milk in them).

Now, eating at a drivein is fun on occasion, a treat. But the tremendous growth in fast-food outlets indicates that eating out is a regular part of the daily routine of many people of all ages.

Am I saying these places should be closed? No. What I am saying is that the menu at a fast food outlet tends to be more tasty than nutritious. So, while we recognize the need for proper nutrition (or do we?), at the same time we go overboard on the eating out bit and rely on fast food nutrition. And the health experts point out that the nutritional value of foods served when you eat out are usually lower than the nutritional value of the same foods properly prepared at home.

A recent article quoted a nutrition expert as saying we should have a balanced daily diet and it should include plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables. But most young people aren't getting that balanced diet because they are spending their money every day on potato chips and candy and soft drinks—"junk" foods. Sugar has a lot of calories but no nutritional value. And look how many kids are downing at least one 12 or 16 ounce can or bottle of pop every day. Young adults with kids aren't helping too much, perhaps because they themselves grew up on pop. I shudder whenever I see a young parent leave a grocery with two or three or more six-packs of pop among the groceries. I feel sorry for their nutritionally starved children.

There is a "training program" now in progress for educators to help them teach the kids about proper diet. It makes me wonder what the school "health" classes have been doing all the past recent years. I knew about "proper diet" starting with grade school textbooks and going on up into high school. And I had parents who saw to it that I ate proper foods—and they set an example by their own eating habits. My sis and I didn't have a tenth of the "goodies" today's kids consider their "right." We also didn't have a tenth of the spending money today's kids have — which may pinpoint today's problem: too much money means too much junk food.

I've known of kids who would live on candy, pop and hot dogs if they had their way—and oftentimes they've HAD their way. Maybe they look healthy. But don't kid yourself—some day in some way they are going to suffer. And there is another ingredient involved in this diet matter. It's called discipline. Those kids who are raised at home with the knowledge of proper diet ("finish your potatoes and carrots" and so on) have been given exposure to a fundamental fact of life that will help them not just in getting proper nutrition but in facing situations in other facets of daily living—they have been led by the truth that there are some things you aren't going to like but they are necessary for a good well-rounded life.

Others say. . . .

SPARE THE ROD, SPOIL THE BRAT
—by Edwin Feulner, president of The Heritage Foundation, a Washington-based public policy research organization

Though the bleeding hearts have declared this the International Year of the Child, in my house, like most, every day revolves around the moral, intellectual and physical well-being of my kids.

I must admit that, compared to their father at their age, they are remarkably well-behaved.

But they do occasionally step out of line. And when that happens, they are appropriately punished.

Now I personally don't consider my children and our relationship all that unusual. So I was quite taken aback several weeks ago when I tuned into a rerun of a CBS "Sixty Minutes" segment dealing with violence in the schools — not students who "cut up" in the fine tradition of yours truly a generation ago, but students who are literally cutting up their teachers, and worse.

In case you are a reluctant believer, let me assure you that it is only too common. In fact, when I was a part-time high school teacher in Philadelphia a number of years ago, I had a high school GIRL pull a switchblade on me.

Now I turn to the pages of "The American School Board Journal" and a tongue-in-cheek essay by Philip M. Carlin (Assistant Professor of Educational Administration at Loyola University, Chicago) proposing that we "Shoot troublesome kids."

Now obviously, "Ayatollah" Carlin, as he is affectionately called, is not to be taken literally — but he is to be taken seriously. Violence cannot and should not be tolerated in our public schools, and Year of the Child or not — all the bleeding hearts notwithstanding — something has to be done to stop it.

Writes Carlin: "Before you say, 'Hold on there, Carlin, that's a bit harsh,' let's examine how our schools got into this current sorry state. It's simple — we've been afraid to beat up students. We've spared the rod and spoiled the brat. Spurred on by teachers and administartors who do not recognize the efficacy of a good beating, we have let corporal punishment slip by the wayside. And with it has gone any semblance of order, decency, or what in an earlier age was called values. But now, thank heaven, it is slowly dawning on people that instilling old-fashioned notions of right and wrong requires old-fashioned means."

The squeamish among you might protest. "After all," says Carlin, "hitting children with a birch is so primitive, so cruel, so . . . barbaric. But, by golly, it gets the job done, and no do-good psychologist or namby-pamby social worker can convince me otherwise. All my experience says: Nothing ensures good behavior like a credible threat of force."

Maybe beating is severe, but certainly an occasional spanking, administered (as it was in my day) by the appropriate school official, would harm nobody. On the contrary, it might do some good.

For too long we have been overly concerned with the "rights" of brats, and have forgotten about the rights of teachers, taxpayers and all the kids who are in school to learn something and who have to put up with the troublemakers.

—that schools with a high proportion of needy children and no food service will find it easier to start breakfast and lunch programs under new Ag Department regulations, according to Assistant Ag Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman.

—that Indiana Fourth District Representative Dan Quayle has proposed a "kick the habit" tax credit to reimburse those who voluntarily enter programs to lose weight or stop smoking.

—that if sugar intake is one of your diet problems, keep in mind that "Hamburger Helper" for lasagna is 23% sugars, nearly three times the percentage of sugars in Coca Cola. The above photo was taken early this fall when local humane warden Betty Baker brought the dog to the News office. She informed the editor that the dog had just been retrieved from a local residence and had been abandoned some weeks before when the occupants moved elsewhere. Obvious to Mrs. Baker and the Editor was the lack of nourishment although the dog was well mannered.

Since this photo was taken, Mrs. Baker's sons have made the dog their pet and have named him . . . . . BONES.

All medicines must be potently fresh

You know what happens to a delicious custard if you permit it to be exposed for some time in a warm place. It can turn into a dangerous killer. Therefore, you refrigerate custards to prevent this. Many medicines must be protected against a similar change or they, too, can be harmful.

Pharmacists are taught at college how to store all medicines and to date those which lose potency after a certain time. Some of them must be kept away from heat or light. Others we keep refrigerated till ready for use. When dispensing such medicines which are subject to change, we will always inform you if there are any precautions you must observe.

Gifts Sought

Malinda Lutz is serving as chairman for this area for the collection of Christmas gifts for patients in state mental hospitals. Brown Furniture & Hardware is the collection depot for the Riverdale area.

Gifts costing around $3 each are sought from donors. A list of suggested items is available at the hardware.

A total of 46 gifts is sought from the Riverdale area. Gifts should be new and unwrapped. A committee from the county mental health association does the wrapping.

If it is more convenient for donors, they may make a cash or check donation and the committee will purchase suitable gift items.

Donations should be made by Thanksgiving to allow time for wrapping and distribution.

"Save The Covered Bridge"

—By The Editor

For several weeks, a group of concerned citizens from the Spencerville area have been actively investigating the possibility of retaining the old covered bridge just east of Spencerville for everyday use. A proposal was suggested, apparently by the county highway department to the county commissioners, that a federal grant be sought for construction of a new bridge. The reason for the new bridge proposal is that the old bridge has a load limit which prevents the use of the bridge by school buses, fire trucks and other heavy vehicles.

However, with the efforts of a committee from the Spencerville Community Club, it has been indicated by individuals knowledgeable in old bridges that the bridge is in excellent condition, perhaps in better condition than would be a concrete and steel bridge of the same age (the bridge was built in 1873). It has been stated that, with some additional support which would not alter the original structure's appearance, a load limit of some 12 tons can be accomplished, perhaps more.

Motivating the community group is the fear that construction of a new bridge will lead to the loss of the historic landmark. Experience elsewhere has shown that the best of intentions and plans to preserve a bridge do not necessarily result in success.

Of significant interest is the fact that the group has received encouragement from outside the immediate Spencerville community. Mrs. Wayne Shook, who is one of the most active residents in attempting to preserve the old bridge, said this week that "people from Saint Joe and elsewhere in the county, and even those from outside DeKalb County, have offered their support and encouragement to us." She said that one of the reasons it appeared at first that the old bridge would be taken out of service was that "we didn't know where to start, whom to contact." As a result, the first publicity about the matter gave only one side of the story.

Now, with the assistance of such individuals as John Martin Smith of Auburn and Judge Charles Quinn of the DeKalb Superior Court, both of whom are very much interested in historic landmark preservation, the community group has been able to make a strong case for saving the old bridge and providing for its continued used by the general public.

Mrs. Shook noted that a group of Girl Scouts headed by Judy Sechler and Pat Osmun, recently cleaned the bridge of debris which accumulated between the sub-flooring and the top traveled surface. The group enjoyed a weiner roast after their cleanup job.

At the present time, the adult group is waiting for a repair estimate from Menno Zehr to make the bridge of overall practical use. He offered his services out of interest in preserving the only remaining covered bridge in northern Indiana.

One suggestion made to the county commissioners was that a county park plan be developed which would make the county eligible for federal funds. However, the commissioners strongly asserted their desire to refrain from any program which would make control of local projects subject to bureaucratic judgments in Washington, D.C.

Thus, by a firm stand by the county commisioners and a strong effort by Spencerville residents, the 106-year-old covered bridge at Spencerville appears to have a good chance of remaining intact and becoming not only a preserved historic landmark but a useful one as well.

Tents! Tents! Who's got the tents?

That's the question being asked at the present time by Scoutmaster John Sechler and others who are reorganizing the local Boy Scout troop. Several tents and other supplies were in the possession of the troop a few years ago. But somewhere along the line the equipment went out of sight.

If anyone has any information about the tents, John would appreciate a call at 337-5194.

Meanwhile, to help build the Scout treasury in order to obtain necessary equipment and supplies, the troop will have a paper drive Saturday, December 1. Those who wish to donate their accumulation of old newspapers should call John for pickup on December 1.

Lawrence Brodbeck of Fort Wayne stopped in at the News Office this week. He works at Harvester, and while those employees are on strike, he decided to dig into his family background.

Right now he is trying to find out what happened Rolla Brodbeck a brother of his grandfather. Rolla lived at Saint Joe around 1900 and apparently moved in 1902. He had a wife and two daughters and was station agent for the Wabash railroad.

Larry talked to Glen Wineland, Zay Sailer and Mose Yeiser. They remembered Rolla but didn't know where he went from Saint Joe.

I referred Larry to Flossie Mavis and Lela Northrup as possible sources of information.

If anyone has any information in the matter, they can reach Larry at 3772 Bruneal Drive, Fort Wayne 46815. The telephone number is 485-3257.

Fire Dept. News

The local volunteer fire department has used money from the recent chicken barbecue to purchase six fire-protective coats. In addition, some of the members are buying "bunker" pants to go with the coats, the pants being purchased out of their own pockets.

Steve Monroe provided the above information this week to keep the public informed about fire department activities. He also noted that the officers have established training guidelines which will be implemented in the near future. The purpose is to train new members and to keep all members up-to-date on the use of equipment. Under the new program, there will be twice-a-year "checkups" in the operation of equipment by the individual members.

The training and review program includes: how to drive all fire department vehicles and how to use the accessories on the vehicles; how to operate the pumps and make hydrant hookups; how to use the various hoses; how to handle and use the various types of ladders; and how to operate the communications system.

These basic requirements will be covered in sessions prior to the regular business meeting on the third Monday of each month starting at 7 p.m. Each month one of the five divisions of training will be covered until all five have been reviewed. The last Monday of the month will be set up for optional items and for makeup sessions on the basics for those who could not attend the regular night. For those who cannot attend either of the above sessions, a Saturday or Sunday session will be set up so that all members will have equal training opportunities.

Auxiliary members of the Saint Joe-Concord Township Volunteer Fire Department are preparing to conduct a bazaar and bake sale.

The fund-raiser will be held Saturday, December 1, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the fire hall.

The public is urged and invited to patronize the sale.

Coburn Corners Church History

PART 3

The sketch of the life of Benjamin Alton Sr. is from the "History of the Disciples in the Western Reserve." It is said to have been written by John F. Coburn for the author of the book. At any rate he is the authority for names and dates, etc. This sketch is found on page 300 ff.

"Benjamin Alton was born February 22, 1799. His early life was spent in Genesee County, New York. At the age of eighteen he was a zealous exhorter among the Methodists. Falling in with Elder Wm. True of the "Christian Connection," he was baptized by him and contiued to preach the gospel as he understood it.

"About the year 1827 he moved to North Bloomfield, Trumbull County. He was a man of marked abilities, full size finely formed and possessed most winning manner and tender speech. He had been very successful as a revivalist among the "New Lights" or Christians. In the process of his ministry he became convinced that something was radically wrong in the exhibition of the gospel in these times. Disgusted and discouraged he determined to hide himself in a "lodge" in the wilderness, and there in the quietness live for his family and heaven. He settled on lands in the dense forests of Bloomfield.  He was fast tending to skepticism and might have been swept into the vortex of infidelity but for an incident which called him forth to the light and to great usefulness.

"About the year 1829, the good people of Bloomfield called a public meeting and resolved to unite in raising a fund to support preaching, and all go to meeting together. It was an effort, after its kind, for a union for religious purposes - a union of diversity. But the union not arising out of previously existing unity - the only condition of a permanent union - it proved of short duration.  As the Presbyterians were the most numerous, they were to have the house half the time; the Baptists and the Methodists one quarter, and the Unitarians the other quarter. Squire Brown, a prominent citizen, was to secure the Unitarian minister.  By him, Benjamin Alton was engaged. Alton, thus called from his coveted retreat, consented to gird himself within the panoply of the gospel. He came regularly to his appointmnts. He would sit quite a while in the pulpit and then, rising, proceed to preach without singing or prayer. He usually preached on the prophecies and many became interested in his sermons.

"About this time William Hayden preached at the centre of Bloomfield and staying over night with Alton, these two Bible men spent much of the night searching the Scriptures in relation the ancient gospel, particularly as it related to the manner in which the apostles preached it and brought convicted sinners to the light of peace and pardon. In the course of the same year, Alton heard Thomas Campbell. In that discourse he saw the scriptural plan of salvation.  Like Saul the scales fell from his eyes, he forthwith preached the gospel after the models found in the sermons of the apostles."

"The alarm was sounded at once. The people had never agreed to hear a "Campbellite." The union exploded and went to the four winds. The people called another meeting, dissolved the covenant and each party agreed to support its own meeting.

"Alton kept up his appointments. Four or five were baptized this season. In 1830-1, some others were converted. In 1832 Bro. Alton preached half the time and began to attend regularly to the Lord's supper. They were now meeting in a school house, where they continued several years.

"In 1836 Bro. Alton moved to DeKalb County, Indiana. There he displayed the same zeal which had warmed his own heart and melted the hearts of others. Suffering all the hardships of pioneer life in a densely wooded country, contending with marsh and miasma, he still found time to preach the gospel and plant churches."

From the editor's desk. . . .

Thank you Mr. Kline - -

There is an old saying: "Youre d—d if you do and d—d if you don't."

It came to my mind in looking over the results of the town election. Mind you, these remarks are not an indication of disapproval of election results; they are intended only to point out an unusual result.

In one of the contests for town trustee, Maurice Kline was defeated by a wider margin than the other town candidates who were defeated. What is unusual? Well, Maury was responsible for getting town residents the opportunity to express themselves about the proposed sewage treatment plan. The overwhelming "no" vote on the proposed plan (106 to 19) is an indication that Mr. Kline's efforts in geting a petition circulated for a referendum represented the desires of a lot of residents.

But he was defeated.

In addition to the referendum, Maury brought out in the open some ways of doing things in town matters, those ways raising certain questions about proper procedure. He challenged the manner in which tax money was being handled in certain town affairs. In this, he was looking out for the taxpayers' pocketbooks.

But he was defeated.

—And by the largest margin of any defeated candidate.

It's a good illustration that, on occasion, the one who does the most of true lasting value for the people is the one who is not "popular."

Again, do not take these comments as being critical of Saint Joe voters, nor as a reflection on elected town trustee Larry McKown. They are intended to point out a strange result in our recent town election, in view of events of the past year. Perhaps the results indicate that certain voters did not know about those events and based their judgment on what they heard rather than what they knew.

It is only fair to give recognition to Mr. Kline's efforts in behalf of Saint Joe residents during the one year of appointive office he held as a member of the town board.

—And it serves as a lesson for new town board members when they serve in office: "you just never know. . .!"

Safety Inspections - The Other Side

The phasing out of the Indiana motor vehicle safety check program has been debated for some time now. As matters now stand, I think the program is to be dropped. I have always felt that the inspection was not worth the money, that the problem for the most part is not the vehicle; it's the driver.

But I've had to change my thinking a bit, after a few conversations with Wilbur Johnson of Johnson's Auto Service at Butler.

Wilbur is a state certified vehicle inspector, so some folks will immediately think, "Sure, he's for vehicle inspection; he makes money off it."

Well, the inspection fee is not a moneymaker in itself. In fact, it is probably more a bother than anything else. After all, if you're booking tuneups and overhauls and the like, a couple of bucks for an inspection is no great shakes.

It is true, however, that a certain amount of business is generated for an inspection station in making those adjustments and replacements needed to pass inspection. But, again, this represents no big deal in income, generally speaking. In fact, some motorists go elsewhere to get the work done, then come back to pass inspection.

So, when Wilbur expressed concern about letting the program die, I had to change my outlook a bit. He explained that many motorists make repairs (such as replacing a bad muffler) because their time for inspection is coming up. It is only human nature to let some things go by, putting off what needs to be done. In the case of the muffler, continued use of an old muffler could lead to deadly exhaust fumes drifting into the passenger compartment. Balding tires, not replaced, could lead to a skid and personal injury or even death. Faulty tail lights or turn signals could confuse another driver, as could a bad headlight.

Overall, Wilbur suggests that while the vehicle inspection program hasn't gotten all the "junkers" off the highway, it has on the other hand nudged motorists to take care of significant car needs quicker than they normally would, and this means greater personal safety.

Should vehicle inspections be abolished? A year ago, I would have said definitely yes. But with Wilbur's comments and explanations, I think I am now on the other side of the fence.

For the price of one romance magazine you can cry over every soap opera for a month.

If you're a fan of daytime drama, you could watch all of them on your solid state color TV every day for a month for about what it costs you to buy your favorite romance magazine.

In fact, you can get all kinds of enjoyment from things that run on electricity for a lot less than you might think.

You can brew 1460 cups of coffee for the price of a one pound can.

And, for around a dollar's worth of electricity a day, you can watch your TV, cook 3 full meals, run your refrigerator/freezer, dry your laundry and heat enough water to do all your washing, bathing and cleaning.*

So, when you stop and think of all the things electricity does for you each day, the value you get for your electric dollar is pretty dramatic, too.

And if you'd like some ideas on how to get more for your electric dollar, we have some booklets with energy saving tips that are yours for the asking.

At Indiana & Michigan Electric Company, we want you to get the most out of your electric service.

*Daily cost of using these appliances is based on actual usage statistics from Edison Electric Institute and our average residential kilowatt hour cost.

Coburn Corners Church History

A HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF CHRIST AT COBURN'S CORNERS

—by Walter H. Coburn

PART 4

In a sketch found in the history of the church by R. G. Coburn we find that after about ten years Brother Alton moved to Michigan, but later came back to Indiana where he died. His last home was on the banks of the Wabash where he and his wife lie buried. They died only a few days apart in 1847. Of a natural rugged constitution the incessant labors for the gospel in connection with farming to support himself and family, undermined his constitution. Although he never removed from Indiana, he is known to have made a trip as far west as Nebraska as an evangelist.

As illustrative of the hard conditions under which these men worked, we relate a few stories of his life.

On one occasion a young man approached him with a request that he perform a marriage ceremony. The young man had the girl but no money to pay the preacher. Like all other pioneers, money to him was almost a novelty. The young man suggested that he could bring a load of pumpkins for pay as he had a fine crop of them. The ceremony was performed and in the course of a few days the happy bridegroom brought the pumpkins.

It is told, on reliable authority, that he was seen on at least one occasion, while talking to a preaching appointment at Hicksville, Ohio, with his feet clad one in a boot, the other in a lace shoe. The journey was then perhaps ten miles because of intervening swamps. The shoe and boot were made on the old last - they would fit either foot. He explained that the mates were worn out. There is another tradition - whether true or not, we do not know - that for seven weeks he journeyed from place to place living in various homes and preaching where opportunity afforded. During the seven weeks period he received in money thirty-five cents or five cents a week. The explanation is there was no money. It was at the sacrifice of such men that the gospel was spread in those times.

The life of James Hadsell is available in a "History of DeKalb County" published in 1885. Like all these histories it gives a brief sketch of his life consisting of various dry facts that leave the man totally unrevealed. Much of his work was done away from Coburns Corners so that stories of his work and definite memories of him are not very common.

He was born in Broome County, New York, on Feb. 28, 1813, the child of John and Abigal Hadsell. When he was boy his parents removed to Trumbull County, Ohio. Probably they settled in Bazetta, since there we first hear of him.

He was probably converted there although there is no record. He was already a Christian when coming to Indiana. His wife was a Baptist and whether he had ever been of that faith, can only be conjectured. He was fifteen when the Church of Christ at Bazetta was organized. The "History of the Disciples in the Western Reserve" does not list him as one of the members there but does state that he "originated" there. He was probably a member of the Bazetta church and very likely of the Baptist church which preceeded it.

His first work was as a school teacher. He received ten dollars a month for his first salary - but he probably "boarded around." He came to Indiana in 1836 and entered the farm there. He had been married on March 12, 1835. It is interesting to note that the oldest son, Byron was the second white child born in the county. What the feelings of his young wife were so far from home at such a time can only be imagined.

Old Photo Repeated At Reader's Request

A couple of issues ago, The News ran an old-time photo provided by Evalyn Hamman of Auburn. Unfortunately, not all copies of the paper had a good reproduction of the photo. The primary reason for that is the supply of newsprint which The News now relies upon is not consistent in texture—some sheets are smooth while others are so coarse as to bring poor results in photo reproduction.

Austin Feller, who is one of those appearing in the photo, suggested the photo be published again. So, here 'tis—and The News hopes that a better result will come the second time around.

Mrs. Hamman wrote:

"This is a picture of the wives and children of the men who were 'raising the barn' at the Elijah Saylor farm. This farm is located just west of the corner of County Roads 59 and 52. It is now owned by Ervin Armstrong. (Editor's note: the farm was known for many years, also, as the Wayne Fogle farm.)

"While the men worked on the barn, the ladies cooked the dinner and visited and the children played.

"The time was before July, 1918. It may have been in that summer or in the year before (Note: I know because my mother died in July of that year.)

"At that time, the porch of the cement block house extended from the east side around to the front and across the south side of the home. Mrs. Saylor was very proud of her big house and kept this huge front porch clean and neat.

'Primary' Is A Nomination

A member of the Indiana state legislature recently sent a questionnaire to Indiana news media, and perhaps to others, concerning voter response. The results reportedly show that there would be more voter participation in primary elections if voters were not required to declare their party affiliation.

I suppose there will now be a proposal in the legislature, if one isn't there already, to let voters vote at primaries with no declaration of party affiliation.

The survey was misleading as far as I am concerned because it did not lead toward a cure but tended toward treating symptoms. I indicated my opinion on the questionnaire.

There certainly is reason to be alarmed at the poor voting record of the American public. However, it would seem that the last thing to try is to make it "easier" to vote. If anything, voting requirements should be firm and consistent. The most valued possessions most of us have are those which were "hard to get." In most things, when effort goes up, so does value.

The problem in voter resentment against declaring party affiliation at primary elections indicates voter ignorance of the electing process.

Primary "elections" are not really elections; they are nominations. Except for a non-partisan matter, such as school board elections, no one is "elected" at a primary; they are "selected."

The need for having a voter state party preference at a primary election is due to the fact that political parties are selecting those people who will be candidates for election in the fall. No one is "nosing into" a voter's private affairs when party preference is asked at a primary election. It is, rather, a necessary step to protect the obvious need to prevent a jumping back and forth from party to party in making nominations. Some people think there would be nothing wrong with that—a voter selecting candidates from both parties at the primary. However, such a system would make way for voting "shennanigans" on occasion due to certain circumstances.

There seems to be a feeling in the minds of many people that voting under present and past rules is a hardship on the average voter I don't buy that opinion. I think that the easier you make voting, the less important it becomes. With all the free time people have nowodays, including the privilege of momentarily leaving their jobs in order to vote, the idea of "inconvenience" just doesn't seem likely.

The recent survey was put out by an Indiana Democrat legislator. And president Carter is a proponent of "postcard registration," an idea coming from within his party. Eliminating the Electoral College in Presidential elections is another idea fostered by the Democrat Party, including Indiana Senator Birch Bayh who has proposed and pushed the idea.

Looking at these matters objectively, it has been Republican Party members who have opposed these radical ideas, along with a number of Demacrats. They have shown more thoughtful consideration to so-called election "reforms"

Instead of making it easier to vote, we should make it more difficult., to make the voting privilege more valuable and meaningful to the average American.

Harvester Strike 'Crazy'

I'll never win any popularity contests with International Harvester employees. But then I'm not trying to.

The announcement that Harvester is going on strike has only one appropriate response, "They're crazy!"

Harvester has for years been the "model" to look to when the conversation turns to ideal working conditions, pay and fringe benefits. So, it is difficult to accept employee's opinion that a strike is needed because, among other things, they don't want compusory overtime. Just a few years ago, the complaint heard from employees (not necessarily Harvester) was that they were being cut back on overtime due to a slowdown in production requirements for one reason or another.

I think it's crazy for anyone in the automotive industry to go on strike or to demand more rewards in view of the shaky condition the industry is in at the present time Somebody seems to be overlooking the fact that just a little more shift in the wrong direction and there won't be many jobs in the automotive industry. Workers (in all industries) are so accustomed to full production and resultant big pay checks that they forget one thing: you need buyers for your product or there will be no job. Anything which makes a product cost more increases not only the price but also the possibility that fewer people will buy the product because of the higher price. And anyone who thinks that "the company" can absorb production cost increases and not raise prices is sadly mistaken. And one of the factors leading to price increases is — strikes.

There are some crazy things going on in the auto industry. Chrysler suffers tremendous losses and asks for help from the government. At the same time we see Joe Garagiola on TV, urging us to go to our Chrysler dealer, buy a new car and get a $400 check form Chrysler Now that is crazy.

Then a week or so ago Harvester announces it will give $300 (I think that is the correct amount) to employees who buy a new car. Harvester wants to help the industry as a whole because it is a part of that industry.

—And then Harvester employees go on strike!

They have unemployment benefits for layoffs which you wouldn't believe, they have on average hourly wage of over $9 and in addition have fringe benefits representing another over $5 per hour, they have a "30 and out" retirement program, and so on—and they go on strike.

And with that kind of selfishness, lack of appreciation and a "gimme gimme" attitude we wnoder what's wrong with the country.

They're crazy.

Teachers - Strikes - And Discipline

There are people and organizations which can get away with "murder" and never seem to be held accountable for their words or actions.

One such group is the Indiana State Teachers Association. In a news release this week, the executive director of the ISTA said that the teachers' bargaining law—and the people hired to enforce it—aren't doing the job. He said teachers are frustrated by Public Law 217 and said that in the past two years, there have been eleven teacher strikes "indicative of the frustration teachers have with P.L. 217. It does not meet our needs for resolving impasse and settling disputes."

I haven't done any inquiring of investigating, so I am going "out on a limb" by saying that, in all probability, P L. 217 was passed due to lobbying by the ISTA to get the law passed.

Legislators don't come up with labor-dispute bills unless someone pushes them, generally speaking. Our Hoosier legislators are, generally speaking, inclined to let things take care of themselves. It is only when a particularly bad situation arises, or a particularly powerful group starts pressuring, that legislators get very deeply involved in such things as labor relationships within school systems; they are inclined to seek to preserve "home rule."

So, when a spokesman for the ISTA criticizes a public law affecting teachers, it is quite possibly a case of self-criticism—because teachers have lobbied for teacher-related legislation for the most part, not school boards or the general public.

Ron Jensen refers to eleven strikes in the last two years and says they were due to the inadequacy of P.L. 217. He notes that "fact-finders" have not done a good job.

That is very strange. My impression is that fact-finders for the most part are from the ranks of educators. And if this is true, then we have a case of someone complaining because the people they manipulated into positions of responsiaren't doing what they are supposed to do—favor teachers in their decisions.

There haven't been all that many instances of anti-teacher decisions by fact-finders. But the complaint raised by the ISTA sounds like an indication of someone getting what they want and then saying that isn't what they wanted.

A gem of a quote from Mr Jensen is the following:

"Fact finders have shown a total lack of understanding of the issues, particularly school finance. They are making recommendations that are not based on facts but rather on political considerations. As for the mediators we get from the Indiana Education Employment Relations Board, they are inept and not properly trained in most cases. They cannot give the type of assistance needed to get an agreement."

What teachers are saying through this ISTA spokesman is "we're not getting our way often enough." What teachers are doing through this ISTA spokesman is directing attention away from the inept capabilities of their union representatives who assume for themselves the ability to understand school finances better than those in the individual school systems who are dealing with finances full time.

Right now, in DeKalb County, a contract dispute is in progress at Garrett (what!—you mean somebody else besides Eastside is "backward" in pay and so on for teachers???). A public statement from the UniServ office (which is just an arm of the ISTA on a local basis) expressed this week the hope that the matter could be settled promptly but threw in a little barb by also saying that it appeared the Garrett school board had decided it wanted to settle the matter—as if the Garrett school board is bunch of idiots who just arbitrarily said "we don't want to settle" at the outset.

The brashness with which the teacher spokesmen approach these matters is evident in Mr. Jensen's noting that there have been 11 teacher strikes in the last four years. He, and others like him such as Gerald Goen in the DeKalb County UniServ office, apparently feel no kind of guilt over the fact that teachers, who are molding the minds and thoughts processes of our young people, are setting an example of irresponsible citizenship. How? Well, teacher strikes are illegal; but they go on strike anyway. And then some of them complain about the lack of discipline in the schools!!!

They were married December 4, 1929, in the U.B. Circuit parsonage in Butler by Rev. Frank N. Myers. The Nelson family includes four children: Robert of Des Plains, Illinois, Jack of Big Rapids, Michigan, and Leslie and Dennis of Butler. There are five grandchildren.

—that Fourth District Congressman Dan Quayle has called for the immediate termination of all participation by Iranian personnel in U.S. programs of military training.

—that high-flying big-time productions by "Conglomeration," a talented student music group at DeKalb Central High School, have virtually collapsed due to apparent monetary manipulations of the recent past involving the group's high-priced equipment. The school board found itself faced this week with a request for payment for two speakers bought in July but returned to the school. Apparently the school corporation did not receive payment for the speakers in the first place but is now asked to pay for the return of the speakers. The unusual situation arose when Jim Markiton, former director of "Conglomeration," sold much of the equipment to pay off the group's debts. A few months ago Markiton was re-assigned duties within the district at the elementary level. He contested the board's decision for re-assignment.

—that Ken Carnahan of Butler, an emergency medical technician with the county EMS unit, was honored last week as the outstanding student of his advanced life support class at Fort Wayne. He has been with the local EMS for four years. The county now has four ALS-trained EMS members.

—that Wayne Sebert, 66, of Waterloo died Friday at the Betz Nursing Home in Auburn following an illness of five years. He owned the Sebert Iusurance Agency for 40 years and served as treasurer for the county Republican Central Committee for several years.

—that a deer ran in front of a car driven by Harry Hefty of R1 Auburn Friday night and the collision caused $275 damage to the car.

—that Robert King, 68, of R2 Butler died Thursday of last week at his home.

—that Fourth District Congressman Dan Quayle is now accepting applications for summer intern positions in his Washington, D.C., office. The deadline for college student applications is December 15. The four selected will intern from May to August 1980.

NO SET-ASIDE

There are no set-aside or diversion requirements for 1980 feed grain crops, according to George Henry, chairman of the DeKalb County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee.

The 1980 feed grain and soybean loan levels will be at least as high as those in effect in 1979, Henry said. Those rates were: $2.03 per bushel for corn, $1.03 for oats and $4.52 for soybeans.

Henry said preliminary target price ranges will be announced by March 15. Based on the formula in the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977, the 1980 target prices are currently estimated at $2.08 per bushel for corn.

All producers of corn will be eligible for target price protection and price support loans. However, to qualify for full target price protection and deficiency payments, farmers cannot plant more corn in 1980 than was considered planted and set aside from these crops in 1979. Farmers who exceed this acreage will be subject to an allocation factor than can reduce any target price payment by up to 20%.

Henry said national program acreage were announced at 82.1 million acres for corn. The national program acreage is the number of planted acres of each crop needed to meet projected domestic and export requirements as well as to provide for a desirable carryover.

—that Corunna has now joined the ranks of small towns running to the federal government for a handout. —that Auburn also will seek a block grant from HUD, for neighborhood revitalization, assistance to low and moderate income households, improvements to public facilities, increasing housing stock, home preservation and increasing job opportunities. (—And so the corruption of American private initiative continues. —Ed.)

—that Ashley-Hudson Manor, a federally-funded housing project for the elderly, has opened. It is for people 62 and over and for handicapped people capable of "independent" living. Rent paid to the owner is based on one-fourth of each resident's adjusted income per year, not on any assets he or she may own. All but six of the 48 units have been rented thus far.

—that nearly one million silver dollars, minted in Carson City, Nevada, in 1878 through 1893, will be sold early next year, according to the U.S. General Services Administration. The historic coins, the last of the government's holdings from America's great silver mining era, were part of nearly three million 90%-silver dollars stored in U.S. Treasury vaults for more than 60 years. The first sale will be held February 8 to April 8, 1980, with 923,287 silver dollars offered to the public by mail at fixed prices ranging from $20 to $40 to $42 each, according to categories. The second sale will be held in the spring of 1980 with 54,847 coins available, sold by bid through the mail.

—that Senator Birch Bayh has offered an amendment to the "synfuels" bill (S-932) to promote the production of gasohol. (What is needed is for government to get out of the energy situation, announce that there will be no government grants for energy programs and turn America's competitive forces loose on the problem. Tax incentives for energy developers are the answer to the problem, not government involvement. —Ed.)

DAR Hears Of Breakdown In U.S. Security System

—Sarah Joan Eldridge, reporter

The November meetng of the John Houlton Chapter NSDAR met at the rural home of Mrs. Howard Hine with Mrs. Clarence Bowers assisting.

Mrs. Ernest Harter opened the meeting with the regular ritual followed by the pledge of allegiance to the flag. Mrs. Orris Wise read the President's general message.

Mrs. Harter gave a brief resume of the National Defense report given in the DAR magazine written by Robert Morris on "Dismantling America's Internal Security."

The United States in 1958 was still protected internally by the Committees of Congress, the Subversive Activities Control Board, the Internal Security Division of the Department of Justice, the counterintelligence departments of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Coast Guard, counterintelligence departments of law enforcement agencies including police departments, and the FBI and the CIA.

Today, the Committees of Congress, the Subversive Activities Control Board and the Internal Security Division of the Department of Justice have been abolished, the counterintelligence departments of the armed forces and of law enforcement agencies have been emasculated, and many of the nation's leaders are trying to strip the FBI of its intelligence-gathering function and to weaken the role of the CIA.

Mr. Morris continued by stating that the nation's internal security requires that we maintain an intelligence-gathering organization that can assess the strength, the motivation and the intentions of every real or potential enemy. We must also maintain a counter-intelligence force that will preserve us from the misinformation of our enemies, from their penetration of our apparatus and from the negligence, stupidity and disloyalty of our own operatives. We need an education and information system, not only to inform our intelligence community but also to give a groad public understanding of the issues that prevail in the world today.

Mrs. Roy Baker gave an interesting account of looking up the burial place of her Revolutionary ancestor while on a New England bus tour. All of the other 35 tourists helped her find the grave of Luke May in very short order and she placed some flags at his and his wife's graves. Some of the tourists thought this was the highlight of their tour.

Mrs. Jerry Zonker presented a program on "Sidelights On Puritan and Pilgrims." She became interested in the topic after a visit to Plymouth Rock and Plymouth, Maryland. She said everything told about about the Pilgrims is not true. They did not all wear black or gray; they had yellows, blues, pinks and greens. They wanted to worship as they pleased, but were fairly heavy drinkers and their morals were not all that good.

In other business at the meeting, it was noted that the Butler Public Library used the monetary gift given in memory of Mrs. Ralph Metzfeld to purchase the book containing 332 covers by Norman Rockwell.

Members were asked to save S&H Green Stamps for St. Mary's School, jewelry and Campbell soup labels for Bacon School, clothing for the Indian School. Members were also reminded to bring gifts for veterans at the December meeting and also to save commemorative stamps.

Coburn Corners Church History

A HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF CHRIST AT COBURN'S CORNERS

—by Walter H. Coburn

PART 5

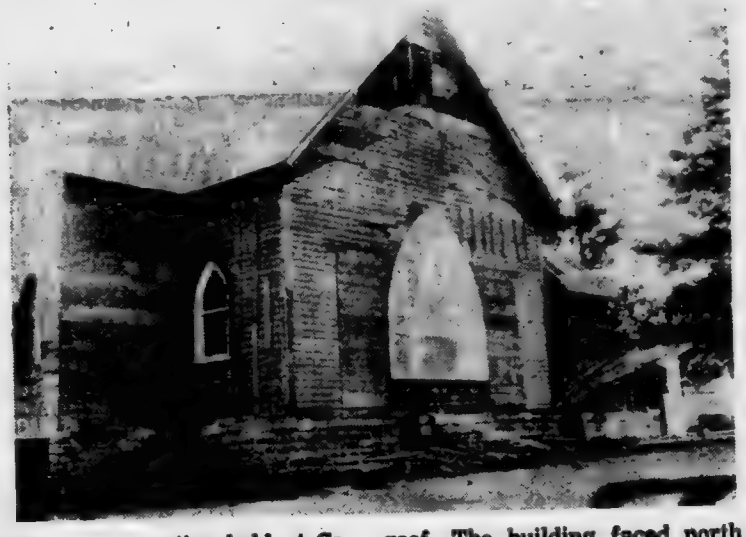
Hadsell was first of all a preacher, secondly a farmer but these interests did not interfere with active work in other lines. He was a school teacher, served in the state legislature and during the Civil War was active in the recruiting service, since he, himself was neither young enough nor strong enough to serve otherwise.

He was a charter meber of the church at Coburns and was the second man appointed as bishop and when we realize that he was the youngest married man in the beginning organization we can see that he was a natural leader of men. The one church could not hold him. There are several records of removals by letter of him and his wife but the exact dates cannot be determined. Once he removed to Trumbull County and later returned. He lived in Kendallville and served the church there. Later he organized a church in Waterloo and became its minister. At one time in order to give his children the advantage of an academy education he moved to Newville and sent them to the academy founded and directed by Faurot there. He is credited with the organization of the church at Newville. The date of organization indicates that he did this while still a resident at Coburns.

Death came to him while he He was carried by his friends was in Waterloo, Sept. 17, 1876. to the Alton Cemetery near his first Indiana home and there laid to rest.

He was the father of eight children These children for a long time were influential in the church particularly Byron, the eldest. Then the grandchildren served but today only one name of Hadsell remains on the church books, a widow of a grandchild. His work still lives there and elsewhere.

We regret that we can tell no stories of his work. Those who remember him testify that he was a preacher who could move men to repentence. Evidently of a restless disposition, he was truly ambitious - desiring to serve his community, his church and his country.



(The recent auction held at Coburn Corners Church of Christ had a unique sale item—the old church building. Roger Cook bought the building and is removing those materials which he wants. The building then reverts to the congregation and will be leveled. Bob Wilder pointed out the roof line of the original building, visible in the above photo below the present roof. The building faced north and south, Bob says, and the pulpit was at the same end as the church entrance doors—if you were late, everybody knew it! The brick veneer has now been removed from most of the building. Incidentally, the large window seen in the above photo is still available for sale, if anyone can make use of it.)

Church League Has Three Times More Light, 1-3 Electric Costs

—Lavon Hart, Public Rel. Chm.

Lavon Hart, secretary-treasurer of the Saint Joe Church League, has given The News a report on the cost of operating lights at the local softball diamond for the past seven years.

The report shows that the installation of metal halide fixtures late in the 1978 season has brought lower costs for electricity as compared to the old incandescent fixtures.

Though there are only 18 metal halide fixtures, as compared to 26 incandescent fixtures used since 1952, lighting intensity has been increased an estimated three times. Players on Church League softball teams, especially outfielders, have expressed a high degree of satisfaction with the new fixtures.

The cost of replacing the old fixtures was over $5,000, with Church League teams undertaking a major portion of the obligation. Financial support was received from the local Vulcraft plant, The Saint Joe Lions Club, the Saint Joe Booster Club, Sechler's Pickles, Knisely National Bank and the local Youth League organization.

The following figures indicate the year, the kilowatt-hours and the cost per year to operate the lights (note the partial reduction in 1978 when the new lights were in operation toward the end of the season and the further reduction for 1979):

1973	4720	$114.98
1974	5200	141.01
1975		174.67
1976	5080	172.25
1977	4800	173.11
1978	3600	159.18
1979	3350	142.39

Thus, the Church League, by installing fewer but more efficient fixtures, is now getting more light and has at the same time reduced power consumption by 33% and has brought the annual cost back to the same level as existed before the significant rise in electric rates.

Phil Washler Heads Lions Into Thirty Ninth Year

—Lavon Hart, reporter

The Saint Joe Lions Club of the Saint Joe-Spencerville area began its 39th Lion's year under the able guidance of President Phil Washler. His rural humor and insight has gotten the club off to a flying start.

Our first order of business was the DeKalb County Free Fall Fair food stand operation. Due to good weather, fine food and hungry customers, we had a very successful and profitable week. We fried 2600 pounds of hamburger in that time!

Because of the community support, we were able to budget significant amounts of money to the following community and state projects:

DeKalb County Pre-School For the Handicapped;

Bloodmobile services in the area;

Mental Health Christmas gifts;

Mental Health Clinic services;

Cancer research;

Leader Dog School;

Eye Bank services;

Bibles for graduating Eastside seniors;

Eyeglasses and eye testing for needy people;

Summer recreation for the area;

Other emergency projects as they occur and are approved.

One of our club members recently became a new U.S. citizen and established his name as John Madins. We welcomed him in the usual Lions' manner.

Our programs have been excellent and informative. The principal of Riverdale Elementary School, Rex Tullis, the principal of DeKalb Eastside Junior-Senior High School, Peggy Cowan; and the school superintendent, Charles Hampel, spoke to us at one meeting. We have toured the Eckrich meat packing plant in Fort Wayne and have heard about the adventures of our senior citizens who are part of the DeKalb County Council On Aging in the Heimach Center in Auburn.

We are preparing for the donkey basketball game versus the Butler Lions Club February 6 at the Eastside gym. This is one way that we aid and support the athletic program of the school.

We all look forward to a continuing fine year and will be reporting on the club activities as they occur.

Riverdale Open House Termed "Success" by Principal

"Successful" is the best word to describe the Open House at Riverdale Elementary School, according to Principal Rex Tullis. The Open House was held in conjunction with the November 20 PTO meeting.

Thanksgiving was the main theme and everyone involved extended the importance of being thankful both inside and outside the classroom.

During devotions Rev. Terry Rhine of the Spencerville United Methodist Church centered his ideas around Thanksgiving the remembering to say a word of thanks to someone.

Mr. Tullis presented the faculty and staff of Riverdale with red roses. This was his way of saying "thank you" to these people.

The classrooms and hallways displayed a great deal of Thanksgiving work. Stories, written by the children, told of the blessings for which they were thankful.

Refreshments of cookies and orange drink were served during the Open House in the school cafetorium.

The administration, faculty and staff wish to express their gratitude to the many parents, grandparents and friends who attended Open House and made it such a memorable evening.

Lutherans Plan Vesper Services

The public is invited to attend Christmas Choral Vespers (Service of Lights) at St. Peter Lutheran Church in Spencerville. The vespers will be held at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, December 16.

The choir will perform "Infant Holy, Infant Lowly" by Willcocks; John Peterson's cantata, "Carol of Christmas," and traditional carols.

Mrs. Kathleen Emme-McMaken will be guest accompanist. Jay Blauser is organist-choir director and Rev. George Schuette will officiate.

RIVERDALE MENU

Monday, December 3—tenderloin sandwich, corn, pineapple.

Tuesday—goulash, lettuce salad, butter or peanutbutter bread, peaches.

Wednesday—turkey and biscuits, buttered beets, fruit pello.

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

My business phone has been disconnected the past few months. It was my own doing —I was late in paying and I just sort of let it ride, what with vacation, and a trip to the hospital in September and another trip to the hospital in November. Besides, I've been debating the cost involved. I know I need a telephone in the shop but I also know the monthly cost is becoming more and more a factor to consider in paying operating expenses.

Meanwhile, General Tel has assigned the News Office number—337-5225—to someone else. I don't know who it is, but that isn't important. What IS important is that the lady answering that number told me she had been told by the telephone company to tell anyone dialing that number that The Saint Joe News had gone out of business. Someone else has told me that the operator said the same thing when an attempt was made to call the News Office, that I had "gone out of business."

Now, it may be an omen of things to come—who knows. But the fact is, right now The Saint Joe News IS still in business but without a telephone.

(Gee whiz, it's bad enough the way it is without somebody saying "they're out of business"!)

POSTAGE STORY INCOMPLETE. . . .

A United Press International (UPI) story carried by the daily papers this week quoted U.S. Postmaster General William Bolger as he boasted of the postal department's operating "in the black" for 1979. He said there would be a surplus of $489 million, the first surplus in 34 years.

Mr. Bolger said the department would be able to hold rates as they are until at least 1981. (So the good news is used to subtly prepare us for postage rate hikes in two years.)

The UPI story said that the postal department's last rate increase was from 13 cents to 15 cents for first-class mail, that in May of 1978.

Mr. Bolger boasts that the department has reduced its work force by 75,000 people while the work-load increased by almost 14 billion pieces a year.

I like being a wet blanket—especially when it is a government employee making statements which are misleading.

My wet blanket is in the form of postage costs from News Office files. These are figures for second class postage for a newspaper, but they still are postage rates.

Here is what my files show:

In May of 1977, it cost $22.55 to send four issues to subscribers. In May of 1978, it cost $24.97 to send four issues, an increase of $2.42—an increase of a little over 10%.

However, in June of 1979, it cost $38.46 to send four issues to subscribers—an increase of 54% over May of 1978.

And just the next month, in July of 1979, it cost $46.97 to send four issues to subscribers. That represents a 22% increase in one month.

Putting these increases of the last two years together, we come up with this:

In two years, from mid-1977 to mid-1979, my postage rates have more than doubled.

Those rates have doubled for anyone else using second class, and that means many publications.

THAT'S where the difference comes between red or black ink, not from efficiency but rather from exhorbitant postage increases for publications.

Throwing wet blankets does not help the pocketbook. But at least it does set the record straight for those who may read about the "rosy" postal picture and be led into the belief that efficiency is the reason for joy.

The reason the postal department is "in the black" is that second class rates have being going up continuously during the time that first class rates remained the same. And the nation's publications, from a dinky little ol' weekly newspaper at Saint Joe on up to Reader's Digest and the like, are footing a constantly increasing postage bill.

How many readers will continue to subscribe to this paper if the subscription price is raised proportionately every time a postage rate increase goes into effect???

..Shouldn't an automatic cost of living pay increase for government workers and factory workers be just as reasonable for small town newspapers???

I'm afraid that such an automatic subscription increase would mean an automatic cancellation.

Meanwhile, governmental regulation goes its merry way, happy that at least one department is "in the black" (for the present, at least). And small businesses find it increasingly difficult to pay costs incurred in doing business.

And the public gets only half the story, if it gets that much.

The above photo is obviously "old." But with snow now on the ground, it serves as a reminder that not too long ago local folks were enjoying balmy weather. The above occasion was a "field day" sponsored by Crow's Rainbow Farm Center. Farmers had the opportunity during the day to examine the various blends of soybeans. At right is Charles Heiber, representing Maumee Valley Seeds, who answered questions and received comments from visitors.

"I've been turning my lights off. Why hasn't my electric bill gone down?"

If you're turning off lights hoping to lower your electric bill, don't be surprised if very little happens.

It will help, of course.

But by conserving on the appliances that use the most electricity, you'll really save. Appliances like air conditioners, space heaters, water heaters, ranges, frost-free refrigerators and freezers, and clothes dryers.

You already know how to set your thermostat to save energy heating and cooling your home. But did you know you could save still more if you insulate your water heater and lower its thermostat to 140°?

There are lots of other ways you can cut down on your electricity usage without greatly affecting your comfort or convenience.

We have some S.A.V.E. booklets that show you how you can save energy and become part of our Save America's Valuable Energy Program. And they're yours for the asking.

At I&M, we want you to get the most out of your electric service.

Coburn Corners Church History

A HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF CHRIST AT COBURN'S CORNERS

—by Walter H. Coburn

PART 6

The third sketch is of John F. Coburn. He was born in Ontario County, New York, July 22, 1806. In 1816 his father moved to Trumbull County, Ohio, and settled there in Bazetta Township. The family, like that of the Hadsells and Altons was of New England extraction.

He was baptized on Jan. 22, 1820, and on Jan. 26, with his brother, Asher W., was accepted into the Baptist Church which was organized on the day of his baptism. His father, Asher, was the first deacon in the church.

There is no record of his education or even of any movements except that from a paper which is in the writer's possession he states that he was a resident in Warren in 1828. From his son we learn that he was running a shoe shop there at a later time. It is probable that he was apprenticed there. When Walter Scott made his famous "seige of Warren" he was present. In this manuscript written in 1876 he tells of his vivid memory of the long bony hand of Walter Scott as he told off on his fingers the "steps to conversion." Thus, he was a part of the unfolding drama of the beginning of the "current reformation." His first reaction was that Scott was preaching dangerous doctrine.

In 1836 he came to Indiana and entered the farm now owned by Garth Shull and the "Forty" owned by the Walter Abel estate, just east of the Shull farm. He was a charter member as we have noted.

When the county was organized he was elected clerk and recorder and for a time lived in Auburn, although he seems to have retained his membership in the Coburns Church. This was in 1837. In 1842 he resigned and returned to the farm. With the exception of a temporary residence in Trumbull County, he lived in the neighborhood until his death although he moved to the Coburn farm on which the church now stands.

His progress in the church is not given. In 1846 the revised roll lists his name first as "evangelist". There is no record of his appointment. It was probably after 1842 owing to his absence previous to that time. In 1865 he was appointed Elder. There is no former record although old residents declare he served earlier in this capacity.

He was married three times. First to Minerva Trumbull on Nov. 25, 1830. Three children were born to his union. Minerva Coburn died Oct. 3, 1840. On July 11, 1841, he married Alzada Gay who died March 28, 1850. After the death of his second wife he returned to Trumbull County and there married a third time, on April 20, 1852. His third wife was Betsy Ann Wilmot. One son was born to this union, Wilmot P., who is the only living child of a charter member of the church.

Although he was expecting to return after a visit he took his letter from the church and again joined in 1853 upon his return. He was then elected deacon and a little later re newed his license as an evangelist. He died in 1879.

Tennis Light Project Saved Many $

In the previous issue, an article told of the benefits derived from new light fixture installations at the local softball diamond.

The following letter by Frank Sechler to those involved in the tennis court lighting project in 1979 reviews the entire project in detail:

"Gentlemen:

"Following is a summarization of the tennis court lighting project initiated in 1978 and finally completed in 1979.

"It was finally determined, after much consultation, to use four poles with two metal halide fixtures per pole. This was to give us 20 foot candle at 1/3 the operating cost of three quartz fixture per pole (originally recommended) which would have delivered only 15 foot candles.

"An electrical engineering/construction firm gave us a quote of $7200 on this set-up, but using steel hinged poles.

"Due to the suggestion of a local citizen, Jerry Vinson, we were able to get four wooden poles from Fort Wayne City Light for $166.28. Dean Schrader contributed his time driving a Sechler truck to get them and Vulcraft contributed the use of a trailer as well as sending a driver and one of their heavy duty fork lifts to unload them.

"This decision on poles saved the project around $2500 over construction company installed metal hinged poles.

"All the engineering and wiring on the light fixtures and the hook up between the various boxes at the meter area was done in the Sechler shop by Don Sechler and Jim Hudson during the winter of 1978-1979.

"When the day of erecting the poles arrived the cross arms with fixtures already mounted were quickly put in place on the poles.

"The last work to be done was to bury and hook up the underground cable. This was done by Don Sechler and Jim Hudson and with the help of a rented trencher. At one point in time Pat Crow stopped to lend his hand for an hour or so in the installation.

"The bills relating to the project paid for were:

National Mill	$2,351.75
City Light	166.28
Trencher Rental	67.60
	$2,585.63

"Cash received for the project was as follows:

St. Joe Lious Club	$750.00
St. Joe Booster Club	700.00
Vulcraft Corp.	700.00
Sechler's	435.63
	$2,585.63

"At the outset I suggested Sechler's would be willing to pay 1/4 of the total. Since no attempt was made to keep track of personnel time spent on the project all I can say is I am sure we were close to the 1/4!

"In addition to the above mentioned organizations and individuals we also had full cooperation from the St. Joe Town Board who agreed to pay for the monthly electrical bill and from the School Board who gave their blessing to the project and quickly provided two new nets.

"I wish to thank Ted Haberkorn not only for the Booster Club's financial contribution but also for his continued interest in the project and his support through the News and some time spent in the interest of the best use being made of the lighted courts.

"Finally, I wish to express appreciation to the Vulcraft Corp. and to the St. Joe Lions Club for their continued support of the community projects! We are lucky to have this kind of support in a community of our size!

Sincerely,
Frank Sechler"

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

Apparently some town residents attended the November town board meeting expecting to heard a specific discussion about the proposed sewage treatment plant. A couple of residents at the December meeting Monday night indicated they had attended the month before with such expectation. It was stated that I had given the impression there would be a discussion, in my comments in these columns.

I haven't found anything to show that my comments said there would be a discussion or implied that there would be a discussion. And I wonder if others who attended were misled by what they had read in the newspapers.

Perhaps the confusion is due to the fact that both the Auburn Evening Star and the Butler Bulletin reported that state health officials and the town board might meet, after the overwhelming "no" vote on the sewage treatment proposal.

Where that idea came from I don't know. After the article appeared in the other papers, I asked Butch Coburn if such a meeting had been set up and he said he knew nothing about it.

So, I think I have been blamed for someone else's statements about the matter; I never said anything to indicate a sewage discussion at the November meeting because I had not been told there would be any such discussion.

What made it more irksome for those who did attend the November meeting was the fact that I wasn't there (I was in the hospital for surgery).

I mention the matter only because it was obvious Monday night that a couple of residents were somewhat irked by my absence in November. And if anyone else is similarly irked, let it be known that any suggestion that a specific discussion of sewage matters at the November meeting was NOT stated or implied in this paper. If anyone can find words which sound as if I said what I didn't say, let me know so I can clear the matter

3 EHS'ers In Tri-State Band

Three DeKalb Eastside band members have been selected for the Tri-State Honor Band which will be heard in concert at 8 p.m. Saturday, December 8, at Neff Hall of the IU-PU campus at Fort Wayne. The announcement was made by William F. Schlacks, director of instrumental music on the campus.

The three Eastsiders are Tony Burnett, percussion; Dan Farrer, trumpet; and Brant Moore, trombone.

The total number of musicians auditioning was the highest ever and Mr. Schlacks said the caliber of auditions was much improved.

Also on Saturday's program will be the Tri-State Honor Choir, IPFW University Singers and the IPFW Wind Ensemble.

The concert is free and open to the public.

Letter Echoes Kline 'Thank You'

Nov. 27, 1979
Lowell, Mich.

Dear Mr. Haberkorn;

Just read your letter in The News about Maurice Kline and I'd like to add my two cents worth.

I just reread the wonderful piece you wrote about my beloved Kenneth which I've done so many times, I'm so grateful that someone understood Kenneth as I did.

I wonder how many that criticised him for working slow were working for (3) three dollars an hour and getting coffee breaks, I know that when Kenneth stopped at home for a cup of coffee or to use the bath room or even to warm up a little after snow plowing etc, he always told me to hold up his supper for he had to make up the time he had spent in the house. Yes; Kenneth slowed down from getting older and the accident he had at the Foundry causing a five inch skull fracture, BUT it DID NOT slow his honesty.

Now about Maurice Kline, he was one man that understood how Kenneth felt and Kenneth enjoyed working for Mr. Kline for Mr. Kline never expected more out of Kenneth that he could do. When Kenneth started working for Mr. Kline the Gossips told us we would never get our pay, but Mr. Kline never cheated us out of a penny and always paid with a smile and a Thank-you. Yes I feel Mr. Kline is a benefit to the town and should have the respect the town owes him. I know he was a REAL friend to us and my THANKS to him for being so kind to Kenneth, I'll never forget it.

To the gossips and criticisers let me remind them, "We all grow old in time."

I miss my friends I left in St. Joe and think of them often. I liked the town but when our Heavenly Father took Kenneth home my heart went with him and I had to make a change. I'm getting along nicely here in Lowell and have made many new friends which can never take the place of the ones I left behind, but I know life must go on.

So to you Mr. Haberkorn and family, Maurice Kline and family and ALL of Kenneth's families and my dear friends, a most Wonderful Christmas Season and God's Blessings to ALL through 1980.

Sincerely,
Pat Roberts

Anti-Smoke Help Needed At EHS

The problem of student smoking at DeKalb Eastside Junior-Senior High School became so pronounced in recent months that a group of adults, including some of the teachers, agreed to help with monitoring the rest rooms and halls, particularly at the lunch hour.

Margie Crow has been serving as chairman. She said this week that volunteer adult women are especially needed at the present time. Two per day are needed, and the more volunteers there are the fewer days each is needed to assist.

It was noted that it is "something to see when a junior high student has a nicotine fit" when a monitor is present in a rest room and smoking is controlled. Monitoring of halls is also part of the anti-smoking program.

Certain national surveys have indicated that smoking is on the decrease among young people. But complaints from non-smoking students about the heavy layer of smoke in rest rooms at Eastside seem to contradict those surveys. The smoke, from cigarettes and marijuana, is described as "thick enough to cut."

Any adults willing to help in the control program are asked to contact Mrs. Crow at 337-5420 starting Monday, December 10. Any help will be greatly appreciated.

Fire Report

The Spencerville Volunteer Fire Department was called out at 2:31 a.m. Friday, November 30, to battle a blaze at the home of Cindy Edgar located on County Road 68 east of Spencerville. A malfunction of the mobile home's oil heater is suspected as the cause of the fire which destroyed two rooms. The occupants escaped without serious injury.

The Spencerville firemen are grateful for the assistance of the Saint Joe Fire Department's water wagon and for the Spencerville Women's Auxiliary who served coffee and donuts in the freezing cold weather.

Frank Emerson

Funeral services will be held Saturday, December 8, at Coburn Corners Church of Christ for James Frank Emerson, 18, of Saint Joe. The youth died Thursday of this week of a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

The time of the service is 2 p.m. with John Paul Hill and Philip Lutz officiating. burial will be in Alten Park Cemetery.

Survivors include his parents, MM Carroll Dean Emerson, two brothers and grandparents.

Frank was a senior at DeKalb Eastside High School.

Congress Must Act - On Itself!

Senator Richard Lugar of Indiana combined with another Senator whose views are somewhat different in other matters—combined recently to author a bill to assist the automobile industry, specifically the Chrysler corporation. The future of Chrysler is rather bleak, what with a drop in sales and a reputation (whether true or not) of producing "gas guzzlers."

This particular legislation was not the type of handout proposed by others. This legislation ties financial help to the self-help of Chrysler employees themselves, from management to production. It involves a moratorium, or a wage freeze, to help the company out of a tight situation. It also proposes a stock-sharing plan for employees.

As could be expected, labor leaders have denounced the idea. It remains to be seen how the proposed legislation works out, if it does work out or even get a start. And corporation officers have not taken a liking to the plan either.

I think Senator Lugar's part in the situation indicates his no-nonsense approach to a lot of problems; he uses what is popularly referred to as good common sense.

But there is a fly in the ointment. Just a very short time ago, Congress was in the headlines about another pay raise for itself. There were some legislative shenanigans which were thoroughly confusing. It so happened, too, that alleged "sinful" corporate profits were announced and our attention was diverted from the self pay raise matter. And then came the Iranian crisis and the self pay raise was completely lost in the furor.

The fly in the ointment is that Congress didn't call a moratorium on itself in the matter of pay. Had they done so, starting a few years back, they would have had a strong bargaining point in asking automobile workers to hold off at the present time.

Without looking it up, I am certain that Senator Lugar did not push for a pay raise; others also did not favor it. However, there was not enough noise made to make the self pay raise really a nationally-known issue. There should have been press conferences full of strong statements and "fighting words." If House Speaker Tip O'Neill can get front page headlines with a denunciation of "sinful" corporate profits, why can't other members of Congress get headlines about the significance of their own self pay raises? I know there have been members of Congress who opposed the raises. BUT THEY DIDN'T MAKE WAVES ABOUT IT.

If inflation is to be curbed, Congress itself must make the first step; it can't ask others to do what it is unwilling to do.

Action speaks louder than words.

Town Board

The town board met in regular session Monday night. Attending were board members Butch Coburn and Maurice Kline; clerk-treasurer Emma Frank; town attorney Brad Thomas; and Shirl Amburgey, Larry McKown, Paula Tietsman, Charles Carlisle and Ted Haberkorn.

Mr. Amburgey was hired to do town maintenance work. A new pickup day for trash was announced. The pickup day will be Thursday, starting December 13. It was noted that the problem of "bad" water samples from the town's waterworks system were due to a lack of chlorine additive at the second of the system's two pump houses. Mr. Kline met with state officials recently and the problem has apparently been eliminated. Mrs. Frank said recent water tests have been "good."

A few items of year-end nature were taken care of. Another meeting is planned later this month.

Bills allowed were:

Town—Floyd Coburn, pay of trustee $500; Loretta Loy, pay of trustee 500.00; Maurice Kline, pay of trustee 500.00; A. E. Boyce Co., printed forms 8.39; Ruth White, election expenses 313.50; Snyder Heating, furnace repair 20.24; DeKalb County Farm Bureau Coop, fuel oil 83.22; Betty Baker, salary of humane officer 300.00; Safety Equipment & Supply, boots and helmets for firemen 167.85; Miller Safety Equipment, 2 air packs and 2 refill bottles for firemen 1,556.00; Bradley Thomas, retainer fee 6 months 200.00; Saint Joe Waterworks, hydrant rental and fire hall water 2,230.00; Emma Frank, town clerk salary and cemetery clerk salary 475.00.

Waterworks—Indiana Department of Revenue, retail merchant certificate fee 3.50; Allen Electric Co., chlorinator service 47.00; Richard Gfeller, salary and postage 88.15; Charles Rosenbury, lot lease 50.00; Emma Frank, waterworks clerk salary 310.00.

Phone Rate Hike

If the Indiana Public Service Commission grants a request from General Telephone Company for rate increases, Saint Joe one and two party residential rates will go from $8.85 up to $10.10 for one party and from $7.00 up to $8.12 for two party. One party business phones would jump from $17.75 up to $21.53. The same rates would apply in Butler.

The 10-cent pay telephone charge would be raised to 25 cents, the first raise for pay phones in 25 years.

The general increase in rates sought is only the third in the past 20 years. The last time general rates went up was in December of 1974, five years ago.

Reasons cited for seeking the rate increase are familiar—inflation, higher interest rates on capital improvements, and higher wages, plus an increase in depreciation charges.

Rate increases in other exchanges include:

Fort Wayne, Leo, Huntertown, Churubusco, Roanoke, Poe-Hoagland, Monroeville, New Haven and Harlan—one party residential from $12.60 to $15.30; two party residential from $9.50 to $12.27; business one party from $35.20 to $42.68.

Albion, Wawaka, Kimmel and Waterloo—residential one party from $7.80 to $9.44; two party from $6.70 to $7.55; and business from $15.60 to $18.88.

Angola, Hamilton, Fremont, Orland, Pleasant Lake and Pogakon—one party residential from $8.90 to $10.76; two party from $7.35 to $8.59; and business from $19.95 to $24.17.

Woodburn—residential one party from $12.10 to $15.20; two party from $9.20 to $12.27; and business from $39.05 to $42.68.

General Tel is the largest independent (non-Bell) telephone company in Indiana, serving more than 383,000 telephones in portions of 46 of the state's 92 counties. It has a net investment of $308 per telephone.

Cook Memorial Buys Warmup Suits, Plaque

The DeKalb Eastside High School basketball team wore new warmup suits in their season opener Friday night. The uniforms were purchased with funds donated by the Richard Cook family in memory of their son, Randy, and his interest and enthusiasm in athletics and the Eastside program.

Also presented to the school was a plaque housed in the trophy case which reads:

"This plaque is displayed in the memory of Randall D. Cook for the continued support of the Eastside athletic program."

Seniors - Call In!

Senior citizens in the Riverdale area, who wish to go to the Heimach Center at Auburn on Thursdays, can contact Mrs. Lyle McMaken at Saint Joe. She is serving as the local contact for the center.

Calls should be made to Mrs. McMaken no later than Wednesday. This gives the center an idea of how many meals to plan for those coming Thursday.

The only requirement is that those participating be 60 years old or older. They need not be on welfare or charity.

Blazers Lose

The DeKalb Eastside Blazers held their own for three quarters against Leo in the basketball season opener Friday. But a tight defense by Leo in the final period held the Blazers to only 5 points in the quarter while the Lions scored 21 for a 58-37 final score.

Gary Rinard had 12 points for the Blazers while Chuck Dickerhoff and Wes Hantz had 8. Coach Rick Hudson noted Roger Voirol's good defensive effort on Leo's Scott Stuckey.

Saturday night Heritage came off a 10-10 tie at the end of the first quarter to then romp to an 84-61 win over Eastside.

Gary Rinard scored 27 points, had 15 rebounds, 5 steals, 5 blocked shots and 4 assists. Rick Keener had 12 points and 9 rebounds while Wes Hantz scored 10 points.

Coach Hudson said his team played "poor defense," but Heritage also had some good outside shooters.

Scouts Say 'Thanks'

Local Scoutmaster John Sechler extends his thanks to all those who helped support the Scout paper drive with their contributions. He would like to apologize to any contributors who might have been forgotten in the pickup. He says there will be another drive sometime in March.

And Mr. Sechler recently stated that he had found a source of supply for replacing tents used by the Scouts in recent years. The tens came up missing.

Local Petition Opposes DC's Gas Tax Hike Proposal

A "grassroots" effort to combat the proposal to increase federal taxes on gasoline is under way in the Riverdale area.

Mrs. Dennis Gilday of near Saint Joe has announced that petitions are being circulated for signatures of those who do not want a higher tax burden on the gasoline they buy.

National news reports indicate there are those in Washington, D.C., who seek to have a 50-cent or more tax increase on each gallon of gasoline sold in the United States. The group undertaking the protest believes that such a move would be an oppressive burden on the average American family.

Another suggestion coming from Washington is that gas coupons be issued for each car owned and that the coupons could be sold legally to those who need additional gas. The "legal" sale of the coupons is intended to create a so-called "white market" to prevent the presence of a "black market" in gas coupons, the "black market" name attached to the illegal sale of coupons.

At the root of the problem is the dependency of the United States on the importation of crude oil to meet the nation's energy demands.

The imposition of another high federal tax on gas would reduce consumer demand, according to those who support the proposal. No explanation has been given, however, to the effect on the nation's overall economy, inasmuch as a large, perhaps even a majority, percentage of business carried on in this country is automobile truck oriented. If gas consumption were reduced to any significant degree, it appears there would be a "domino effect" on all business—push one and they all fall.

Adding to the problem is the manipulation of the oil market by the oil-producing nations. Within the last week some of those nations announced that their oil production would be maintained at the present level or perhaps reduced slightly in order to preserve a constant demand and thus preserve the per-barrel price of crude oil, a price which has skyrocketed in the past few years.

However, all the blame cannot be placed on foreign interests. The United States is itself adding to the problem through governmental regulation and restriction. Congress has been slow to act in "turning loose" the petroleum industry on development of more efficient methods of extracting crude oil from beneath the surface of the earth, if one is to believe explanations given by the petroleum industry as a whole.

But for now, right now, the impact of higher gas taxes on gasoline is feared by many average American citizens. And some of those average American citizens in the Saint Joe area are taking steps by means of petitions to inform Fourth District Congressman Dan Quayle, Senator Richard Lugar and Senator Birch Bayh of their opposition to more gas taxation.

Petitions are available at Mom's Place (the Saint Joe Restaurant) and Brown Furniture and Hardware.

Those who cannot for some reason get their names on the petition can send a card or a letter to each of the three members of Congress representing this immediate area and the entire state of Indiana. Addresses are:

Coburn Corners Church History

A HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF CHRIST AT COBURN'S CORNERS

—by Walter H. Coburn

PART 7

(continuing the story of John F. Coburn)

Until his death he lived on his farm north of the church. For a long time he was a guiding spirit of the church and a friend to a whole neighborhood. He preached at the Corners as there was opportunity and at other points in school houses or church within easy reach. He was never considered a forceful speaker from the standpoint of oratory. He was known to express regret that he had so little "moving power". One of his hearers who still lives says that the best description of his peaching was that it was "illuminating". His illustrations were from the familiar life of the farm. He was noted for his eccentricities and loved by the whole community. His name to all, many of whom were of no earthly relationship, was Uncle John F. The "F" was originally put in to distinguish him from John H. Coburn.

After his death he was buried in the cemetery not far from the spot where his co-laborer in the gospel, James Hadsell, lies. His final illness came in the form of apoplexy while he was standing in the pulpit "exhorting".

He possessed a frock coat and top hat but wore them only on formal occasions such as a "yearly meeting" or convention. He clung to the "barn door trousers" as they were called. These trousers were made like the modern U.S. sailors trousers. He had been presented with a cane or two but preferred a long staff instead. His light at night was a candle lantern. At the risk of spending too much time with this kindly country philosopher and theologian we tell two authenticated stories which older people love to tell.

At one time he was preaching in a cabin home. He stood so as to face an open door. Outside the door was the ever present "swill barrel" which contained kitchen refuse for the hogs. During the sermon a hen flew to the rim of the barrel to peck at the dainties floating on the surface. She ventured to reach too far out and lost her balance and fell in. Uncle John F. noticed her plight and said abruptly, "There's a chicken in the swill barrel". He walked out, removed the hen, returned to his place in the cabin to finish his sermon.

In his later years his hair became quite thin so that flies worried him as he sat in the church. It was his custom at such times to cover his head with a Bandana handkerchief of the brilliant hues of the time. One day he arose to preach and forgot the fly protector. His wife sat in front of him much embarrassed and trying to make him understand what was wrong. After a time she became desperate and went up to him and removed the handkerchief. As she handed it to him he said: "So that's what those signs meant. I thought my hair was mussed".

Although Coburn was never known so far as his co-laborers, he exerted a tremendous influence in his community.

It would be pleasant to relate stories of other men of the time but space forbids extension here. We turn from these men to a brief look at the land and task set for them. The first group that arrived found that the land along the river was entered by speculators. Alton seems to have purchased some of this land. The others entered land farther away. Higher land was preferred because it could be prepared for farming simply by clearing. Lowlands must in addition, be drained and this was in the day before tile drains were in use. Farm equipment was scanty. Probably a plow share was brought, although the wood mouldboard reinforced with strap iron was still in general use. Harrows were made in the shape of a giant A. Hauling was generally done on a sledge. Household equipment was likewise scarce. Cooking utensils might be brought at first but little else, for tables, stools and beds could be constructed in spare time. We need not think that these people were content with such rude surroundings. On the contrary, each year showed better material surroundings until a stage of comfort equal to the farm homes of the east was reached.

The greatest difficulty was in the market. Produce must be hauled to the river on a sledge, there to be loaded on pirogues, dug-outs and floated to Ft. Wayne. There the Maumee River was available and still later the canals which preceded the railroads. This explains the lack of money and comforts in the early day.

Firemen Elect

The local volunteer fire department held election of officers Sunday, December 9, at the fire hall. Fred Rayle was re-elected chief; Chuck Laux is assistant chief; Dave Yates secretary; Gary Norton treasurer; and Steve Monroe training officer.

The chief is to appoint one captain and one lieutenant.

The election is subject to approval by the town board.

Retired Teachers

—Doris Stuck, reporter

The DeKalb County Retired Teachers Association met at Shippy's Steak House December 5 and enjoyed a luncheon get-together. The room was beautifully decorated with lovely festive table settings and a garland tree.

Members and guests were entertained by a delightful and clever program skit called "An Old Fashioned Christmas." Selected association members portrayed themselves as children from the first to the eighth grade who used to attend classes in the old one-room schoolhouses of yesteryear — giving a Christmas program for their parents.

The county superintendent was present and informed us we were the most delinquent group in the county. The pupils pinched each other, mispronounced words, sang out of tune — and many forgot to bring their instruments, so they couldn't participate in the band.

Santa came at the end of the program with gifts for everyone.

All retired teachers in this area are urged to pay their dues to Miss Alice Hall at Garrett.

Changing Words - Corruption

I have written in the past about the corruption of today's language due to the efforts of women liberationists to eliminate "man" from all types of uses. Jane Kempf commented on the topic some time ago in her column in the Auburn Evening Star, quoting comments from Auburn attorney Jeff Turner. He gave her an article written by the chief justice of the Indiana Court of Appeals. The judge gave historical background about the word chairman, noting that the historic basis for the word "chairman" lies in the fact that the presiding officer sat in a chair while others sat on benches.

Jane commented that she hates the word "chairperson." I hate it, too — and I rebel at its use at every opportunity because there is no such word (as I pointed out in an earlier column). It's one of those "made up" words put into use to satisfy the desire of certain people to be different. You can put the current and popular repetition of "you know" in the same general category as "chairperson." It was made up—you know—because there were some people who—you know—needed a phrase to—you know—help them express themselves or—you know—explain something to someone else who —you know—might not understand what was said if you—you know—just said it—you know—straight out.

I pointed out in the earlier comments here that, to be consistent, we should not only change "chairman" to "chairperson"; we should also change "woman" to "woperson" because there is a "man" in "woman" and that's bad.

Unfortunately, little people like smalltown editors and columnists—as with little people all about us in society—don't get the attention that comes to those who have a "name" or are in high position. And even some of them are passed off as being radical or eccentric because of their outspoken comments (I'm thinking right now about such prophets as Jay Gould and Earl Butz), Those voices which warn of the dangers of change are overwhelmed in recent years by the voices of "equality" seekers. And the intimidation evident in society is also evident in the church We have the same guilt complex forced on a lot of people in the church (because they oppose change) as is forced on a lot of people in society in general because they question the need for change.

(A new Lutheran hymnal, which I abhor because it was undertaken just for change sake in my opinion, even has changed the words of certain hymns. In other words, the changers have in effect said, "we know better what the composer should have said." And Lutheran church leaders have changed "humanity" to "humankind"—which is rather ridiculous because "man" is still in the new terminology.)

Right now we are witnessing the slow intrusion of the metric system of measurement into American society despite the doubts that a majority of Americans have about the need for a change. A law passed in 1975 ALLOWS the use of metrics; it does not REQUIRE a change to metrics, Yet, we have had our schools promoting the conversion to metrics in the minds of students ("THINK METRIC" blared the banners and posters) despite the fact that the parents of the students do not support a change to metrics.

I have yet to see anyone, including teachers promoting metrics, explain how metrics will help students to grow in intelligence and knowledge. The problem isn't in "feet" or "inches"; the problem is in adding, subtracting, multiplying and dividing in the use of ANY system of measurement. Metrics don't solve the problem!

Somewhat the same situation exists in the use of lanuage. The problem is not in the words; the problem is in teaching and learning the meaning of the words we use. Changing words doesn't solve the problem!

Unsigned Letter Is Confusing

Dear Mr. Haberkorn,

I was very upset when reading the article concerning the smoking problem at Eastside. I feel this has been exaggerated, since I have helped twice so far. I do not smoke myself and if anyone does smoke near a non-smoker you immediately detect it. I walked away from Eastside feeling very proud that first day because I had expected the very worst. I enjoyed the communication with the students, I didn't feel that they resented my being there, and the 1½ hrs. went by very quickly. Any parent that puts this program down must try it out just to see that our kids aren't the bad apples we always hear about. Maybe we do have some problems with a few students, but I didn't see any on my visits. Parents please go at least once to see for yourself that our school deserves better than it usually gets.

An impressed parent

Ordinarily I don't feel inclined to publish anonymous letters But I make an exception in this case because I had a gut feeling when last week's paper was put out that the story would be interpreted as a "put down" for Eastside. The above letter substantiates my fears.

Inasmuch as the new Riverdale principal and the new junior-senior high school principal may have read the article and may have taken it as an unfair condemnation of our school and students, let me point out that anyone who has read these columns for any length of time knows that one of my pet peeves in recent years is the "bad press" we received time after time, making Eastside sound like "the pits." When our school district had to borrow money temporarily a couple of years ago in order to pay its bills (because a new system of distribution had been set up by the state), you read big headlines in the county daily that made it sound as if we were "on the ropes" financially. When the DeKalb CENTRAL district had to do the same thing (borrow money), it was downplayed.

When a big story appeared in the Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette about a junior-senior prom, a couple of years ago, you'd have thought the whole bunch was drinking beer and/or smoking pot.

These reports riled me as much as anyone. So I am not (and was not last week) trying to sensationalize a story about a problem — which exists in the DeKalb central district and in the Garrett school district and in every other school district. Student smoking is a significant problem. (Note that the above letter-writer refers to it as "the smoking problem".)

The story which appeared in these columns last week did not suggest that most students are smoking. In fact, it appears that it has been non-smoking STUDENTS, not parents, who have complained strongly in the past, to the point where an adult group of teachers and parents undertook to eliminate the problem.

I am a bit puzzled by the letter-writer's statement: "Any parent that puts this program down must try it out just to see that our kids aren't the bad apples we always hear about."

Some people get awfully up tight when stories appear about the trouble kids get into. I have frequently heard the statement: "All we hear about are the bad things, not the good things."

I disagree with that statement. It's more a case of the one making that statement remembering himself or herself about the "bad things."

If you go through the pages of the Butler Bulletin and the Saint Joe News during the school year, you will find that, in fact, there is more said about the "good things" many times over as compared to reports of the "bad things." You have stories of the kids on the honor roll, kids winning cheerleading competition, kids participating in sports, kids going abroad in a student exchange program, kids being named to Girls' State and Boys' State, kids winning eg judging contests, kids named to a Tri-State band, kids — — — and on and on and on. People ARE hearing about the "good things" but they themselves are forgetting about it and then put the blame on news media for telling only about the "bad things."

The letter-writer says he or she didn't see any problems in helping to monitor. That should indicate that the program is having its effect.

We're only putting our heads in the sand if we believe serious problems don't exist at Eastside. The point is, these problems exist everywhere else. And the recent "drug bust" by the sheriff's department serves as a warning that drugs are a problem in our county and drugs are a problem in our schools. Smoking cigarettes at an early age oftentimes leads to smoking "pot"—and from there the road leads into more potent and more dangerous drugs.

Smoking cigarettes may not be an indication that an individual is going to smoke "pot." But the majority of hard-drug addicts started on "pot."

Last week's article did not exaggerate the situation. If it IS an exaggeration, then the formation of a committee of adult monitors for halls and restrooms is an "exaggeration" and those people are wasting their time!

One thing I simply cannot understand, in view of the evidence medical science has discovered concerning the health hazards to a growing body from cigarette smoking, is how some school systems can approve of "student smoking areas." What ought to be done is to ban ALL smoking, teachers included, anywhere on school property during school hours. It's the least an adult can do to set a good example for students.

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

Forrest Bevington pointed out one of the things that take the merry out of Christmas.

He noticed last week that someone had cut the top off an evergreen tree at Wild Cherry Park, apparently to use as a Christmas tree.

Did you know-

—that Auburn Evening Star managing editor Dave Kurtz and staff writer Liz Visser recently won second place at the Hoosier Press Association's awards dinner for their coverage of the explosion and fire at an oil terminal north of Auburn in February.

—that the DeKalb Eastside Blazer wrestlers downed Woodlan last week 46-18.

MM Gale Bowser of Spencerville observed their golden wedding anniversary with an open house Sunday, December 16, from 2 to 5 p.m.

—that CARE packages will be sent to 32 million destitute people during the holiday season if the organization reaches its $6,500,000 goal of contributions from Americans. Indiana donors should sent their contribution to: CARE, 208 S. LaSalle Street, Chicago, Illinois 60604.

—that the freshman boys basketball team defeated Woodlan 35-33 last week. Mark Mullett had 12 points, Jeff Hamman 10 and Stan Kurtz and Mike Howard 7 each.

—that the over $500 billion annual budget of the U.S. federal government (half a trillion) is more than the entire economies of Belgium, Denmark, Greece, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland and the United Kingdom — combined!)

—that Christopher Howard of Saint Joe was admitted to DeKalb Memorial Hospital last week.

—that Garrett's 7th graders defeated Eastside last week in overtime, 35-27. Coach Steve Bellamy says the team shows "great improvement" with each game. Scott Dove had 10 points and Bruce Beard and Rory Young 5 each.

—that the Baugo school board has been ordered to reinstate a teacher fired in 1974 and pay her over $61,000 in back pay. The Elkhart Superior Court made the ruling on an appeal by the Baugo teachers union. And three teachers at Worthington-Jefferson were reinstated early this year, getting back pay of over $103,000. Indiana State Teachers Association president Cordell Affeldt says, "We hope that school boards will realize that the best solution to problems is fair play, not cavalier disregard for the rules." ("Cavalier disregard for the rules"??? What about illegal teacher strikes???—Ed.)

—that with the drastic increase in the federal budget over the past few years, the annual budget of over $500 billion represents more than the total budgets of this nation for its first 160 years of existence.

—that MM Larry Isham of Saint Joe are parents of a daughter born November 30 at DeKalb Memorial Hospital.

—that frozen carrots and broccoli are increasing in popularity nationwide. Consumption of carrots went up 21% between 1970 and 1977, and broccoli 16%.

—that the half trillion dollar federal budget means that for a family of four, the federal government is costing them more than $170 a week, more than $34 for every working day of the year.

—that MM Jeffery Cox of R2 Butler are parents of a son born December 1 at DeKalb Memorial Hospital.

—that the U.S. Army is offering a new two year enlistment program and college bonus to qualifed applicants. Two year enlistees can receive up to $7,400 for college upon completion of their enlistment period. A three years enlistment can bring up to $12,1000 for college and a four year enlistment up to $14,100 for college. More details are available from Sgt. Litchfield at the local recruiting office, 112 South Cedar in Auburn.

—that the Eastside wrestlers won the Central Noble Invitational Tourney Saturday defeating the host Cougars, Churubusco and Westview.

—that the Fort Wayne Philharmonic Orchestro will present a free Children's Christmas Concert Saturday, December 22 at 2:30 p.m. in the Embassy Theatre.

—that Idaho gets its name from the Shoshone Indian word "ee-dah-how" meaning "Look, the sun is coming down the mountain."

—that the National Federation of Independent Business supports a spending limitation for the federal government rather than a balanced budget idea. The group says a balanced budget doesn't necessarily mean a spending limit is placed on the federal government. Higher taxes can bring a balanced budget and that is not what the majority of Americans are after.

—that students can get in for half price for the Fort Wayne Civic Theatre production of Shakespeare's comedy, "As You Like It," starting January 4 of the new year.

—that Glenn Moore of Spencerville was admitted to DeKalb Memorial Hospital last week.

—that MM Brian Krontz of Butler are parents of a daughter born December 8 at DeKalb Memorial Hospital.

—that Kenneth Pierce, 26, who was charged six years ago with kidnapping a young woman at the local coin laundry at knife point and then taking her to Spencerville where he held her head under water in the Saint Joseph River when she attempted a getaway, was kept from release from Richmond State Hospital by Judge Harold Stump last week. A psychiatrist at the state hospital testified that Pierce is still incompetent and the judge sent Pierce back to the institution indefinitely.

—that bomb scares are the "in" thing at Butler schools and a second youth has been caught making a telephone threat in the past two weeks.

—that a drug raid in the county last week brought in 30 individuals on various drug charges. The suspects ranged in age from 14 up into the 20's.

—that Kathlynn Epple of R1 Saint Joe was injured recently when her car slid broadside and rolled over.

Blazers Lose 'Toughies'

—Rick Hudson, coach

4 MINUTE MIRACLE ON GREEN STREET

The Lakeland Lakers came to town last Friday night with a 2-1 record, having beaten West Noble and Churubusco and dropping a 2-point opening night game to East Noble.

They convinced the home team Eastside Blazers that they were for real as they blasted out to a 22-11 first quarter lead, hitting on 11 out of 15 field goal attempts for a blistering 73%.

The second quarter saw the Lakeland squad cool off considerably as they hit 5 of 14 for a halftime percentage of 55.

The Blazers meanwhile were struggling with 11 of 35 for a 30% mark as leading scorer Gary Rinard went to the locker room with only 2 points at the half. Senior forward Rick Keener was keeping the Blazers close with 10 first half points. But the Blazer squad knew they had their work cut out for them for the remainder of the game.

Starting the second half in a combination zone and man to man defense, the Eastside team was able to cut the Lakeland lead by only one point as the Lakers were in front 52-38 at the end of three quarters.

The Blazer offense was still sluggish at the outset of the final quarter and with 4 minutes remaining they trailed by 21 points. Then the miracle started.

Employing a 1-3-1 half court trapping defense, Eastside made steal after steal and converted them to basket after basket. Lakeland was totally disorganized as the Blazers cut the lead, sparked by Rinard's 16 fourth quarter points.

Center Chuck Dickerhoff came to life with 3 steals and 7 points, as nothing could go wrong for the Blazers and nothing went right for Lakeland.

The only problem was that we dug ourselves into such a big hole in the first 3¼ quarters. Cutting that big lead in 4 minutes was truly miraculous. I was extremely proud of the way our boys "never say die" attitude came forth. Coming back like that showed a lot of guts and pride, but we weren't too pleased with our play in the first half.

Rinard had another outstanding game with 25 points, 14 rebounds, 4 assists and 5 steals to lead the Blazers in every category. Keener connected on 7 of 10 field goal attempts for 14 points. Sophomore guard Rick Timmerman hit 4 of 8 field goals in 2 quarters of play and showed some excellent ball handling ability.

Lakeland ..... 22 16 14 20—72
Eastside ..... 11 12 15 32—70

The Norwell Knights invaded Blazer Country Saturday night with a 3-2 record, including an 11-point victory over the DeKalb Central Barons at the Norwell gym.

The Knights had beaten the Blazers by more than 30 points on two occasions during the 1978-79 season, and they had 4 starters back from their AC-AC championship team. On paper it looked like the Blazers could be in for a long night.

Both teams shot well in the first quarter as the Blazers hit 7 of 14 and Norwell hit 8 of 14, giving the Knights an 18-15 lead at the first stop.

The shooting cooled off in the second quarter, with Norwell leading 33-27 at half time.

The Blazers came out smoking in the third quarter as Eastside outscored Norwell 21-5 in the period. The Blazers' 2-3 zone defense was superb, limiting the Wells County five to only 10 shots in the period. Eastside was on top 48-38 at the end of the quarter, and appeared to be in the driver's seat as their lead went up to 14 points at one time.

With 3:56 remaining and holding a not so comfortable 10 point lead, the Blazers went into their 4 corner stall offense and stayed in command until 2:00 remained. Then the bottom started to fall out.

A couple of errant passes against the Norwell pressing defense cut the lead to 5 points with one minute left, and Eastside was fighting for their lives.

With 3 seconds on the clock and the score tied at 60, Rinard sank 2 pressure packed free throws. Then, an unexpected ¾-court baseball pass set up Norwell's Al Goeglein with a driving basket at the buzzer to send the game into overtime.

In the first overtime, Norwell's Mike Rush scored from the top of the key to put the Knights on top. But with 10 seconds remaining, senior guard Wes Hantz hit both ends of a one and one to send the game into overtime number two.

Knight guard Rush scored, Rinard got his fifth personal foul, Norwell converted the free throws and took a 68-64 lead. Eastside missed its next shot and the Knights took the air out of the ball, employing their own version of the 4 corner delay. The Blazers went man to man trying to steal the ball or foul and hope Norwell would miss their free throws.

They didn't.

The Knights hit 10 of 10, Eastside couldn't penetrate the Norwell zone, and the score ended at 78-64.

It was a disheartening loss for our boys. We outplayed them and deserved to win. But we did not execute the 4 corners as we must to preserve leads at the end of a game.

We're pleased with our progress though. The 4 teams we have played have a combined record of 17-5. We're probably the best 0-4 team around.

Norwell .. 18 15 5 24 2 14—78
Blazers .. 15 12 21 14 2 0—64

Welfare - Judge And Parent??

—Gene Elliott in "Faith For the Family," October 1979.

Fourteen-year-old Shirley Roy was spanked by her father, Pastor James Roy, of Syracuse, New York, April 1978, for rebelling against the family's standards and for running away from home. Although there was no evidence of abuse and Shirley herself testified that she had not been abused, the Child Protection Agency of the Onondaga County Welfare Department in Syracuse took Shirley from her parents and placed her in a foster home.

For over four months, Shirley lived in a Roman Catholic home where the atmosphere was much more permissive than her parents would have allowed. To prevent Shirley's parents from knowing her new address, the welfare department required that all mail be sent to Shirley through the welfare officials. Her parents were permitted to visit her every three weeks at another location under the supervision of a case worker. Every week Shirley had to meet with a state psychiatrist.

Pastor and Mrs. Roy testified extensively in court about their faith and their family. Pastor Roy's charge was changed from abuse to child neglect. Finally the court permitted Shirley to return home provided the Roys not use excessive corporal punishment, the welfare department supervise Shirley in the home for one year, and Shirley be enrolled in a state-accredited school.

There have been other (similar) cases in the United States . . . . . .

Typical of government thinking is a statement from the 1974 U.S. Health, Education and Welfare Department report on child abuse:

"There is a pervasive belief in the educational value of punishment. The close relation between these attitudes is nicely expressed in the saying 'spare the rod and spoil the child,' a belief still held by many people, either openly or subconsciously. Through history, many have held that punishment will deter bad behavior and instigate more acceptable performance. There is no question about the former; it can be demonstrated in lower animals as well as in man that physical punishment will quickly inhibit behavior toward which it is directed. However, the usefulness of punishment to produce good behavior has never been adequately documented. Some evidence indicates that, over the long term, punishment is not effective in stopping undesirable behavior nor in creating those desired. In fact, punishment may ultimately perpetuate undesirable patterns of behavior."

. . . . The American press calls our attention to flagrant examples of child abuse (death from beating, inhumane imprisonment, etc.) . . . These are hair-raising accounts by any standards. The issue here is not PUNISHMENT, however, but outright criminality. What must be examined are the lines separating criminal acts of adult cruelty to children and legitimate parental discipline.

. . . .The Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (PL 93—247 and 95—266) has as its purpose the recognition by research of basic characteristics and incidents of abuse. . . .Dr. Edwar Zigler of Yale University, the first Director of the Office of Child Development in Washington, testified . . . that he had serious misgivings about such a bill. Dr. Zigler said that the bill might "unleash a bureaucratic monster in which many innocent people will be placed on lists. There is indeed already a phenomenon in our Nation where people are going around taking names. My feeling is that these lists represent a threat to the civil rights of the citizens of this Nation. . . . Child abuse is the only instance I know of in which the individual is considered guilty until he is proven innocent. We still don't have the foggiest notion or a consensus definition of what child abuse is. You are passing legislation about a phenomenon whose magnitude we don't know and whose definition experts have yet to agree upon."

(Principal 9 of the United Nation's "Declaration of the Rights of the Child," written in 1959 and used in 1979 as part of the Year of the Child, says, "The child shall be protected against all forms of neglect, cruelty, and exploitation." Thus, the state, not parents, serves as judge of what is most conducive to the healthy development of the child.)

Child development legislation, when passed, operates under federal funding. . . A government official could decide to separate a child from his parents if the CHILD considered his parents' religion unacceptable. Parents' forcing a child to accept their beliefs would be termed a cruelty case.

The Bible teaches that rearing the child is the responsibility of the PARENTS, not of the government, society, or even the church. The child is not the "property" of parents as liberals accuse Christians of believing. Rather, he is a heritage or trust from the Lord and is His property.

. . . .For Christians, chapter six of Ephesians is a key to the matter of child abuse. We zealously instruct our children to follow verse one, "Children, obey your parents in the Lord; for this is right," but often neglect the importance of verse four, "And, ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath; but bring them up in the nurture and adminition of the Lord."

"Bring them up" refers to rearing the child spiritually, as well as mentally and physically. . . . What better example have we to follow than Christ? He teaches and nourishes us, loves and chastens us, and forgives our sins. He certainly doesn't beat to a pulp those whom He loves and chastens. But He does punish us for willful disobedience. He does not humiliate a son or a daughter before others, thus provoking bitterness or an injured sense of personal value. But He does reprove His own through the work of His Holy Spirit and through His written Word. . . .

An Apology

An article which appeared in this paper in the issue of December 6 caused some unrest and unhappy people. The article concerned a group of adult, parents and teachers, who are serving as hall and rest room monitors to control smoking by the students. The phrase "in the past few months" was misleading; I was extending in my own thoughts the time back to the end of school for the last school year, but it sounded to some readers as if the problem had gotten worse since the beginning of THIS school year.

So, I apologize to Peggy Cowen, our new high school principal, for any upset the article caused her; to Margie Crow for causing the wrath of others to come down on her head (she serves as chairman for the volunteers); to any of the volunteers who may have been upset about the unintentionally misleading wording of the article; and to the student body at DeKalb Eastside for giving the impression to some people that Eastside students were not cooperating in the anti-smoking campaign.

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

Groups of caroling youths went around the town this week spreading good cheer.

On Monday a group of young people from the Saint Joe Church of Christ stopped in at the News Office on their rounds, with the strong voice of Pastor Dennis King giving the lead.

Then on Wednesday evening Pat Osmun and a group of Girl Scouts stopped at the house with their carols and "We wish you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year."

Then on Thursday, Kay Rosselot dropped off a plate of assorted Christmas cookies—homemade, to all appearances—and fruit cake. Needless to say, those cookies didn't last long. They were delicious.

So, despite the worldly gloom that seems to be present—no snow for Christmas, strikes, the Iranian situation with U.S. hostages, inflation and so on—there are those, fortunately, who remember the little things that involve people-to-people and by so doing help to preserve the spirit of Christmas.

Care of the common cold

Although it is now possible for a physician to diagnose and stop pneumonia almost overnight, the cure of the common cold is still a problem. All that can be done is to take medicines which usually can relieve troublesome symptoms and prevent complications.

We have many reliable products for cold discomforts like a stuffed nose, coughs, raw throat or a headache. But, if relief is not soon, or a fever persists, don't wait. Visit a physician before complications develop.

Surprised? Electricity does so many things around the home, it's easy to forget just how much you count on it.

Most likely, you don't have everything listed above. And just as likely we forgot to mention some things you do have.

The point is this: while the cost of electricity has gone up, when you consider all the things it does for you each day, it's still an excellent value.

But chances are you're using more than you used to: most folks are.

So, if you think twice about how and when you use electricity, you can make it even more valuable.

We have some booklets available with lots of energy saving ideas. And they're yours for the asking.

At Indiana & Michigan Electric, we want you to get the most out of your electric service.

Around the Town...

Perhaps I should publish another apology, this time to those Roman Catholics who may have been offended by the article in the December 26 issue about welfare agencies taking over as judge and parent in alleged child abuse cases. I received a telephone call from a friend who admits to being an "inactive Catholic" but wondered why a household was identified in the story as Roman Catholic and "permissive" but there was no identification of a parent-pastor as to his denomination.

My friend thought I had read a longer article and then condensed it in my own words, "picking on" Roman Catholics in the process. However, I did not re-write someone else's story; I condensed the story for the most part by using portions of the entire article. So the lack of identification was not my doing.

The strange thing is, when I read the article the first time, I had the same sort of reaction in my mind: "Why did the story identify a Roman Catholic household?" Why couldn't it just have stated "a permissive household" and let it go at that?

My answer is that I have a sneaking suspicion the identification was intentional and reflects the story-writer's feeling toward the Roman Catholic approach to Christianity.

Did you notice anything strange about color TV reception last Friday —the 28th of December? We had Channel 15 on and the picture had a slight but definite pattern of horizontal lines. I quickly turned to 21 and 33 and found no picture problem. But I noticed when I flipped to the other channels that there seemed to be some reception on intervening channels. So I went back to 15 and began changing one channel at a time. And there was a picture—snowy to varying degrees but a picture —on almost every channel up to 33. And the audio was coming in, too.

One of those freakish nights, I guess—sun spots or something.

You may recall some of my comments some time ago about automobile transportation and the present situation in which, as I put it, it costs money to be economical.

Well, the Hertz Corporation has put out some statistics about the cost of driving a car today—something like 38 cents a mile. But the eye-catcher for me was:

Motorists now pay more to drive subcompacts than it cost to drive heavier models in 1974.

The statistics are based on three-year car ownership and driving 10,000 miles a year.

Ladies Literary Club

The Ladies Literary Club met January 2, 1980, with Mrs. Maurice Kline. The president, Mrs. Bevington, opened the meeting and Mrs. Baker led the reading of the collect and pledge to the flag. Business was conducted and the following officers were elected for 1980-81: president, Mrs. Robert Musser; vice president, Mrs. Forrest Bevington; recording secretary, Mrs. Harvey Carr; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Wilbur Yeiser; treasurer, Mrs. Carl Perkins; parliamentarian, Mrs. Maurice Kline; critic, Mrs. Roy Baker.

Critic's report was given by Mrs. Baker. Meeting adjourned to meet January 16, 1980, with Mrs. Yeiser. The hostess served light refreshments.

New Town Board Meets Monday; Agenda Includes Several Items

Officials elected for the Town of Saint Joe in November were sworn into office New Years Day at noon.

County GOP chairman Robert Wilder administered the oath of office to Emma Frank, clerk-treasurer for the town. Mrs. Frank then administered the oath to Larry McKown and Ted Haberkorn, town trustees.

The third position on the town board will be filled by appointment in January. The vacancy is due to a resignation and the responsibility for filling it falls on Donzella Graham, precinct committeeman for Concord Township. A meeting will be set up by Mr. Wilder for the appointment.

Anyone residing in Ward 2 who wishes to serve on the town board may file an application with Mr. Wilder. Applications will be available at the News Office. The vacancy must be filled by the end of January.

Ward 2 includes that area lying south of Washington Street and east of School Street.

The new board will hold its first meeting Monday, January 7, 1980, at 6:30 p.m. at the fire hall. Town residents are invited to attend the meeting. All meetings are open to the public, except for very rare occasions when an executive or 'closed" session is called. Executive sessions can be for the purpose of discussion only. Motions or resolutions must be presented in open public session according to law. In this way the public is protected from secret action by the board.

The agenda includes several items, including consideration of proper course of procedure in the sewage treatment matter, to reflect the overwhelming "no" vote on a November referendum; clarification of waterworks fees; consideration of any advantage in changing the meeting time from 6:30 p.m. to a later time; clarification of procedure to be followed in providing for fire department equipment through direct use of town tax funds; snow removal; collection of water bills; alley maintenance; and other pertinent matters

Rural Numbering System Is 'In'

A rural numbering system is going into effect in DeKalb County.

Developed by county planner William Mann, the system gives a number to every rural house. The eight-digit system identifies the house number, the road the house is on, and the nearest crossroad to the north or west.

Odd numbers are on the north or east side of county roads. Even numbers indicate a location on the south or west side. Numbers are being assigned to rural residences on a permanent basis. Each residence should have a white 16-inch long and 3½-inch high board with black numbers painted on. The sign should be near mailboxes to assist emergency units find proper locations when a call comes in.

The hope is that most rural residences will have the address signs up within the next two years.

One of the problems related to getting newsprint for this paper is that you must "take what you can get." The last batch of newsprint I obtained varies in texture about every half dozen or so sheets—you go from smooth finish to very coarse finish, and the cycle is repeated over and over. Because of the poor reproduction quality of the coarse finish sheets, about half the subscribers are getting low quality copies of this paper. Reproduction of photographs on the coarse grain sheets is terrible. It's a shame—but that's the way it is. Perhaps the next batch will be more uniform in smooth texture and readers won't be getting copies in which photographs are little more than rectangular smudges.

Town Board Elects; Collection Of Utility Bills, Transfer Of Funds, Proper Purchasing Procedures Aired

The new town board of Saint Joe met Monday at 6:30 p.m. at the fire hall. The session lasted 3½ hours.

Officers named by the board are Ted Haberkorn, president, and Larry McKown, vice-president. Meeting time was changed for the future to 7:00 p.m. after discussion of the matter.

Others attending the meeting included Paula Tintsman, Fred Rayle, Roger Jernigan, Steve Monroe and Maurice Kline.

Bids will be received at the March 3 meeting on a trash removal contract. The present contract with Merritt, Inc., expires April 30. Clerk Emma Frank is to notify by mail those firms which had indicated an interest in bidding and a legal notice was authorized for publication in the local paper.

Several items were discussed, among them the services of a town attorney, daily inspection of the pump houses of the water system by the waterworks superintendent, hiring of a general maintenance man for the town, water tap fees, snow removal and a few other related matters.

The clerk was directed to proceed with the transfer of all town funds to Knisely National Bank at Saint Joe.

In response to a question from the president, the clerk said a state auditor had at first directed repayment of over $400 to the town in a drain repair matter from 1979. She said he then reversed the decision and indicated no refund was necessary because the town as a whole derived benefit from the repair. However, no final report of the audit has been received, she said.

Mr. Rayle as fire chief and Mr. Monroe as a fire department member presented information to substantiate the department's request that an additional stall for fire department use be provided in the addition to the fire hall built three years ago for town hall purposes. Such additional stall would require knocking out a portion of cement block for a door to accommodate a fire vehicle.

Another request or suggestion was that three new water mains be installed in the present system to provide better circulation of water in system "loops" and to make it possible to shut off smaller areas when conditions require a temporary shutoff. Under the present system, an entire section of town can be without water when an emergency repair is required in but one location.

The chief also asked that the department be allowed to use the water system for waterball activities at the old school site which the department has on lease from the local school corporation. Such use was tied in with the department's providing personnel for fogging of mosquitoes.

A request was made for an all-night light at the fire vehicle entrance doors to assist in opening the doors on night fire runs.

The board made no decisions in these matters at Monday's meeting.

The president stated that a more controlled procedure for obtaining fire equipment and its repair for the town would be required. Costs of requests will be required before any decisions are made, he said, to avoid the town's facing an unknown obligation such as Concord Township now faces. Recent repair to the township truck has resulted in a bill for almost $4,000 on an apparent "blank check" authorization by the department. Mr. McKown and Mrs. Frank were in full accord with the president's declaration.

The president relayed comments from town residents who have indicated dissatisfaction with the requirement of paying town utility bills by mail. When telephone and electric bills were collected locally, the town utility bill was also collected. However, when the telephone and electric companies discontinued local collection, it became increasingly difficult to find a business establishment which would provide the collection service. The clerk noted that she was not going to set up office hours in her home due to her full-time employment and the inconvenience at her home. She noted that a portion of the new addition was to be set up as the clerk's office but nothing was ever done to provide such office space. The addition's interior is unfinished.

The board will give consideration to providing office space.

Though it was not done at Monday's meeting because of the press of many matters discussed for clarification, one leading to another, the president has indicated his intent to have bills read at the start of each meeting so that those attending town board meetings will know about current expenditures and questions can be asked if desired.

Bills allowed at Monday's meeting included:

Town—Shirl Amburgev, street labor $101.25; Huff & Campbell Insurance, one-half of clerk bond 40.00; Indiana League of Clerk-Treasurers, dues 15.00; DeKalb County Farm Bureau Coop, fuel oil 92.02; Roy Eck, grave openings 150.00; Auburn Veterinary Clinic, disposal of stray dogs 15.00; William Mansfield, repairs to dog kennel and bus barn; Merritt, Inc., trash collection 331.50; Yeiser's Standard Service, repairs and supplies 27.65; Brown Furniture & Hardware, supplies 40.19.

Waterworks—A. E. Boyce Company, printed forms 62.77; Roy Eck, digging 125.00; Butler Company, materials 38.38; Richard Gfeller, salary and postage 87.25; Brown Furniture & Hardware, fuses 6.50; Huff & Campbell Insurance, one-half clerk bond 40.00.

Block Grants - Have We Gone Mad??

The frightening thing about inflation is not the rate of inflation. The biggest fear I have is about the ACCEPTANCE of inflation by just about everybody in the country. The ACCEPTANCE of inflation is not related to any one group of citizens nor any one political party; it is to be found universally. Even the voices of Republicans and other conservatives, while stating concern about inflation, do not go much further than that—just voices. While the owners of those voices may propose legislation to, for instance, reduce government spending, they do not follow up in the matter when such legislation is defeated. And if you read the syndicated columns as well as news stories about such legislation, you are aware that the vast majority of reduced-spending bills are proposed by members of the Republican Party. I wonder if they are getting the credit for their efforts in the public's mind???

Unfortunately, calling a press conference does not guarantee that a member of Congress will have his or her comments made known nationwide; there IS a degree of controlled news by the major radio and TV networks and the press services. But despite this handicap, it seems to me that a constant "harping" on the matter by those anti-spending Congressmen would ultimately get through to the public to a greater degree. It seems to me they give up too soon.

Right now these voices should be "harping" about the election-year "buttering-up" of hundreds of cities, towns, counties and states through federal grants. How in the world can we be handing out money to these taxing units when the federal government is spending more than it is taking in? It's crazy.

Right here, in DeKalb County, a news report this week told that the town of Corunna is seeking a "block grant" (that means a straight handout) of $838,700 "to upgrade 30 homes in the town over a three year period." THAT'S $30,000 PER HOME!

The town of Waterloo seeks a block grant of $380,000 for a one year program to improve 10 homes. THAT'S $38,000 PER HOME!

THAT'S TAX MONEY!

The city of Auburn is going for something like $800,000. I think there are other block grants sought in DeKalb County, in addition.

Question: what has happened to the leaders of these communities? What has happened to their desire for self-rule? What has happened to their sense of values? What has happened to the RIGHT idea that, if you can't afford it, you shouldn't have it?

While it is true that those communities have not yet received the grants, it IS true that they have ASKED for them. And when you are in effect competing with other communities for such grants, you are making your story as bad as possible to score more "points" toward a grant. So, while we have a thriving county in general, while we have a thriving county seat (look at its business and residential expansion the past ten years), we have at the same time tales of woe to justify begging for money from Uncle Sam. Auburn needs federal help like I need a hole in the head. "The Classic City" didn't give itself that name on the basis of poverty!

I know these words put a lot of people on the spot. I may have fewer friends hereafter in civil administrative circles. But I think the average American is being double-crossed. The lure of federal money is too much, especially when somebody else decides to seek such money. The classic justification is: "If we don't get it, somebody else will."

The whole concept of individual liberty and responsibility is being destroyed because our leaders, from top to bottom, don't have the guts to say no to pressure groups. And the few who do stand their ground get defeated in an election the next time around. Then the voters who kicked the sensible public officeholders out wonder why things are going so badly!

Just last November voters at Saint Joe said "no" in a referendum on a proposed sewage treatment plant, even though applications for federal and state grants had been made months before. Their "no" was in protest to Saint Joe's getting a "Cadillac" sewage treatment plant when it rightfully can afford only a "Ford" or "Chevy." It may seem strange to a lot of people that so much concern was expressed in this little town over the cost of a sewage treatment plant. After all, it's federal money, it doesn't cost us anything.

That's what they think. Those who are puzzled at Saint Joe's negative vote in November forget that in order to get back one dollar from the federal government, it takes three dollars sent to the federal government by taxation. The other two dollars go toward paying agency and department heads, secretaries, clerks, cost of printing governmental regulations and forms, cost of housing, heat, light, paid vacations, hospitalization insurance, paid holidays, etc., etc., etc. And all of these expenses of administration PRODUCE NOTHING.

Who's causing inflation? WE ARE — WE THE PEOPLE BECAUSE WE LET OTHERS TALK US INTO ACCEPTING WELFARE AT THE SAME TIME THAT WE ARE LIVING IN LUXURY.

What can you do about it? Well, for one thing, when anyone says a federal grant may be available, avoid it and them like the plague! For another thing, find out—FIND OUT—what your elected public officials are doing to stop the growing dependency on federal and state money for local communities—if they are doing anything. But most of all, the important thing to remember is that, if your local community can't afford a project on its own financial strength, it doesn't deserve that project — it doesn't NEED that project except in the minds of those who are "spoiled" already by too much money.

Calling State Representative Norman Gerig — calling State Senator Richard Worman — calling Fourth District U.S. Representative Dan Quayle — calling U.S. Senator Dick Lugar — calling U.S. Senator Birch Bayh — and finally, getting down to the root of it all, calling our county residents — what are you saying AND DOING to push, push, push on those efforts which will eliminate the false prosperity of governmental handouts such as the above in DeKalb County???

As individuals, as communities, as a nation — have we gone mad?

Rep. Gerig Introduces Legislation To Correct Town 'Self Pay Raise' Action

Questions raised in the columns of this newspaper a year ago about the self pay raise Saint Joe town officials voted for themselves in 1978 for their 1979 final year in office have resulted in proposed legislation to correct the situation.

In a news release last Friday, State Representative Norman Gerig of Auburn said his bill, which is the result of Saint Joe's situation, was unanimously endorsed by the Elections and Apportionment Committee last week and was due to come before the House this week.

"Should the bill become law," Mr. Gerig said, "it would put town officials on the same basis as city, county and state officials, that being that they cannot raise their salaries for the term for which they are elected." He said they can set new salary levels that would be effective for candidates elected in the next election, however.

The News editorialized last year that the self pay raise voted for themselves by the local town board was "illegal and unethical." Apparently the action was legal but no explanation ever came from the state as to why towns were omitted in the law which governs city, county and state officials. No town board at Saint Joe in at least the past thirty years had ever taken such action. Boards had accepted the law as applying to them, also. Letters of protest were sent by The News to the State Board of Tax Commissioners, the Indiana Attorney General's office and finally to Governor Otis Bowen. Return comments indicated that towns were not included in the law. However, attorneys contacted by The News on an informal basis brought the same general reply: town officials can't raise their own pay during their term in office. And other towns in the area had published notices last summer establishing pay of their town officials effective January 1, 1980.

The News investigated the possibility of filing a suit to prevent payment of the raise for 1979. However, the estimated cost of some $1,500 to do so was prohibitive.

If the bill passes, Mr. Gerig said, "It would correct an oversight in the present law and treat all levels of government equally."

Bloodmobile Coming February 5

In February of 1979, an amazing number of pints of blood were donated at the Riverdale Bloodmobile—188 pints to be exact.

This year the Bloodmobile will be back again, Tuesday, February 5, and there is the challenge to do as well as last year.

Chairman Delores Hicov said this week that the problems encountered last year in accommodating the large turnout appear to have been overcome. This year there will be 18 beds available making it possible to process approximately 55 donors per hour. With the expanded facilities, it is expected that there will be no waiting for those who volunteer to donate a pint of blood.

Mrs. Hicov noted that the need for blood is a continuing need.

Last year the record 188 pints was achieved partly through the blood donations from DeKalb Eastside High School students and from employees at the Vulcraft plant at Saint Joe.

188 pints last year—that is the challenge for Riverdale this year.

Commissioners Vote For New Bridge

With the cost of repairing and adding support to the covered bridge at Spencerville definitely estimated at over $200,000, the DeKalb County commissioners decided Monday to proceed with plans for a new bridge. The old bridge will be used only for pedestrians.

Several weeks ago Menno Zehr said work on the old bridge would cost well under $150,000. However, this week he told the commissioners that the work would cost $200,000.

The commissioners made their decision due to a deadline for seeking federal highway funds in 1980. If the project receives federal approval, 70 to 80% of the estimated $500,000 to $600,000 cost for a new bridge will be paid by federal funds. DeKalb County would pay around $150,000 of the construction cost for a new steel and concrete structure.

Commissioners were split 2-1 in the vote for a new bridge. They had received a petition from some 25 residents asking that a new bridge be built, mainly to accommodate fire fighting equipment. Earlier a large number of residents had set up a committee to seek to preserve the old bridge for everyday normal use. It was feared that to install a new bridge would be to also bring about the ultimate loss of the 106 year old covered bridge through neglect.

The proposed new bridge would be just south of the old bridge and would have new approaches.

The Murder Of English Literacy

In a mathematics placement test, half of Ohio State University's freshmen couldn't figure out how to divide three pizzas among four people. A university official said a growing number of students are entering the university educationally unprepared to deal with basic college activities. As a result about two-thirds of the incoming students require some remedial math.

So says a United Press International wire story during the past week.

The problem is rooted in the fact that a number of high school students avoid taking subjects they need for college entrance and a successful and productive college academic life.

The situation at one of the nation's largest university's seems to reflect the consequences of the "take what you like" philosophy which has crept into American education to a significant degree. Of course, the situation varies from high school to high school; one may be a a stickler on academics, another may be moderate and still another may be almost totally permissive in allowing students to decide what courses they will take in high school. But overall, the record indicates that college and university standards have been lowered because high school standards have been lowered.

It puzzled me a year ago when our fourth and final son to go through a complete 12-year school career in our local school system did not sign up for a fourth year of foreign language. He had taken three years and the school recommendations to parents of students who plan to go into higher education is that four years of foreign language be taken while in high school. I urged him to take the fourth year; but dad's urging did not overcome what appears to be a permissive type of counseling.

The Ohio State University story also includes lower English language ability in incoming students. Some 21 percent needed non-credit remedial courses in English before they could begin college level work when the survey was made.

The president of Ohio State said the problem is universal, other colleges and universities are experiencing the same problem. Though OSU has developed a program to cope with the problem, OSU officials said the situation should be taken care of at the high school level. That sounds reasonable. After all, why pay university prices for education which ought to be attained in the first twelve grades?

However, the problem is not all due to high school deficiencies. An OSU official noted that students are bombarded with bad examples of English usage in television commercials, popular song lyrics and the media. To that I offer a loud "amen." Just a week ago, I heard two TV news reporters put a "tea" instead of a "sh" in "consortium." And newspaper stories frequently tell of a boat that "sunk" or the value of the dollar that "sunk" to a new low, or some other similar story.

There is another element in the media which is polluting the English language. Computerized typesetting equipment is amazing in its speed. But thus far this marvel of the electronic age has not been able to hyphenate words properly. Some of the examples are pitiful. If the line being set has a bit of space at the end but not quite enough for the next full word, you get such things as:

"The structure was designed and built by a local construction company."

—Or:

"The defendant was charged with willfully causing physical harm to the plaintiff."

So, while space age technology is impressive, there are some drawbacks in certain areas. And they add to the problems faced by institutions of higher learning.

Perhaps it might be useful to continue the popular "show and tell" day of the early elementary grades into high school English classes: have students show newspaper or magazine articles containing poor spelling or grammar, and tell of the errors heard in news broadcasts.

Why pick on the news media? Well, I seen so many errors in the past that I think it's time somebody done something about it.

The 'Slam-Dunk' - A Sports Travesty

There are times when I wonder how some things are allowed to happen when they are obviously opposite in principal to whatever purpose is intended in whatever activity they are tolerated.

One of those tolerated "things" in sports is the so-called "slam-dunk shot" in college and professional basketball. What has brought the matter to the public's attention in recent weeks is the shattering of a few glass backboards by a professional basketball player when he slam-dunked the basketball.

Now, in any field of sports, proper recognition of athletes is based on ability to overcome certain obstacles, those obstacles represented by the limitations of strength, endurance and skill in human beings. Varying skills from individual to individual is what makes sports so interesting. The challenge is always represented by the apparent truth that this or that "can't be done." So human beings set out to show that it CAN be done. And we have from decade to decade a set of new records being established in many sports. Skill is important, but it is the challenge of the impossible that motivates.

But the slam dunk??? I'm sorry, but that type of "shot" represents no skill. What it does represent is a reduction in a handicap. With basketball players taller and taller as the years go by, there is less and less skill required by the physical giants in putting the baketball through the hoop because the hoop has stayed at the same place.

The shattered backboards may be spectacular to some people, but these occurrences in truth serve only to raise the question, "Is this 'sport'?" There is no finesse in the slam-dunk. There is no overcoming a seemingly insurmountable obstacle for players whose physical size brings their outstretched hands within inches of the "insurmountable obstacle," the basketball hoop. There is no skill in shoving a ball into an opening that is within reach for certain players.

It's bad enough that physical damage is being caused by the slam-dunk "shot" at the present time. What is more significantly wrong in the matter is that there is no defense against such a shot. The rules prohibit "goal tending"—that is, a defensive player cannot deflect the basketball away from its flight toward the hoop after the ball begins its downward path. And with a slam-dunk, the dunker has his hands on the top side of the ball when he shoves the ball downward. Even if a tall defensive player gets up in the air at the same time and puts out his hand to block the slam-dunk, he has violated the "no goal-tending" rule because the offensive player's shove on the ball represents the downward flight of the ball. And that's a "no-no"—you can't deflect the ball in its downward flight toward the basket.

With the average height of basketball players increasing over the years, it seems rather ridiculous to have the basket still only ten feet above the floor. Experiments have been tried from time to time in years past by placing the hoop twelve feet high. The experiments have always been described as unsatisfactory. But I wonder just how serious those experiments were. Maybe it was more a matter of "playing around" than of true experimenting.

If you ask me, basketball has reached a low low when the appeal of watching a certain player perform lies in the possibility that he might break another backboard. It's bad enough having giants shoving the ball through the hoop; they have no obstacle to overcome, an obstacle beyond their reach.

The slam-dunk ought to be outlawed and the basket ought to be raised to twelve feet in professional basketball.

Deaf Man Designs Tiny Hearing Aid

Offers free model

A remarkable tiny hearing aid has been perfected by a man who has been hard of hearing for nearly ten years.

This small device has no dangling cords or separate transmitting units and is worn completely in your ear.

It was developed especially for those persons who can hear but can't understand. This hearing instrument provides "ear-level" hearing with the wearer picking up speech, sounds, television and radio at his ear. Due to the use of transistors, the user cost is extremely low.

A true life actual size replica of the smallest all-in-the-ear hearing aid ever made will be given absolutely free to anyone sending in this advertisement while supply lasts. So we suggest you write for yours now. No obligation whatsoever. Write to Hear, Box 390, Garrett, Indiana 46738. (Adv.)

The two week common cold

While you may not associate a two week illness with a minor cold, it is true that some cold viruses are able to linger on for many days. A variety of different viruses can cause common cold symptoms. Some of them can provoke a cough that lingers for a week or more.

Although there is no cure, the best procedure is to drink plenty of fluids to help loosen congestion and eliminate toxins from the body. For a severe cold, bed rest is usually a good idea, since fatigue only complicates matters.

Bloodmobile Coming February 5

In February of 1979, an amazing number of pints of blood were donated at the Riverdale Bloodmobile—188 pints to be exact.

This year the Bloodmobile will be back again, Tuesday, February 5, and there is the challenge to do as well as last year.

Chairman Delores Hicov said this week that the problems encountered last year in accommodating the large turnout appear to have been overcome. This year there will be 18 beds available making it possible to process approximately 55 donors per hour. With the expanded facilities, it is expected that there will be no waiting for those who volunteer to donate a pint of blood.

Mrs. Hicov noted that the need for blood is a continuing need.

Last year the record 188 pints was achieved partly through the blood donations from DeKalb Eastside High School students and from employees at the Vulcraft plant at Saint Joe.

Coburn Corners Church History

A HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF CHRIST AT COBURN'S CORNERS

—by Walter H. Coburn

PART 8

With the immensity of the physical task that lay before the newcomers in our minds we wonder that they so soon began to consider church and school. Indeed, a candid examination of many communities of the time will soon convince one that such concern was the exception. These men had a definite religious and educational background. They were New Englanders in blood and indeed in training for the Western Reserve was a western extension of New England. Moreover, their religious life had been vitalized by a plea that thrilled them to their very souls. Finally there came with them a strong Christian and experienced preacher who knew the despair that can come to one who has lost his sense of the presence of God. The church was born, not on February 17, 1837 but in the hearts of worthy men at the preaching of some of the greatest preachers who ever stood in the American pulpit.

During the year of 1837 twenty-two members were added. All but three came from Ohio bringing their letters. This little group was trioled in membership in the first few months. The next spring witnessed the beginning of the work of James Hadsell. It seems that these men were appointed for life or good behavior. The office was purely congregational however.

In 1839 the church became the recipient of property. Benjamin Alton deeded a portion of his farm in section 18 to be used as a cemetery and church lot. Trustees were appointed as the law required. This place is now the old part of the Alton cemetery which is still owned by the church. The original part is easily distinguished by the lack of plan in burials. There are no defined rows of graves. In it lie the bodies of the older men and women of the community.

In 1840 Mary Hadsell, wife of James, placed her letter in the church, coming from the Baptists. Bishops were added from time to time, John H. Coburn in 1845, Samuel Headley two years earlier.

Another feature of church life was the manner of discipline. At the yearly meeting of the congregation any of the older members of the congregation were privileged to call to the attention of the congregation certain members who were delinquent. Three members, including Lorenzo D. Alton (Dow) were excluded. Two years later young Alton was restored. Indeed, that was the usual result of disfellowship. This strictness was probably an inheritance from the Baptists for in many Baptist churches of the time there were more excluded in a given year than there were admitted. At the same time it must be noted that many things were accepted as definitely sinful that are now at least tolerated by the church.

The church grew slowly but by 1846 there was a revision of the rolls and the number was sixty-three; in 1859 there were eighty-five.

Town Board Meets Monday At 7

The Town Board of Saint Joe will meet in regular session Monday, February 4, at the fire hall.

Included in the session will be the swearing in of Paula Tintsman as board member from Ward 2 of the town. She was appointed to the vacancy by precinct committeeman Donzella Graham, upon approval of application by board members Larry McKown and Ted Haberkorn.

Other business will include a review of the annual report of receipts and expenditures for 1979 for the town and waterworks. The report appears elsewhere in this issue of The News. Anyone with questions about the way money was spent during 1979 may present their questions or comments Monday.

The town appears now to be without the services of a humane officer, with Betty Baker vacating that post. Anyone willing to take on the somewhat "thankless" job should contact any board member.

Several other matters are on the agenda and town residents are invited to attend Monday's meeting. All board meetings are open to the public. Questions, comments and complaints are welcomed by the board so that it may function to the best interests of local residents.

Bridge Group 'Keeps Plugging'

Though the county commissioners have voted to proceed with construction of a new bridge over the Saint Joseph River at Spencerville, a determined group of citizens from the area are continuing their efforts to keep the present old covered bridge open to traffic through repair and reinforcement.

About a dozen people attended a recent meeting at the home of Charlotte Hudson at Spencerville to discuss future efforts of the group in seeking to preserve the 106-year-old bridge as a useful structure for normal vehicular traffic.

One of the prime concerns of the group is that a new half-million or so dollar bridge will result in the deterioration of the historic landmark bridge. The group has obtained cost estimates for materials needed for repair and reinforcement. Although present repair estimates are considerably higher than earlier estimates, they are still far lower than the money required for construction of a new bridge.

Anyone who wishes to assist the group in its efforts, regardless of where they reside, may contact Marge Shook, Janice Hollabaugh or Charlotte Hudson for further information.

Postmaster To Leave February 8

Saint Joe will be without a postmaster as of Friday, February 8, 1980.

George Armstrong, postmaster at Saint Joe for the past six years, will become postmaster at Waterloo where a retirement created a vacancy. Mr. Armstrong served as clerk at the Waterloo office from March 1, 1955, until he came to Saint Joe June 30, 1973, as officer in charge. He officially became postmaster here April 13, 1974.

The new assignment will bring less travel time and mileage from the Armstrong home at Auburn.

The Armstrong family is well-known in the Auburn area with diversified interests. Lois Armstrong, the postmaster's wife, has been involved in real estate the past few years; two sons own and operate George and Tom's restaurant and The Brown House drivein at Auburn; and a son-in-law, Dave Winebrenner, is in the insulation business at Auburn.

There will be an officer in charge at the Saint Joe Post Office on temporary assignment after February 8 until a new postmaster is selected and appointed.

Waterloo Town Board 'Pres' Says News' Editorial In Error

Dear Mr. Haberkorn,

Your recent editorial of January 10 was read with great interest by many people. That of course is what we need in our free society.

However, you did not have all the facts. Waterloo did indeed ask for $380,000 as a block grant. But you were misinformed stating that it is all to be used for ten homes. A certain per cent will be used for homes.

According with the requirements for this loan there will be storm sewers along Spring, Colgrove and Middle Streets. These streets would then be paved with new curbs and sidewalks. These improvements are needed due to the fact that this area has 29.4% elderly and 26.5% families with small children.

We also will need water mains and fire hydrants through this area. The present water main is too small to give adequate protection from fire.

Those people who can afford these improvements will receive a loan whereas people on fixed incomes meeting all other requirements will be given a grant. With the present rate of inflation I think it is the duty of elected officials to help the elderly or handicapped as much as is possible.

I hope you will print this letter. Thank you.

Yours truly,
Vereda M. Albright

From The Editor's Desk....

TV Show Is 'Sneaky' Immoral

Perhaps you have noticed the articles appearing in other newspapers about the TV quiz show called "Three's A Crowd." It's a program in which a businessman is asked certain questions of a very personal nature, then his secretary is asked the same questions, then his wife is asked the same questions. If the secretaries match their boss's answers more than the wives do, the three secretaries split $1,000. If the wives have more matches, they win the $1,000 split. If there is a tie, all six split the $1,000.

The articles I referred to above, one of them quite lengthy, tended to concentrate on how demeaning the program is to women. There was a comment about the program being demeaning to the males, too. But the emphasis was on the way women are "used" on the show.

We watched the show several times when it was in an evening slot. And I was amazed at the poor taste reflected in the questions asked. If there are X-rated movies, this TV program qualifies as an X-rated TV show.

I agree with the news articles protesting the content of the show. However, I am disappointed that the primary protest seems to be "women's lib oriented." I do not recall any particular emphasis on the most important objection of all. I don't recall anyone saying repeatedly, "The show is immoral." And that's the point which ought to be made.

An example of the embarrassing and /immoral/ questions asked is: "How many times have you made whoopee with someone other than your wife?" One wife wanted to know what was meant by "making whoopee." The quiz showmaster said all he could do was ask the question.

Another question: when was the last time you were in your secretary's bedroom?

The really bad thing about such a TV presentation is that the nature of the questions and the tolerance of both the wives and secretaries in answering the questions to match the male answers gives the impression that the activities referred to are normal and acceptable. Although there is obvious embarrassment frequently for any one of the three people involved in the questions, they still give answers. And the selling point of the show is to witness that embarrassment and wonder "how are they going to get out of that one!" Also to be considered a selling point is the fact that the viewer often is left wondering if the husband and wife are going to have a big fight after the show because of the answers involving the secretary.

And what's it all for? — — — Money.

Why did I watch the show on occasion, knowing what it was going to involve?

I've asked myself that same question many times.

The 'Regional' Threat

Someone who resides on R1 Saint Joe sent me some literature from the Indiana Committee To Restore the Constitution. The information concerns Indiana Senate bill 154 which voids any act or action by any branch of government at any level to make Indiana part of a national regional governing body.

I think it was somewhere back around 1972 or earlier that then-President Richard Nixon introduced the regional concept for federal government. The idea was to bring the federal government "closer to home." If anything, the idea does just the opposite. It takes away states rights and subjects the state to the authority in its particular national region, of which there are ten.

I think Mr. Nixon made a big mistake in introducing the regional concept. I don't think Watergate presented near the danger to individual liberty as does the regional government concept.

Indiana Senate bill 154 was introduced by State Senator Gene Snowden who is no stranger to efforts to preserve individual liberty. He has been in the state legislature several years.

The information I received urges Indiana citizens to phone or write Senators Snowden and Martin Edwards; and State Representatives Kermit Bourous, Richard Dellinger, Doris Dorbecker and Nelson Becker. It probably wouldn't hurt to let our local legislators, State Representative Norman Gerig and State Senator Richard Worman, know your opinion.

The regional concept of government is not just an idea; it is already in force. If you read the daily newspapers, you will see from time to time that a hospital proposes purchase of some type of equipment or plans expansion. You will also see that the hospital does not make the final decision, as it ought to be allowed to do. The hospital must get the approval of a regional coordinating council. Activities for senior citizens are also under the ultimate direction of a regional Council On Aging.

If local residents feel strongly enough in opposition to the regional concept and want to become a part of the national efforts of the Committee To Restore the Constitution, there is a form at the News Office to be filled out to establish a local chapter.

Meanwhile, if you don't like the regional concept of government which cancels your state representation, tell the above legislators by phone or letter to support Senate bill 154, a bill to void federally imposed regional government in Indiana and permits any Indiana citizen to bring a civil action to enjoin enforcement of regional government.

The local volunteer fire department has set up certain standards of training and every effort is made to provide this training at the convenience of firemen if the regular session cannot be attended.

The two week common cold

While you may not associate a two week illness with a minor cold, it is true that some cold viruses are able to linger on for many days. A variety of different viruses can cause common cold symptoms. Some of them can provoke a cough that lingers for a week or more.

Although there is no cure, the best procedure is to drink plenty of fluids to help loosen congestion and eliminate toxins from the body. For a severe cold, bed rest is usually a good idea, since fatigue only complicates matters.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

By the time this issue goes to press, George Armstrong will no longer be at our local post office. He's moving to Waterloo to serve as postmaster there.

I hate to see him leave. We have had some good rap sessions on occasion and I am old enough to feel great disappointment when something I have enjoyed gets changed.

—I wonder what all the sweet young things are going to do now. They won't have the opportunity any more to breeze into the post office with a cheery "Hi George!" and get George's cheery "Hi Rita!" or "Hi Jan!" or whomever it is coming in. He particularly enjoys those moments because he knows how jealous I am of his popularity!

—Anyhow—so long, George, it's been nice to know ya. And may you find happiness and fulfillment in your new location.

Town Board To Install Office-Meeting Room; New Dog Warden Named; Park-Cemetery Bids Asked

The town board of Saint Joe met Monday in regular session at the fire hall. Present were board members Paula Tintsman who was sworn into office at the meeting, Larry McKown and Ted Haberkorn; clerk-treasurer Emma Frank; waterworks superintendent Rich Gfeller; fire chief Fred Rayle; firemen training officer Steve Monroe; town maintenance superintendents John Bopp and Jim Miller; and Chuck Rosenbury, Ondalee Moore and Tonda Miller.

After reading of the bills and answers to questions about the bills from all present, the clerk was instructed by board president Ted Haberkorn to send a letter to the fire department requesting cooperation in keeping the thermostat at the fire hall set at 55 degrees except for meetings held in the building. The president said he had received complaints including those from firemen about the setting at or near 70 degrees at all times. It was noted that the unusually high fuel oil bills the past month were due to apparent theft of oil from the fuel tank.

In other town related business matters, Mr. Gfeller was instructed to make a daily check of the pump houses to see that heaters are functioning properly during cold weather. Better communication between the board and the waterworks superintendent was discussed.

Due to some $11 or $12 in long distance phone calls on the town's telephone bill, calls not authorized in the past, the fire department was asked to keep a record of such calls. The board did not accept responsibility for payment of such calls.

Mr. Rayle asked that an appropriation be included in the town budget for fire equipment as a regular part of the budget. He also asked consideration of the purchase of two more coats at $150 each. He suggested the board consider purchase of two walkie talkie units at $500 to $600 each for use at fires.

The president suggested that the fire department issue an annual report of receipts and expenditures so that taxpayers and those who support the department's money-raising projects know how their money is being spent.

After discussion of the $7.50 per day per dog paid for three days' maximum care by the dog warden under the dog control ordinance, the board voted unanimously to reduce the allowance to $3 per day. It was felt that $22.50 per dog was too costly to the town. Last year the town paid out almost $1,000 a large portion of which was for dog confinement care under the old daily rate.

With Betty Baker having submitted her resignation as dog warden, Denny Taylor has volunteered for the job and has been officially named dog warden by the board president. The appointment was made Thursday of this week.

The board is going ahead with plans to provide office space for the clerk-treasurer in the town hall building which has been unfinished inside for over a year. The southeast corner of the building will be enclosed and will have the east door of the building as an entrance. The project will include wiring, ceiling, paneling, insulating and heating. The area will be large enough for town board meetings.

The board authorized the advertising for bids for cemetery mowing and care, and park mowing and care.

Several other matters were discussed during the three and a quarter hour session.

In a review of certain items in the annual report, the president pointed out that the disbursement of $1,964.90 for "cemetery maintenance" included the amounts paid out for grave openings and the amount of $825.00 received by the town for grave openings reduced actual cemetery care to some $1,100. The clerk noted that a legal fee of $246 for a court suit was paid out of the "travel expense" listed in the disbursements.

The board indicated that the fire chief's suggestions on adding new sections of water mains for better distribution and control of the town's water supply would be taken "one at a time" as finances allow. The first such addition will be on Jefferson Street from Third Street to Fourth Street.

The "bad water" reports of the past two summers appear to be due to a faulty chlorinator at Pump House 1 (the "old" or original pump house). The chlorinator at Pump House 2 is working properly. The two pumps are intended to operate on a rotating basis.

The board is seeking to repair or replace the faulty unit.

Bills allowed were:

Indiana & Michigan Electric Company 288.54; Betty Baker, dog care and one month salary 160.00; I&M 262.88; Auburn Veterinary Clinic, dog disposal 8.00; John Bopp, labor 42.50; Merritt, Inc., trash pickup 331.50; General Telephone Company, 346.50; DeKalb County Farm Bureau Coop, fuel oil 171.43; Yeiser's Standard Service, parts and labor 71.20.

Coburn Corners Church History

A HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF CHRIST AT COBURN'S CORNERS

—by Walter H. Coburn

PART 9

When the Civil War came, this neighborhood, like all others, furnished its share of men for the army. It is hard for us today to realize how much the War affected the lives and thought of those who remained behind. Many "boys in blue" left for the army during those years. On the church rolls five are marked with these words, "killed in action" or "died in the army". These five were: Benny Robe, Henry Monroe, Harvey Ackley, Edward W. Flint, Edward Rupert. We cannot give a complete list of the men who went away and came back but every person of forty years or more has a distinct memory of the colors, firing squad and bugler, and sometimes the martial band which led the procession for Memorial Day.

The war brought destruction other than upon the bodies of young men. During the course of the great conflict, feelings were brought to a high pitch of excitement so that sober judgment was swept aside. In the year 1864 we find these words written after the names of two men, "excluded because of war ideas". In all five people were excluded at this time, perhaps all for this one thing. 1864 was the year of the bitter political campaign between McClellan and the Democratic party against Lincoln and the Union Party. It was exceedingly bitter; all the mistakes of the conduct of the war, the highly wrought feelings of the supporters of Lincoln and the seeming hopelessness of the situation brought destruction of the Christian spirit. Just what the trouble was is not known certainly, but since two of the group are known to have been staunch Democrats it is safe to conjecture that the war ideas mention was that advocated by the Democratic party, recognition of the Confederacy and a conference looking toward some sort of union with slavery and states rights guaranteed. Of course, the northern victories changed the whole picture and the trouble passed. When we remember that perhaps every family in the church was in some way represented in the active service we can understand the tension of the church at this time. At least one of these men later became a loyal member and was honored by the office of Elder.

We have had but little to say about the material progress of the church during the years. As we have noticed the church became the owner of the lot now occupied by the cemetery early in its history. The deed mentions that it is to be used for burial and church purposes. The original intention was to build a house for worship there but the center of the community was soon seen to be nearer the corner that came to be known as Coburn Corners. Worship was conducted for a long time in private houses or school houses. But when the number of members grew to reach nearly ninety there was a real need for a separate building. In 1860 the congregation built the "old church" which stood on the site of the present building. It was the usual rectangular as the general plan of the time. There were two doors at the front end of the building with the pulpit between them so that the latecomer must run the gauntlet of all the eyes of those present. At a later time one of the doors was closed and a platform was built to fill in the space between the old platform and the wall. This was used for a choir loft. This building was used until the opening of the twentieth century.

While we are thinking of the old building it is well to pause for a look at social customs of the day. Clothing was largely home made although spinning and weaving were being abandoned swiftly by the time of the Civil war. When a family reached the church the group separated, women and small children entered one door; men and boys entered by the other. Some churches were built with a partition running from the rear to the front but this building was never so arranged. In the winter the older men surrounded one stove, older women the other. The writer's mother used to tell how she was attracted by the elder women sitting in an open square around the stove, each wearing a white bonnet as was the custom or style of the time.

We must also relate that some of the men were addicted to the use of chewing tobacco and that some of them indulged in its use during the church service. Floor and stove suffered in consequence. One old gentleman in particular, was accustomed to sitting in a certain spot so that the floor near him was stained brown. Those who knew him testify that he was one of the saintliest of men, patient, quiet, an elder of the church and honoring the office if any mortal can do so.

Changing social customs crept into the church. What a craning of necks and rustles of disapproval must have greeted the first couple who sat down together upon one side of the church. Was it a young man and his sweetheart or a bride and groom? Whoever it was had brave spirits within them. Did young men and women manouver to sit beside each other at the division line - young man sitting sedately on the man's side and young woman on the other?

Youth-Liberals-Olympics-'No'-Youth

One of the "fruits" of the liberal trend in our government, in education, in American society as a whole is that we get set up for a knockout punch.

The inclination of youth today to get away from it all with drugs, as many adults get away from it all with alcohol, indicates a search for security with no success. Despite the rebelliousness of youth against control and adult authority, a young man or young woman in any generation depends on certain absolutes to hold to or to fall back on—as they sprout their roots in life. The "do your own thing" of recent years and the absolute trust in everyone, as seen in liberal thought, has its appeal to the young mind and also to the not so young. After all, what more freedom could you ask for than "whatever you want to do, you decide."

President Carter has shown an infinite trust in his fellow man. It is good to have that basic overall trust. But he apparently forgot that his trust was in human beings, and human beings are notorious for their failure to fulfill someone else's hopes for them.

We're in a bind internationally because our President opened his eyes to reality only just recently; he became aware of the deception practiced by Russian Communist leadership.

Now he has taken what appears to be a firm stand, but you can't back up a firm stand with a phantom military force.

It may be a big disappointment that President Carter has urged a boycott of the Olympics but there isn't much else he could do. It's only a symbolic gesture, but somewhere you must draw the line and symbolic actions are the start of that line at the present moment.

Why did we get into such a predicament? Well, it has been liberal thought which brought about the virtual handcuffing of our nation's intelligence efforts, those under-cover and unpublicized maneuvers which keep a nation informed of the goings-on in foreign lands. The hostages still held in Iran are the result of ignoring warnings from our embassy in Iran of the danger facing the embassy if the deposed Shah of Iran were admitted to the United States, illness or no illness.

This is an example of the folly of blind trust—no, not the basic trust in human beings but the total blind trust which the President was showing in the past.

If you read the syndicated columnists, you may wonder how any thinking American citizen could allow the dismantling of our system of information-gathering to the degree under which we now suffer. It's unbelievable.

The FBI has been handcuffed, the CIA has been handcuffed, our spy network has been exposed in some instances—and then we wonder why we are having so much trouble coping with international situations.

The point is, Americans trust everyone but also close their eyes and ears to those who, by virtue of their particular position, have reliable information to indicate where our trust has been misplaced.

What does this have to do with young people, what connection is there between youth and international affairs? Well, youth may go "on its own" in its own eyes; but it still clings to something solid, something basic from which to gain an understanding of what's happening. Without an anchor, the search for knowledge is just a drifting boat. The authority which youth so despises is the anchor—but we don't realize it in our youth. It is in later years that the wise man or woman says, "Now I understand why there were so many times when someone said 'no' and I wanted a 'yes'."

The liberal trend has been in control for a considerable length of time now; it is inclined to say "yes". The lack of direction in so many people is the direct result of the "do your own thing" approach to life. Self-gratification has been pointed to as the ultimate goal for human beings by the liberal mind. Unfortunately, many of our people, believing that having "things," pleasure-seeking, is their life's purpose, now find little substance to life. And unfortunately, having blind trust in other nations and their leaders has left us as a nation grabbing for the anchor and finding only the rope.

'Shrove Tuesday' Precedes Lent

"Shrive—to receive the confession of and give absolution to; to obtain absolution for oneself by confessing one's sins and doing penance."

The Christian world has as a prelude to the season of Lent a three-day observance called "Shrovetide." These are the three days immediately preceding Ash Wednesday, the beginning of the Lenten season.

The three days are Shrove Sunday (Quinquagesima Sunday), Shrove Monday and Shrove Tuesday on which confession is made in preparation for Lent.

Shrove Tuesday will be observed Tuesday, February 12, at St. Peter Luthern Church at Spencerville with a pancake and ham supper starting at 5:30 p.m. This will mark the beginning of the observance of Lent by the local Lutheran parish composed of St. Peter Lutheran Church at Spencerville and St. Mark Lutheran Church at Saint Joe.

Members and friends of the congregations are invited to attend Tuesday evening and thereafter in the traditional season of penance which leads to the Festival of Easter.

Family Series At Coburn Corners

On Wednesday nights, from 7 to 8:30 p.m., beginning March 5 and continuing through April 9, there will be a six-week program at Coburn Corners Church of Christ centering around the theme "Focus On the Family." Co-sponsoring churches are the Newville Church of Christ, the Saint Joe Church of Christ and the West Milford Church of Christ.

"Focus On the Family" is the work of James C. Dobson, Ph.D., associate clinical professor of pediatrics at the University of Southern California School of Medicine. Dr. Dobson is also a licensed psychologist.

The program consists of a series of seven films: The Strong-Willed Child, Shaping the Will Without Breaking the Spirit, Christian Fathering, Preparing For Adolescence—The Origins of Self Doubt, Preparing For Adolescence—Peer Pressure and Sexuality, What Wives Wish Their Husbands Knew About Women—The Lonely Housewife, and What Wives Wish Their Husbands Knew About Women—Money, Sex and Children. The last two films will be shown on the same night. The films will be for adults and high school youth only. There will be a supervised nursery and a youth program, thus permitting the entire family to attend.

The program is geared toward strengthening family ties with new and fresh ideas. Following the showing of each film there will be a discussion period with the viewers being divided into smaller cell groups. There will be two high school groups, one for the boys and the other for girls. There will be leaders for all groups. Both the films and discussion periods are tools to aid parents in their search for the Lord's good things for them and their children.

The public is encouraged and welcome to attend any and all of the sessions. Those planning to attend should preregister by calling 337—5457, 337—5384, 238—4567, 542—7169 or 542—6281. Registration is requested for not later than Friday, February 22.

Coburn Corners Church of Christ is located on State Road 101 at the intersection with County Road 64, southeast of Saint Joe.

Big Brothers-Sisters Need More Volunteers

—Diane Woehnker, Reporter

Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Northeastern Indiana, Inc., is looking for adult volunteers from DeKalb County to be Big Brothers and Big Sisters, according to Lynn Burroughs, president of the board of directors of the organization.

Volunteer Big Brothers/Big Sisters offer friendship and guidance on a one-to-one basis to kids from single parent homes by seeing them at least once a week. The partners in each friendship plan their own activities which might include recreation, visits to the home of the Big Brother or Big Sister, sessions with school books and discussion periods.

Everyday activities become very special to the Little Brothers and Little Sisters because of the individual attention they receive.

Since Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Northeastern Indiana was established in 1974, over 1,000 young people have been referred by schools, welfare departments and various other sources. Because far fewer adults have volunteered to be Big Brothers and Big Sisters, many kids remain on the waiting list. These young people are at an age when companionship and special attention from a positive role model can make a real difference.

"Being a Big Brother or a Big Sister is a service to the community as well as to the youth because Little Brothers and Little Sisters have shown decreased delinquency and institutionalization, improved school performance and better attitudes in general," said Mr. Burroughs. "Most volunteers are even finding that being a Big Brother or a Big Sister is a service they are getting as much out of their relationship as they are putting in," added Mr. Burroughs, himself a Big Brother.

Little Brothers and Little Sisters range in age from 7 to 17 and are matched with volunteers according to their background, interests and the age of the child preferred by the volunteer.

Further information about Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Northeastern Indiana can be obtained by calling Diane Woehnker, DeKalb-Steuben Counties Caseworker, at 837-9151 or 925-3131 Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"Growing up today is difficult even under the best circumstances. It is even more difficult for kids from single parent homes lacking security, warmth, guidance and personal attention," Mr. Burroughs noted. "Be a part of something big. Be a Big Brother/Big Sister," he urged.

Hunt Winners

At the end of the 1979 hunting season, Mako Sports held its second annual deer hunt.

Gary Norton, owner of the sport shop, reports that there were 76 entries in the shotgun and muzzleloader division with 10 deer turned in.

First place for the heaviest deer went to Darwin Lechleidner of R1 Butler and Leon Steury of R1 Saint Joe. Both turned in 190 pound deer. They split a $100 gift certificate.

Second place went to William Mickelson of R1 Hicksville and a $25 gift certificate.

The trophy for the best rack was shared by Steury and Lechleidner. The winner will be decided from ballot by customers by comparing the two racks after mounting.

There were 48 entries in the archery division with 10 deer turned in. First place for the heaviest deer went to Nick Carr of Saint Joe with a 195 pound 9 point buck. He received a $100 gift certificate.

Second place went to Gary Warstler of R1 Auburn and a $25 gift certificate.

Trophy for the best rack went to Carr for his 9 point buck.

"Hard luck award" goes to Bill Seltenright of Butler. The bow season is reported to have been rough on him.

The two week common cold

While you may not associate a two week illness with a minor cold, it is true that some cold viruses are able to linger on for many days. A variety of different viruses can cause common cold symptoms. Some of them can provoke a cough that lingers for a week or more.

Although there is no cure, the best procedure is to drink plenty of fluids to help loosen congestion and eliminate toxins from the body. For a severe cold, bed rest is usually a good idea, since fatigue only complicates matters.

MATCHES AND LIGHTERS

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission estimates that each year approximately 8,700 individuals receive hospital emergency room treatment for injuries, primarily burns, associated with matches; 2,000 for injuries associated with lighters; 4,400 for injuries associated with lighter fluid. Children under 11 and elderly people suffer the most severe burns.

These are some of the patterns:

• A young woman spilled lighter fluid on her hands and blouse while refilliing a lighter. When she lit the lighter, the fluid ignited and caused severe burns on her hands, arms and chest.

• While lying in bed, an 86-year-old man attempted to light his pipe and dropped a burning match onto his pajamas which ignited. He died in the resulting fire.

• Two-year-old Lynn was playing with matches alone in the living room. She dropped a flaming match on her dress which ignited and caused severe burns over 70% of her body. Lynn died a few days later.

Those illustrations represent the following accident patterns associated with matches and lighters:

1. Children playing with matches and cigarette lighters—this is most common with children under 11 years of age.

2. Product failures—sparks, fragmentation and flaring can be caused by non-uniform application of ignition compounds to the match tips. Some lighters have unexpectedly high flame heights or spit drops of flaming fuels.

3. Use of matches and lighters by the elderly. The elderly may not be physically able to light a match safely or to extinguish a fire, particularly a clothing fire, if one starts.

4. Spilling lighter fluid. Most people aren't aware of the hazards of the highly flammable vapors of lighter fluid. Fluid which overflows onto your hand or clothing or which leaks through cracks in a defective lighter can be ignited by a spark or flame from the lighter. Children and the elderly are frequently involved in accidents associated with lighters.

Other hazards include old-fashioned "friction matches" which can ignite by being rubbed against any rough surface and ignition of the entire matchbook because of accessibility of match heads or difficulty in closing the matchbook. Smoking is the most common activity in matchbook and lighter accidents involving people over 16 years of age.

Difficult and awkward activities, such as lighting an oven, are involved in these accidents.

Some general tips about lighters and matches include:

—Be aware that a child often seeks an isolated area to experiment with matches or lighters and, in the event of a fire, the child won't be able to get help. If burned matches are found in an isolated area, explain to your child or children how dangerous it is to play with fire.

—Don't use matches or lighters near flammable liquids.

—Be sure the lighter flame has extinguished before putting the lighter away.

—Wait for a match to cool before throwing it away.

—Keep matches and lighters in high places out of the reach of children.

—Don't store matches or lighters near flammable liquids, rags or paper.

—Keep only one matchbook at a time in the same pocket to avoid ignition resulting from contact of the matches of one book with the friction strip of another.

—Discuss with your children the dangers of a clothing fire. Tell them that if their clothing does catch fire, "STOP, DROP AND ROLL"— covering their face with their hands. Never run when your clothing is on fire; running makes it worse.

Firemen Have Rough Weekend With Barn-Burner, Mobile Home

Local firemen were busy during the past weekend. Two fires occurred in the cold shivery weather.

Saturday night at around 7:30 p.m. the department was called to the Paul Brown property at the northeast edge of town where a barn caught fire. Origin of the fire was not exactly known. But it apparently spread quickly, fed by a stockpile of stove wood and a quantity of hay for livestock kept in the barn. The stock was rescued but two tractors, a baler and other machinery were destroyed.

Spencerville firemen responded to a call for mutual aid. A watch was kept at the site until Sunday morning.

Early Monday morning a mobile home in the Saint Joe Mobile Home Court was destroyed by fire. The unit was owned by Ron Fee. Fire Chief Fred Rayle said the fire may have been caused by an electric heater left in the bathroom to prevent freezing of pipes.

Skirting on an adjacent mobile home was slightly damaged.

Coburn Corners Church History

A HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF CHRIST AT COBURN'S CORNERS

—by Walter H. Coburn (written in 1937)

PART 10

There is evidence that attendance upon evening service was greater than today but we must remember that there were more people in the country communities than now, particularly the younger people and that there were fewer places to go. Church services were not only religious events but social events as well. One of the great strengths of the congregation has been its recognition of social needs.

A popular amusement of the time was the literaries as they were called. At stated times during the winter they were held. The custom was to use the schoolhouses which would be filled upon these occasions. There were then two schools in the neighborhood. The North School or Cheesetown and the South School or Coburntown. Programs were arranged usually consisting of music, recitations, debates and papers.

The debates and papers as well as other features were conducted for youth and old age as well. Debates followed some of the old age questions or some question of lively interest at the time. The papers could be of any kind. Sometimes they would be discussion of moral questions. Sometimes they were historical in character. The writer has two of John F. Coburns papers that tell of neighborhood history. One is a semi-humorous description of an epidemic of the "seven years itch". Underneath the humor you see the constant realization of the desperate plight of a family stricken with serious illness so far removed from skilled help. Jonathan Shull preserved some which were serious discussions of moral questions. Sometimes these papers were broadly humorous, particularly those which discussed the life and particularly the character of some person well known in the neighborhood. The subject was present to enjoy the discussion. He was expected to preserve his good nature. When they aptly distorted the little idiosyncrasies of the individual under discussion, they were sure to be appreciated. These literaries were useful in development of talents and many communities are trying to revive like community efforts for that reason. Of course, these are modernized.

On one occasion when a program of like nature was being given in the church Byron Hadsell brought an organ as an aid to the music. He was thoroughly rebuked by individuals and took the instrument out that night to escape public discipline. It was not long however, until the congregation had surrendered to the innovation. Today, so far have we changed that we use various instruments and at various times more or less complete orchestras are sponsored by the Bible School.

It was not always possible to have a regular preacher present for each service. When this was not possible the Lord's Supper was spread and attended to by elder and deacons. This has always been true so that it has been only on extremely rare occasions that communion has not been observed. In the old days a "Social Service" was held. Some one either by appointment or chance would read a chapter from the Bible and start a discussion by question or statement. The service was strictly informal. Anyone could talk. The only rule was that the Bible was the authority. Perhaps these were not always on so high a plane as our memory would indicate but it is safe to say that more than one Bible Class in our modern Bible Schools could sit in on these discussions with much profit. As could be expected the people were of independent minds. The minister might be respected for his learning and ability and for his righteous life but the people had their Bibles in their hands and in their heads and hearts and woe to anyone who taught strange doctrine. Sometimes this resulted in narrow conservatism but the general result was good.

'Shrove Tuesday' Precedes Lent

"Shrive—to receive the confession of and give absolution to; to obtain absolution for oneself by confessing one's sins and doing penance."

The Christian world has as a prelude to the season of Lent a three-day observance called "Shrovetide." These are the three days immediately preceding Ash Wednesday, the beginning of the Lenten season.

The three days are Shrove Sunday (Quinquagesima Sunday), Shrove Monday and Shrove Tuesday on which confession is made in preparation for Lent.

Shrove Tuesday will be observed Tuesday, February 19, at St. Peter Luthern Church at Spencerville with a pancake and ham supper starting at 5:30 p.m. This will mark the beginning of the observance of Lent by the local Lutheran parish composed of St. Peter Lutheran Church at Spencerville and St. Mark Lutheran Church at Saint Joe.

Members and friends of the congregations are invited to attend Tuesday evening and thereafter in the traditional season of penance which leads to the Festival of Easter.

NE Center Strongly Criticized

I'm sorry to see that considerable controversy has arisen in recent months about the mental health program now in operation in a four-county district which includes DeKalb, Noble, Steuben and LaGrange counties. And I am sorry to see that some friends of mine in the legal field are on opposite sides. But that's the way the ball bounces. And I am certain that their differences are honest and objective, not petty and personal.

The internal strife plaguing the Northeastern Psychiatric Clinic was reported at length in the county daily newspaper. I don't think I had anything in these columns about it. But that didn't mean I wasn't interested.

A clash of personalities appears to have been the main factor which led to the removal of the doctor in charge at the Auburn office of the organization.

Since that time, DeKalb County's two outstanding judges, Harold Stump of the Circuit Court and Charles Quinn of the Superior Court, have made it very plain that the counseling now obtained at the center in court referrals are totally unsatisfactory. Any time you have two men of their caliber saying something is wrong, you better believe it!

I don't want to get into any details about what has gone before. But I do want to point out one thing Judge Quinn said last week in his stinging criticism of the services provided at the center in recent months (the services provided before apparently had been satisfactory).

Judge Quinn expressed his concern that the counseling now being provided was not based in the Judeo-Christian foundation of our nation as a whole. He said that the hiring of two foreign-graduate doctors destroyed the religious heritage our society grew under.

The judge has scored a big point, in my book. Far too much of our American society is now following the path of "secular humanism," as some call it. It is not a God-based philosophy as reflected in our Declaration of Independence and in our Constitution. Instead this philosophy makes a "religion" out of human concepts of right and wrong, of social relationships. It is made up of such ideas as "do your own thing" to the point where self-gratification is the most important goal — in the tolerance of such abnormal behavior styles as homosexuality — in the idea that if you want something, you have a right to get it without regard for earning it or deserving it — in tolerance of self-prescribed drug use — in making education a matter of the child's choice of subject matter and of effort put forth.

The restraint which characterizes our judicial system as a whole has preserved the ideal of "justice for all." And our two judges in DeKalb County are outstanding examples of the dignified restraint which gives solidarity to the process of law; if anyone is going to get a "fair trial" anywhere, it is in either of our two county courts.

In view of the character of these two men, therefore, it is truly significant when they express public criticism in any matter. So, when Judge Charles Quinn says a counseling service has lost its Judeo-Christian character, folks better sit up and take notice because it is in our Judeo-Christian heritage that our system of justice is based, our sense of fair play is based, our concept of individual liberty is based.

I hope this situation can be resolved quickly. But it won't be resolved until our two judges can say once again that the services from the Northeastern Center are useful and helpful to their courts. When that occurs, the center will also once again be useful and helpful to anyone and everyone in this area needing professional consultation and counseling.

Today's 'Legislated Inflation'

Our legislators at the state and federal level do a lot of talking about inflation but when it comes to keeping the ball rolling to curb inflation, they back off.

There is no way possible that inflation can be slowed or stopped as long as automatic cost of living increases in wages or salaries are agreed to by private industry AND LEGISLATED BY THOSE WE ELECT.

Federal spending is the major culprit in the inflation crime against the average American. It is no secret—you read about it almost daily now in syndicated columns in newspapers and other periodicals—when the government needs more dollars, the printing presses start rolling and off come a few billion here and a few billion there.

If I were to make engravings and print facsimilies of our American currency and use it to pay my bills, I would end up in prison for counterfeiting.

The federal government is doing the same thing in effect in printing more money. There isn't anything to back up these new billions of dollars, just as there is nothing to back up the "counterfeit" dollars I might print.

President Carter's proposed budget for 1981 is for $615.8 billion. But anticipated revenue is only $600 billion. That leaves a deficit—ANOTHER deficit—of $15.8 billion. (Some say the deficit is going to be a lot more than that—and they're probably correct.)

President Carter calls this a "prudent and responsible" budget for 1981. Prudent??? Keep on spending more than you take in and that's "prudent"?? What an abuse of the English language!

The 1951 budget is $52 billion higher than 1980's budget. So, putting these confusing figures together, we come up with the fact that, despite an INCREASE IN REVENUE OF $76 BILLION, we're still going to go deeper in the hole because the spending is still going to be more than the income.

"Prudent"???

The "security" binge state and federal government has indulged in, along with those labor leaders who constantly preach "more, more, more," is leading us to ruin. The state legislature just increased unemployment benefits. They gave "cost of living" pay increases to state employees. The Congress has given itself and other federal employees a "cost of living" increase. The CETA program in Fort Wayne is currently under fire due to abuses; "abuses" means somebody got some money for doing nothing. But the program goes on.

CETA began just a few years ago as a $180 million a year "employment training" program. IT NOW COSTS $11 BILLION! Eliminate CETA and you eliminate a big cunk of the anticipated deficit for 1981.

A Fort Wayne CETA spokesman said the area program was responsible for getting "thousands of jobs" for those who needed training for a vocation. I think that individual is way off track. Most of the money appears to go for administrative costs ("district director," "deputy district director;" "district planner," "deputy district planner"—and so on).

These are crimes against the American taxpayer. And the worst crime of all is that most Americans pay higher taxes each year due to higher income due to, for instance, automatic cost of living increases. And one of these days it is finally going to seak into the minds of the average worker that every time his or her income goes up, his or her purchasing power goes down. And the only way you stop that federal tax trickery is to say, "I don't want any more money or any more benefits. I can't afford 'em!"

But who in our legislative halls at Indianapolis and Washington is telling—really TELLING the public what is happening, really HARPING on the folly of more dollars?

No one.

There are those who are saying something from time to time. But no one is really going at it gung-ho tooth and nail. And most Americans are coming out losers

Decongestants: These reduce swelling by shrinking tiny blood vessels in the nose. Sprays usually work best because they deliver a concentrated dose. However, prolonged use can cause "rebound congestion" and aggravated swelling.

Antihistamines: These relieve sneezing and watery eyes of hay fever and allergies. There is some controversy whether antihistamines have any effect on a cold but they are included in almost every cold product.

Community Responds With 169 Pints Of Blood Feb. 5

The February 5 Bloodmobile at Riverdale didn't break last year's record 188 pints; but it came close—close enough to identify the community response as one of the best, if not the best, in the area.

169 pints of blood were donated this month. Cooperating in the effort once again were Jan Roach, nurse at the local Vulcraft plant, and Charles Hampel, superintendent of the local school system.

Big Brothers-Sisters Need More Volunteers

—Diane Woehnker, Reporter

Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Northeastern Indiana, Inc., is looking for adult volunteers from DeKalb County to be Big Brothers and Big Sisters, according to Lynn Burroughs, president of the board of directors of the organization.

Volunteer Big Brothers/Big Sisters offer friendship and guidance on a one-to-one basis to kids from single parent homes by seeing them at least once a week. The partners in each friendship plan their own activities which might include recreation, visits to the home of the Big Brother or Big Sister, sessions with school books and discussion periods.

Everyday activities become very special to the Little Brothers and Little Sisters because of the individual attention they receive.

Since Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Northeastern Indiana was established in 1974, over 1,000 young people have been referred by schools, welfare departments and various other sources. Because far fewer adults have volunteered to be Big Brothers and Big Sisters, many kids remain on the waiting list. These young people are at an age when companionship and special attention from a positive role model can make a real difference.

"Being a Big Brother or a Big Sister is a service to the community as well as to the youth because Little Brothers and Little Sisters have shown decreased delinquency and institutionalization, improved school performance and better attitudes in general," said Mr. Burroughs. "Most volunteers are even finding that being a Big Brother or a Big Sister is a service they are getting as much out of their relationship as they are putting in," added Mr. Burroughs, himself a Big Brother.

Little Brothers and Little Sisters range in age from 7 to 17 and are matched with volunteers according to their background, interests and the age of the child preferred by the volunteer.

Further information about Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Northeastern Indiana can be obtained by calling Diane Woehnker, DeKalb-Steuben Counties Caseworker, at 837-8151 or 925-2131 Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"Growing up today is difficult even under the best circumstances. It is even more difficult for kids from single parent homes lacking security, warmth, guidance and personal attention," Mr. Burroughs noted. "Be a part of something big. Be a Big Brother/Big Sister," he urged.

Lions Sponsor Information Meeting Monday On $1.1 Million Addition

The Saint Joe Lions Club is inviting public participation in a meeting to be held Monday, March 3, concerning the proposed $1.1 million building program at DeKalb Eastside Junior-Senior High School.

Charles Hampel, superintendent of the DeKalb eastern school district, has been invited by the Lions Club to attend the meeting to provide information about the building program and to answer questions from the public.

Additional classrooms would be built under the plan and enclosed halls constructed between the various buildings.

The present junior-senior high school facility was built on the "campus plan," that is, buildings are separate units, due to a saving of 10% in construction costs at that time. The need for as much money as possible for total construction led the school board at that time to accept the "campus plan." Architects noted at the time that operating costs would be higher, but the elimination of halls provided the additional 10% for classroom and other facilities.

In order to undertake the proposed program, a $720,000 bond issue is needed. Signatures of some 100 patrons have reportedly been obtained thus far although only 50 are needed. But school board attorney H. Charles Winans has stated he would like to have at least 200 names on the bonding petition.

The March 3 meeting at 7:30 p.m. will be held at the Spencerville Community Club. The public is invited to attend and express views or ask questions.

Family Series At Coburn Corners

On Wednesday nights, from 7 to 8:30 p.m., beginning March 5 and continuing through April 9, there will be a six-week program at Coburn Corners Church of Christ centering around the theme "Focus On the Family." Co-sponsoring churches are the Newville Church of Christ, the Saint Joe Church of Christ and the West Milford Church of Christ.

"Focus On the Family" is the work of James C. Dobson, Ph.D., associate clinical professor of pediatrics at the University of Southern California School of Medicine. Dr. Dobson is also a licensed psychologist.

The program consists of a series of seven films: The Strong-Willed Child, Shaping the Will Without Breaking the Spirit, Christian Fathering, Preparing For Adolescence—The Origins of Self Doubt, Preparing For Adolescence—Peer Pressure and Sexuality, What Wives Wish Their Husbands Knew About Women—The Lonely Housewife, and What Wives Wish Their Husbands Knew About Women—Money, Sex and Children. The last two films will be shown on the same night. The films will be for adults and high school youth only. There will be a supervised nursery and a youth program, thus permitting the entire family to attend.

The program is geared toward strengthening family ties with new and fresh ideas. Following the showing of each film there will be a discussion period with the viewers being divided into smaller cell groups. There will be two high school groups, one for the boys and the other for girls. There will be leaders for all groups. Both the films and discussion periods are tools to aid parents in their search for the Lord's good things for them and their children.

The public is encouraged and welcome to attend any and all of the sessions. Those planning to attend should preregister by calling 337—5457 337—5384, 238—4567, 542—7169 or 542—6281. Registration is requested for not later than Friday, February 22.

Hospice Group Organized

At a meeting February 21 at DeKalb Memorial Hospital, a new "caring" group to help chronically ill people and their families was named DeKalb County Hospice of Hope.

Officers elected include:

Loann Bassett, president;
Evie Heimach, vice-president;
Karen Ringler, secretary;
Les Carpenter, treasurer.
Dodie Allman, public relations chairman.

The objective of the organization is to help establish a local coordinated service program to which the physician and the hospital can refer the chronically ill patient and family for assistance in living with and accepting their disease in a positive way. Setting up such a program will require the cooperation of counselors, clergymen, attorneys and funeral homes.

The public will be made aware of the services available and the hospice group plans at the same time to work with and support the county Heart Association, the county cancer society unit, the multiple sclerosis society and others.

The Hospice of Hope organization will serve as an umbrella for other programs which will include "Please Call Us," a group of trained volunteers who would visit the chronically ill patient to help with small problems and be a friepd; and "I Can Cope," a group of health care personnel who would help educate the patients and their families as to how to deal with their illnesses along with proper diet and exercise.

Tina Van Straten has been named chairman of the "Please Call Us" program. More information can be obtained from her by calling 925—5464 (office) or 925—4232 (home).

The next meeting of the DeKalb County Hospice of Hope will be Thursday, March 13, at 7:30 p.m. at DeKalb Memorial Hospital.

People interested in the program are invited to attend.

Dodie Allman can be reached at 925—1219.

More on the common cold

Decongestants: These reduce swelling by shrinking tiny blood vessels in the nose. Sprays usually work best because they deliver a concentrated dose. However, prolonged use can cause "rebound congestion" and aggravated swelling.

Antihistamines: These relieve sneezing and watery eyes of hay fever and allergies. There is some controversy whether antihistamines have any effect on a cold but they are included in almost every cold product.

Around the Town

WITH THE EDITOR

Hey, Ginny, out there in Glendale, Arizona. With the weather out there recently, did you get your feet wet??

Carol King found a tintype (old photograph on metal) in the street at the Church of Christ parsonage recently. The photo shows two little girls with their dolls.

Anyone lose a keepsake??

The death of Mark Stuck brought to my mind that old song, "That Old Gang of Mine."

I never was one of the "inner circle" of BSers at the barbershop when Dave Hagar was still running the place. But I always enjoyed the kidding and needling between Mark and the others who frequented the place, oftentimes just for a place to relax and enjoy good company. It got pretty deep in there on occasion, especially when Mark and Elwood Savage got something started between them. It was impossible to leave the place without a smile.

— "Gee. But I'd Give the World To See, That Old Gang of Mine" — — —.

'Calendar Clue' Promotes Study, Student Interest

Judith Waanders, librarian at Riverdale Elementary School, has announced that the upper grades at the school are participating in a reference contest called "Calendar Clue."

Each week there is a new contest so each week there is a new winner. Students are given a different hint each school day and the answer is posted Monday. The student who answers correctly first is the week's winner.

The contest has been in progress for three weeks and will continue until the end of the school year.

Winners in the first two contests are Richard Fiedler, a sixth grade student, and Jared Olson, a fourth grade student.

Prizes for the contest are being donated by Mom's Place in Saint Joe (milk shake); Chaney's Restaurant in Spencerville (hamburger and small coke); Bita General Store of Saint Joe and the Shell Mart at Spencerville. Each winner receives one prize from one of the awarding businesses.

Students are reported to be very enthusiastic thus far and many contribute answers. Encyclopedias and other reference books are being read to find the answers. It is hoped that the contest will encourage students to further research.

—that Congressman Dan Quayle is critical of members of Congress who think they should live under one standard of justice while other citizens should live under another standard. His comments came as a result of recent bribery actions involving several members of Congress. Mr. Quayle says "Congress is incapable of investigating charges of wrongdoing by its own members" and there is a "need for a special prosecutor to investigate this case." The Watergate investigation brought the resignation of a President. But a scandal involving a Korean "wheeler-dealer" and Democrat members of Congress last year had no extensive investigation and the current bribery scandal, involving eight Democrats and one Republican appears to be getting no special investigative attention. (The one Republican has resigned from his Congressional and committee appointments but none of the others has followed a similar course of action.)

Ladies Lit'y Club

—Fern Carr, reporter

The Ladies Literary Club met at the home of Mrs. Forrest Bevington February 13.

The president, Mrs. Bevington, called the meeting to order. Mrs. Yeiser led the reading of the collect and pledge to the flag. Mrs. Carr gave the last of her book review, "Upstairs At the White House" as the lesson. Mrs. Baker had entertainment.

Roll call was answered by seven members. Minutes of the last two meetings were read and approved. A short business meeting was held.

Blazers Win Pair

Gary Rinard exploded for 35 points Friday night and Chuck Dickerhoff tipped in a field goal as time ran out to give the DeKalb Eastside Blazers a 66-65 win over Carroll. The Blazers were trailing by 15 points as the second half began.

The game had a scoring oddity. The Blazers scored 11 in the first period and 14 in the second for their 25 first half points. Carroll on the other hand scored 11 in the third period and 14 in the final quarter for their 25 second half points. The difference came in the Blazers' 41 second half points to Carroll's 40 first half total.

Each team had 22 fouls. Each team had 25 free throw opportunities. Eastside made 18 to Carroll's 13, to overcomem the 26—24 field goal advantage of Carroll.

Randy Burns was the only other Blazer in double figures with 14 points.

The Blazers ended their regular season schedule Wednesday with a 77—62 win over Fremont at the Blazer gym.

The locals led all the way and Gary Rinard again led the scoring with 21 points. However, 11 of those points were on free throws as Fremont zeroed in on Rinard to stifle his field goal efforts.

Chuck Dickerhoff and Randy Burns cashed in on the efforts to stall Rinard, and they came up with 7 and 6 field goals, respectively.

The Blazers were hot at the free throw line, getting 25 of 28 attempts.

Diminuitive Rich Timmerman was in double figures in scoring with 10 points. He appears "out of place" against opponents due to his size. But he is an aggressive and heady player, making up for lack of size with extra hustle.

Now comes the sectional at DeKalb Central next week with the Blazers facing Garrett Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. in the fourth game of the tourney. The tourney starts Tuesday with Leo and Prairie Heights at 7 p. at 8:30 p.m. The first game m. and Hamilton facing Angola Wednesday finds DeKalb Central taking on Fremont at 7 p.m.

Coburn Corners Church History

A HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF CHRIST AT COBURN'S CORNERS

—by Walter H. Coburn (written in 1937)

PART 11

The next revision of the church roll was made in 1874 and the number of communicants was found to be one hundred and two. Three years later at an annual meeting there arose a problem which resulted in the last case of church discipline recorded. We quote from the church record dated February 10th 1877: "At a business meeting of above. date the following action was taken by the Discipline congregation meeting at Coburns, DeKalb County, Indiana." There were the names of a number of persons brought before the church for discipline and the name of Hiram Northup taken off the record at his own request and by vote of the congregation. The meeting was adjourned to meet in three months from that day on May 10th 1877.

"May 10th 1877, the adjourned of Feb. 10th 1877 and the following were to be dropped from the Church record". Here follows a list of names. It would do no good to list them here. They were all young people who had offended the common understanding of what was fit for Christian life. The story told is that on the first meeting the young people were put on trial but that for the first time they chose to remain defiant. Two of the group still live. Most of them came back into the church, some to take prominent part and to become honored members.

Again we quote from the record: "Record of annual meeting of the church at Coburns Corners held Dec. 28th in the evening, 1878.

"Meeting called to order by electing J. M. Milliman chairman. Alvenus L. Strong was appointed secretary. House to be kept in order by following named persons for year 1879:
Jan. B. F. Hoyt
Feb. Jas. M. Milliman
March C. J. Hadsell
April B. A. Hadsell
May R. G. Coburn
June Nelson Scoles
July G. W. Wilmot
Sept. Gustin Flint
Oct. John Shull
Nov. J. E. Dermott
Dec. no name given

"Motion prevailed to appoint committee of R. G. Coburn, Ella Wilmot and David Andrews to solicit subscriptions for protracted meeting.

"R. G. Coburn, B. A. Hadsell and John F. Coburn were chosen elders for the ensuing year. B. F. Hoyt and W. Hart were chosen deacons and J. M. Milliman was chosen financial deacon. It was voted to raise a Missionary fund quarterly. Adjourned for one year or to last Saturday of Dec. 1879."

Town Board Awards Contracts, Has FD 'Compensation' Conflict

In a 3½-hour session Monday night, the town board of Saint Joe awarded contracts for trash removal, cemetery care and Wild Cherry Park care. In addition considerable time was devoted to discussion of fire department matters.

Attending the session were board members Ted Haberkorn, Larry McKown and Paula Tinstman; clerk-treasurer Emma Frank; two representatives from Merritt, Inc.; one representative from Hess & Sons; fire chief Fred Rayle; fire department public information officer Steve Monroe; firemen Kevin White and Steve Grogg; Bob Chew; Arthur Nieto; Everett Dowden; Jim Miller; Tonda Miller; and John Bopp.

Bids on trash removal for a four-year period beginning May 1, 1980, included:

Merritt, Inc.—$3.48 per household per month for 150 households; or $3.20 per month for the first year with the price to be increased in succeeding years according to the Consumer Price Index; and extension of the contract for one year periods after the first four-year contract period.

Hess & Sons—$345 per month the first year ($2.30 per household for 150 households), $365.70 per month for the second year, $387.64 per month for the third year and $410.89 per month for the fourth year. The bid also included at no extra cost one residential cleanup per residence per year at curb or street with the date to be agreed upon by the contractor and the town board.

At first, the board indicated it would hold a special meeting this week to give further consideration to the bids. But at the end of the meeting board members felt there was sufficient information to make a decision and they voted to accept the Hess bid.

Bids on cemetery and park care were opened after the board president noted that the minutes of the February meeting indicated bids were to be received at the April meeting but he had published notices asking for bids at the March meeting. He asked the other board members if they wished to re-advertise for the April meeting. They indicated there appeared to be no need to delay. Two bids were received for park care and the bid from Steve Bevington for $800 was accepted. Mr. Nieto's bid of something over $1200 for cemetery care was accepted. His was the only bid received.

Mr. Dowden raised a question about the propriety of advertising for bids, stating that he had not received three issues of the local newspaper in recent weeks and that someone else was interested in bidding. The board felt that adequate notice had been given. The clerk suggested that any question about the bid advertising should have been raised before bids were opened.

Mr. Rayle presented price quotations on two models of walkie-talkies. He had asked the board to consider purchase of such units at an earlier meeting. For three units plus accessories, prices were $1,971.54 and $2,288.21.

There followed a lengthy discussion of communications equipment and other equipment. The president indicated that he was thoroughly confused as to what the fire department planned to do about the township tanker, having had three different versions from department members. He noted that a telephone conversation with the township trustee just before Monday's meeting indicated the trustee had been informed of plans which differed from those indicated to the board. Reminded that the tanker was township business, not the town's, the president said that the use of funds in the fire department treasury for any purpose remain the concern of the town board when expenditures run into hundreds of dollars. The fire department recently purchased a used milk tank truck for $800. Additional expenditures will be necessary to put it in proper condition for fire use. Mr. Rayle said the truck would replace the present tanker, then stated certain department members are looking for another chassis for the tanker. The township just recently paid a bill of some $300 for repairs to the engine of the present tanker, plus some $4,000 for repairs to the township pumper.

The discussion included a reply by the president, obviously irritated, to a statement that money paid by the town to the fire department as "compensation of firemen" is a personal payment to each fireman. The matter had come up at a previous meeting when the clerk-treasurer said a state auditor required a check be written to each fireman. The firemen said they voted to put the money into the treasury for other uses to eliminate the bookwork for the clerk-treasurer.

Monday night the president said that there was no way that the fire department's action could override the ruling of the state auditor. He said "compensation of firemen" has been an item in the town budget for many years and the money had never before been looked upon by volunteer firemen of the past as personal compensation.

As for communications, the president said he had anticipated a presentation on the purchase of single channel scanners, having received a phone call last week about the matter from a fireman. He said the board had had two informal get-togethers recently and communications equipment was discussed. The board unofficially felt that, if there is dissatisfaction with the present conference phone setup, the single channel scanners would be a waste of money because the next step would be individual pagers with fire calls going through the emergency center at Auburn. This is the type of system used by other area fire departments. The cost of pagers is high but the $700 to $800 phone bill per year would be eliminated.

No action was taken by the board. However, it is continuing investigation of communications equipment.

Waterworks superintendent Rich Gfeller was instructed to take the necessary examination to establish his qualification as superintendent in accordance with state regulations.

It was announced that Dennis Taylor is the new dog warden and that he had made some repairs to the town kennel until further improvements can be made on the building.

The board is investigating the purchase of a used dump truck. It is felt that such a vehicle would be useful especially in street and alley maintenance. The town tractor has been used in the past. But its bucket is so small as to necessitate several trips in transporting materials for maintenance work.

Bills allowed were:

Town—Auburn Veterinary Clinic, disposal of animals 10.00; Indiana Cities and Towns, dues 245.00; Mavis Mobile Radio, repairs 44.15; The Butler Company, pipe 2.93; Miller Safety Equipment Company, 2 firemen coats 270.90; John Bopp, labor and repairs 182.06; Dennis Taylor, dog care and kennel repair 59.85; Saint Joe News, legal advertising 50.14; Saint Joe Post Office, postage 15.00.

Waterworks—Rich Gfeller, salary and postage 85.95; Saint Joe Post Office, stamped envelopes 167.00.

The president reported that after investigating circumstances related to a bill presented to the board at the February meeting for unplugging a tile, it was determined that the tile was a private tile, not a town tile. Therefore, the bill was to be paid by involved property owners. He noted that generally speaking, four and five inch tile can be assumed to be private tile and not the responsibility of the town. Town tile is larger tile and for the most part involves tile going into and out of catch basins.

Blazers Upset Garrett In Tourney Double-overtime

The DeKalb Eastside Blazers destroyed the sectional championship hopes of the Garrett Railroaders Wednesday night at the DeKalb Central gym with a double-overtime 57 44 win. It was the first game for both teams in the sectional.

With Gary Rinard getting 25 points in the game and diminuitive Rich Timmerman coming up with a great floor game and 11 points, the Blazers advanced in the sectional and will meet DeKalb Central Friday in the semi-finals.

Outscored 17 14 from the field, the Blazers made 29 of 38 free throw attempts, getting many opportunities at the free throw line in the second overtime as Garrett attempted to gain possession of the ball.

Garrett led 10 9 at the end of one quarter and 24 23 at the half. Then the Blazers scored a dozen points in the third period while holding the Railroaders to a half dozen. And it was 35 30 going into the final quarter. Garrett then scored 10 points to Eastside's 5 for a 40-40 tie at the end of regulation time.

Chris Winans fouled out with less than 2 minutes to go in the game. He has been the backbone of Garrett's scoring this year. Three more Railroaders fouled out in the second overtime in Garrett's futile efforts to gain a victory.

Rinard and Burns fouled out on the Blazer side.

Garrett had an opportunity to win with 2 seconds to go in the first overtime. But their chance faded when they could not hit from the free throw line.

Both teams were scoreless in the first overtime. Then the Blazers blew the game wide open in the second overtime as they scored 17 points to only 4 for Garrett.

Why We're In Money Trouble

A few issues ago a letter from the president of the Waterloo town board was published in these pages. It was noted in the letter that my comments concerning a block grant of $380,000 were in error; I had pro-rated the grant into $38,000 for each of 10 houses said to need upgrading.

My comments were in error in that respect because, as Waterloo town board president Vereda Albright pointed out, the grant was also for storm sewers, new curbs and sidewalks. The statement was made by Mrs. Albright: "These improvements are needed due to the fact that this area has 29.4% elderly and 26.5% families with small children."

I noticed at the time that, instead of giving numerical statistics, the above statement gave percentages.

Percentages are tricks. You can make a very strong case for just about anything you want to justify in these grant matters. I'm certain that if I contacted Waterloo town officials, I could get the numerical statistics. The point is, however, that percentages were used, and percentages can be misleading.

Don't get me wrong. I'm not saying Mrs. Albright is a crook. Grant applications may even ask for percentages. The point is, a lot of public officials are going after federal money and using percentages to justify their requests. But percentages can often have the effect of exaggerating a situation.

There is another point with which to take issue. Does the fact that an area has elderly residents automatically mean the area needs financial assistance? Are the "elderly" automatically considered to be "needy"? Does the fact that an area has a certain percentage of families with small children mean that area automatically needs financial assistance? Is a family with small children automatically considered to be "needy"?

It appears that the percentages of elderly and families with children are used to justify curbs, sidewalks, storm sewers and the like. But is the lack of a curb of itself an indication of need? Is the lack of a storm sewer of itself an indication of need?

The economic structure of our nation is threatened by inflation. The "cheap" dollars you and I are passing around today are getting cheaper by the month. A significant part of our inflationary spiral is due to the federal government spending money it doesn't have. And any individual, any community regardless of size, that asks for federal financial assistance for things which the individual or community ought to take care of on their own contributes to the spiraling inflation of these times. Too many communities have become beggars. Too many communities have abandoned reasonable approaches to local situations and have fallen victim to the excuse, "If we don't get it, somebody else will."

It's a shame to see more and more people ignore those moments when self discipline could turn things around. There is no "politics" involved in this—Democrats and Republicans alike, in positions of responsibility oftentimes, are accepting federal intervention in their private lives and in their communities, regardless of what they may say to the contrary.

The Waterloo town board president closed her recent letter with this statement:

"With the present rate of inflation I think it is the duty of elected officials to help the elderly or handicapped as much as is possible."

I disagree. The duty of elected officials is to to see that the public is allowed to function on its own to as great extent as possible. If we didn't take so much away from the elderly in taxes DURING THEIR PRODUCTIVE YEARS, they would be better able to provide for themselves. The shame of the last 48 years is that savings have been wiped out, accumulated wealth has been taken away from so many people in order to pay for the millions of government workers who do nothing but plan what other people should do, how other people should be taken care of, decide how much should be doled out to elderly citizens.

The vast majority of elderly citizens want to be treated AS CITIZENS, not as wards of the state. The vast majority of the handicapped want to be treated LIKE EVERYONE ELSE, not as burdens for whom everyone must make allowances in ALL circumstances.

Those who can't take care of themselves, who really do need assistance, should be cared for. But we have turned the entire matter of elderly and handicapped into a program in which EVERYONE, whether elderly or handicapped or not, tends to think they are entitled to special help just because they want something.

Inflation isn't going to stop until communities large and small say "thanks but no thanks" to the enticement of federal financial assistance programs. And at the same time the average American must say to elected officials, "I'm fed up with dishing out so much of my earned income to make jobs for those who make jobs for others who should be able to take care of themselves."

Any community in DeKalb County that seeks special federal funding for whatever project ought to feel guilty, because that kind of approach to solving problems is exactly why the federal government keeps the money-printing presses running and that means more inflation.

To close this "tirade," here is one that takes the cake in my book. Last week the town of Ashley which has received hundreds of thousands of dollars from the federal government for sewage treatment and for community improvement through block grants (which means an outright handout) and maybe for its water system, had a town board meeting. Included in the business meeting was a discussion about turning the water off for about 30 customers whose unpaid water bills amount to over $6,500.

Here we have a town asking for and getting your and my federal tax dollars for their benefit—and they aren't even seeing to it that their own citizens keep their bills paid!

Oh brother.

The Balanced Budget Scurry

One of the most disappointing characteristics of our state and federal legislative bodies is that it takes a disaster or a potential disaster to get them to do what should have been done in the first place.

Right now, members of Congress and some federal agency officials are falling over one another in the effort to be first in presenting a plan to establish a balanced budget.

No one—repeat, no one—Republican or Democrat, has been harping on the consequences of spending more than is taken in at the federal level. Yes, there have been warnings given by certain members of Congress. But no one has made an issue of deficit spending on a continuous day after day basis.

A proposed Constitutional amendment to require a balanced budget by limiting federal spending to a percentage of the gross national product is not the answer; it does not REDUCE government spending because the gross national product goes up every year.

It should not be necessary to go through the amendment process. After all, when our elected representatives take office, from the President of the United States on down to members of a town board, it is expected that they will use good judgment in money matters. Deficit spending is not an example of good judgment in money matters. Therefore, a large percentage of our elected officials have betrayed the general public.

Take note. Not one Presidential candidate has made deficit spending explicitly a part of his campaign. All of them talk about a balanced budget. But none gets down to plain everyday language—"we must reduce government spending by making an across-the-board reduction of 10% in the budget."

There is no painless solution to the problem. To continue as we are will hurt the average American. To take drastic action such as a 10% cut in the federal budget will hurt the average American. There is no easy way out.

It is disappointing and disgusting to witness members of Congress finally proposing what they knew should have been done all along. They instituted a spending binge and we the people have the hangover.

Lions Sponsor Information Meeting Monday On $1.1 Million Addition

The Saint Joe Lions Club is inviting public participation in a meeting to be held Monday, March 10, concerning the proposed $1.1 million building program at DeKalb Eastside Junior-Senior High School.

Charles Hampel, superintendent of the DeKalb eastern school district, has been invited by the Lions Club to attend the meeting to provide information about the building program and to answer questions from the public.

Additional classrooms would be built under the plan and enclosed halls constructed between the various buildings.

The present junior-senior high school facility was built on the "campus plan," that is, buildings are separate units, due to a saving of 10% in construction costs at that time. The need for as much money as possible for total construction led the school board at that time to accept the "campus plan." Architects noted at the time that operating costs would be higher, but the elimination of halls provided the additional 10% for classroom and other facilities.

In order to undertake the proposed program, a $720,000 bond issue is needed. Signatures of some 120 patrons have reportedly been obtained thus far although only 50 are needed. But school board attorney H. Charles Winans has stated he would like to have at least 200 names on the bonding petition.

The March 10 meeting at 7:30 p.m. will be held at the Spencerville Community Club. The public is invited to attend and express views or ask questions.

Northeastern Center, Inc.

Dear Mr. Haberkorn,

I am writing in response to your editorial entitled "N.E. Center Strongly Criticized." I think it is only fair and just that you receive my viewpoint as a staff member of the Northeastern Center, and I sincerely hope that you print the same in your newspaper for the benefit of your readers perusal.

I wish to acquaint persons to the fact that my professional practice is not originating from a "secular humanistic" type of philosophy as you mention in your article. I agree in our society today one encounters all kinds of extreme ways of thought however I know these are not prevalent at Northeastern Center as a philosophy. I wish it known to DeKalb County residents that I value a person morally and spiritually and that person is considered in all spheres of his being, ethically.

My philosophy is absolutely based on Judeo-Christian background. My complete formal education has taken place in Christian schools and to the best of my ability I have retained and practiced those beliefs in my professional and private life. The professional treatment of my clients has been, for 20 years of practice, based on a God oriented philosophy and I am proud of it! There are many staff members here who practice with due regard to their clients' moral health.

So it was with great soberness I read the phrase "counseling service at Northeastern Center has lost it's Judeo-Christian character". I wish DeKalb County to know that Christian commitment to a way of life has never been lost or dead at Northeastern Center. It is very much alive in the staff's hearts and practice.

Thank you for listening and I pray this letter reaches many people who will believe and take encouragement in my honest words.

Sincerely,

Joan Weber, M.A.

Fire Dept. News

Steve Monroe, Training Officer

Fire meetings—3rd Monday.

Rescue meetings—4th Monday.

When we take a close look at fires and their causes, we find a pattern of behavior that often results in disaster. Ignorance and apathy, or both, seem to be at the base of most fires. We also believe that most fires could be prevented if people involved had only known or cared about their personal fire problems.

The American home is a very dangerous place because we abuse it. The home is our own domain, often we abuse it due to our ignorance. But in the one place where we feel the most secure, in our own homes, is where we are the weakest.

The home is where we lose our people to fire. We lose them one or two at a time. Why? The large fires like South Gate and Coconut Grove receive a lot of attention in the news. But these are only a small percentage of our fire loss figures. Most fire deaths occur between the hours of midnight and 6:00 a.m. in the morning when people are asleep. We lose our people at night in their own homes, many of them never know they are in any danger until it is too late.

It is up to the individual to prevent fires, and teach that person how to protect himself, to teach him what a fire hazard is and how to correct it.

Even if the fire station was next door, the firefighter could not stop a fire if the person has failed to protect himself. Many firefighters feel that suppression is not enough. Suppression is after the fact, it's too late once the fire is started.

Codes are good at preventing fires from happening. But even good fire codes are not enough. No code can protect a person from himself. So what is the the answer to the fire problem? There is a simple answer—FIRE SAFETY—a combined effort, one that requires the full support of Codes,, Suppression and Fire Safety Education.

Any of these by themselves is ineffective. Fire Safety Education has long been overlooked in the Fire Service. Thankfully, the benefits of public fire safety education are beginning to be better understood by the Fire Service.

We have long been involved in Public Education during the annual Fire Prevention Week. But the other 51 weeks have been sadly neglected. Public Education on Fire Safety is a full-time job, one that requires dedication, skill and a lot of hard work.

By teaching the public fire safety we can cause a general awareness about fire safety, we can cause a general awareness about fire that can change the attitudes of the public about fire safety. Good public education along with fire codes and good fire suppression can and will save lives of the people in our communities.

Ask your local fire department as to what programs are offered in your community.

Value Of Saint Joe's Dog Control Shown Elsewhere

—By The Editor

Those who have served the town as dog warden through the years have gotten more than their share of "flack" from dog owners whose pets have been picked up and a fine must be paid before the pet is returned to the owner. Town board members also are on the receiving end of some of these complaints.

The value of the town's dog control efforts was made very clear recently by an incident at Huntertown. If you read the Sunday, March 9, 1980, Journal-Gazette, you saw a full-page headline:

"Huntertown looks for law, guns after dogs maul girl."

A six-year-old girl suffered bites on her head, neck and arms when she tried to get her dog from a group of dogs. The excitement arose in the dogs as one started barking, then another, and another. Even her own dog bit her.

The barking probably saved her life. Her brother heard the commotion and went to investigate. His report to the Fort Wayne newspaper was that her underwear was off, her coat pulled off, her boots pulled off—and when he rescued her using a board as a weapon, one dog was pulling at her leg and another pulling at her hair. In his opinion the dogs would have killed her.

Evidently Huntertown has a dog control ordinance but it is not being enforced, apparently.

The town board president is reported to have stated that the ordinance is unenforceable "without proper manpower, and the town has no money for that."

The situation points out the invaluable service given by those who have served Saint Joe as dog warden since a dog control ordinance was instituted several years ago. Dick Roberts, Ervin Fetters, Larry Mason, Betty Baker and, at the present time, Dennis Taylor served the town well in carrying out the program of keeping stray dogs off the streets of Saint Joe. The success would not be possible if it were not for the willingness to perform a public service by these people. You don't take the job for the pay. You take it because of concern for the community—that means not only people but pets. Stray and possibly diseased animals do not bite just humans; they bite other animals, too.

I won't challenge the town board president about not enough money to enforce their ordinance at Huntertown. But I do suggest that there must be SOMEONE in the community, who, with knowledge of the situation, would be willing to perform a public service and not expect a large income. Too often it is assumed that money is needed to solve these problems. Small towns are not overly endowed with funds. But there ARE some places where appropriated but unused funds can be transferred for a pressing need. Certainly packs of stray dogs come under the category of "pressing need."

As for building a pound—well, that is a debatable subject. How big a structure does Huntertown have in mind? It doesn't take deluxe facilities and accommodations. After all, we're not talking about a facility for boarding pets. We're talking about a facility to temporarily hold strays. Saint Joe's "pound" is an old one-car garage with wire-separated runs. The place looks like a shack at the present time, but it is in for some repairs and paint to reflect the recognition of the need for adequate facilities. Surely Huntertown residents could come up with something if they are asked. It is part of the old-fashioned idea of vounteer public service to help one's home community.

Huntertown residents are in a dilemma. County law allows them to shoot stray dogs—IF—they cannot determine the owner and cannot catch the dog. And if the owner knows who killed his dog, the shooter can be held responsible. And, the town board president was told by the humane society that if the board authorized shooting the animals, the society would take action to stop it.

Here is the strange situation wherein a public agency is more concerned about keeping stray dogs alive than with protecting human beings. I know the society will say "that's not true," — but that's the way it comes out. Look at DeKalb County. It now has a $100,000 shelter under construction on US6. $100,000 — just too keep stray dogs for the most part. And that $100,000 does not include the money needed for at least one full-time salary, plus part-time help, plus a vehicle, and so on.

Meanwhile, Saint Joe residents can thank their lucky stars that dog control has been effective in our town. It has not been perfect. But it has been effective because of the efforts of a handful of people through the years, serving as dog warden, and through the cooperation of dog owners who value the safety of human beings and their pets

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

You learn from reading other newspapers.

I discovered I have been spelling "diminutive" incorrectly in recent issues when referring to Rich Timmerman of the Eastside basketball team. I was spelling it "diminutive." The Auburn Evening Star's sports writer, Jim Klopfenstein, used the word in his writeup of the Blazer-Baron sectional game. I thought, "Ha — I've got 'em again" as I went to the dictionary to confirm the spelling. And — ha — it was me who was got.

Publication of this paper has been erratic (I looked that one up, too) in recent weeks. The two operations I had since September put me 'way 'way behind. And just about the time I think I can catch up, something comes up.

My attempts at catching up have included not publishing the last issue in December, not publishing the last issue in January—and doubling up a couple of times, such as this issue of "March 13&20."

And it doesn't help any with the poor quality of newsprint I obtained the last time. However the supplier says the next batch will be better—the batch I drove over to Aurora, Illinois, to get Wednesday of this week in an all-day trip.

The variation in quality was so bad that Effiebell McCann asked, "What's wrong with the paper? It feels so different." She noticed when she distributed mail in our post office boxes.

There have been a couple or so inquiries about some of the alleys in town; they're in terrible shape. The answer is: it is a waste of money to put stone on them while the ground is so soft and grading cannot be done. So, if you use an alley and it's deeply rutted and you almost get stuck, don't use it. Grading and stoning will be done as soon as weather permits.

They almost did it again.

"They" means the DeKalb Eastside Blazers and "it" means defeating a favored opponent.

After upsetting the Garrett Railroaders in the sectional, the Blazers came close to eliminating the DeKalb Central Barons. The Blazers had a perfect night at the free throw line sinking 20 out of 20 attempts while the Barons had 14 out of 26. The winning margin came from the field with the Barons getting 19 baskets to only 11 for the Blazers. And that field goal advantage was the big factor in the Central 52-42 win.

The game was closer than the final score indicates. The Blazers were behind by just one point during the final quarter. But six quick points by Central gave them a seven-point lead with less than three minutes to go. This forced the Eastside Blazers to foul in efforts to gain possession of the ball and the Barons' lead went to 12 points before the Blazers' final basket.

Central led 8-4 at the first quarter, it was tied at 18 at the half and the Barons had a 33-29 lead at the end of three periods.

The Blazers finished the season with an 8-13 won-lost record but it was generally agreed throughout the area that the Blazers were a much better team than the records seemed to indicate. Their strength and improvement was shown in the double-overtime win over Garrett in the sectional and the loss to DeKalb Central.

Coburn Corners Church History

A HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF CHRIST AT COBURN'S CORNERS

—by Walter H. Coburn
(written in 1937)

PART 12

(Note: at the conclusion of the minutes quoted at the end of the previous segment of this church history, the following names should have been included: "Alvenus Strong, Sec. pro tem; J. M. Milliman, regular secretary.")

The next year there is the first notice of the hiring of a janitor. Adrian Hart was so chosen. However, in previous financial reports there are mentions of payments made to Washington Hart which were probably for work as janitor.

During these years it is impossible to tell much about the financial matters of the church. It is known from the memory of many that for long years the pay for the ministry and the maintainance of the church were kept under separate funds so that the record of offerings and disbursements do not show this expenditure. In the earlier days this was very small as would be expected but the church has generally paid equally with those in similar circumstances. If there has been any difference it is favorable to the church here.

No record has been kept of the separate ministries. During the earlier years the ministers who came here were undergirded by the presence of James Hadsell or John F. Coburn or both. The latter was here during all the time until his death. When no one was serving the church Coburn was always present with his high type of preaching. Those who were called for regular work here are listed as follows by R. G. Coburn: Ronham, Banford, Dawson, Daniel, Faurot, Sutton, Leavitt, Bonnell, Sweetman, Teagarden, Oviatt, Jewell, T. A. Hedges, J. A. Thomas, Harris, L. W. Fairfield, J. O. Rose. Coburn's list ends here. The ministers since that time (1894) are listed from memory as follows: John Dunkleberger, — Myers, F. A. Thomas, J. A. Brown, A. M. Gillespie, L. W. Speyr, T. A. Manly, — Daily, J. N. Scholes, W. H. Coburn. In addition to these, J. O. Rose was called back for two ministries. During these later years the church has increasingly appreciated the presence of J. N. Scholes.

On account of the meager records for the years 1890 to 1915, it is impossible for us to give a complete record of the leadership. The earlier groups are listed according to the records of their appointment to the office.

Benjamin Alton Sr. (1837); James Hadsell (1838); John H. Coburn (1845); Lemuel Flint (1852); Geo. W. Wilmot (1856); W. H. Milliman (1859); Samuel Headley (1848); John F. Coburn (1865); Russel G. Coburn (1856); Lorenzo Dawson (1847); Byron A. Hadsell (1871), the son of James Hadsell; Asher W. Coburn (1862), the son of John F. Coburn; Benjamin Alton Jr. (1862), the son of Benjamin Alton; James F. Milliman (1873); Asa Hall (1873); John Murphy (1873); William Coburn (1879); J. N. Scholes (1889); M. J. Hadsell (1889). These are all that are listed previous to 1890. In the quarter century intervening between the two records others are known to have served. We try to list them but cannot give dates. M. J. Hadsell and I. S. Hadsell both sons of Byron A., H. A. Coburn, Calvin Coburn.

Town Board Responsibility And Liability Stops At Town Limits

—from Ted Haberkorn, Town Board President

There seems to be some misunderstanding among certain members of the fire department about the money the town turns over to the department each year for its treasury (in addition to the other disbursements made by the town for equipment and repair services).

I was told that following the March town board meeting, Don Moore was commenting pointedly at Chaney's Restaurant at Spencerville the very next morning about the matter of firemen's "pay" as discussed at the town board meeting the night before.

Since Don was not at the board meeting, he obviously received information second-hand. This is unfortunate because it leads to misunderstanding—and to public statements about the town board and the town board president in particular, statements which are misleading.

Since other people obviously heard the criticism, I'm taking this way to "tell it like it is."

In the first place, the town does not pay the members of the fire department. For years and years, the town budget has had an item called "compensation of firemen," an amount turned over to the department in a lump sum. Volunteer firemen in the Saint Joe Volunteer Fire Department never have considered that money as theirs on a "per capita" basis; it has always been "for the department"—that is until the last couple of years or so when younger members were not made fully aware of how things are done.

I don't care what a state auditor has said about the $500 turned over to the department for 1979. We don't pay our firemen; we never have. And if the state is going to say, "You MUST pay your firemen," then the state is sticking its nose in local community matters where it doesn't belong—and helping to destroy the traditional meaning of "volunteer" fire protection.

If a group of men and women in a community say, "We want to help with fire protection as a public service and not for any pay," don't they have the right to do so?

"Times have changed," someone will say. Yes, they have. We have more equipment, more money spent for fire protection than ever before — and it still isn't enough.

Isn't it strange? We didn't have this constant agitation back when we had the old '57 Chevie fire truck squeezed into the ground floor of the old town hall. And we had a good fire department. It seems that the more we get, the more we want.

In the present situation, it seems that some firemen take the position that they "gave up" their pay, $25 a man as it is looked upon to make the $500 total placed in the department's treasury. But they didn't give up anything; that $500 was a lump sum paid in the same manner as a lump sum has been paid by the town for years and years and years. And until recent times, members of our fire department never looked upon those funds as their personal "pay."

Comments at the March board meeting about the miles driven to training sessions and the purchase of blue lights out of pocket have no bearing in the matter. It has always been that way.

BUT — if there are those who are going to insist that the $500 for last year WAS for $25 per fireman for 20 firemen, then the money was misused because town funds are paid ONLY for town fire obligations. The 20 members include those residing outside the town. And they are township responsibility. For years and years and years the town has paid for what it needs for the fire department and the township has paid for what it needs. When both share a need, both pay half.

The town board has been approached by the fire department at each of the three meetings thus far this year, for purchase of equipment. The board has authorized but one item, the purchase of two coats. The other requests involving a sigficant amount of money have been tabled—$1,900 to $2,200 for three walkie-talkies, scanners to replace the telephone system and eventually pagers for individual firemen, a fourth stall for motorized equipment with the stall to be taken out of the enclosed building shell intended to be a town hall and public meeting place.

However, the department has made no such requests to the township trustee even though these requests involve either a joint town-township responsibility or a township-only responsibility.

What must be remembered is this: the fire department exists because of the town, not the town because of the fire department.

And—the town board's responsibility for the use of tax funds turned over to the fire department does not end when those funds are transferred. It is still the board's business to see that those funds are used ONLY for town fire protection. The fact that the township trustee is "scraping the bottom of the barrel" as he put it regarding availability of township funds for fire protection DOES NOT automatically transfer the financial responsibility to the town. The town board is prohibited from using funds for any purpose other than that related to the town's inhabitants. The township has paid a $4,000 repair bill for its pumper and another $200 for repairs to the township tanker just recently. But the tanker was already considered to be virtually useless when the repairs were made, and the fire department spent $900 of "its" money to buy a used truck to be made into a tanker.

The town board does not advocate total separation of town and township in fire matters. What it must insist on is more careful use of funds put in the fire department treasury to prevent "mixing" of town funds with township funds and a resulting misuse of those funds.

The town board is interested in the functioning of the fire department—it MUST be interested—because the board is responsible for what goes on within the department. The department is not a corporate organization; it has no legal status, except that in case of fire or other emergency, the fire chief becomes the "commanding officer" in carrying out fire fighting efforts, traffic control and so on.

But if the fire department or a fireman is negligent to the point that a property owner sues for damages, it is the TOWN which bears the liability, not the fire department.

(At Spencerville the situation is somewhat different. Spencerville is not an incorporated town, it has no town board; it is part of the township. And the fire department there is incorporated and operates as a separate and distinct organization.)

There undoubtedly will be some firemen unhappy with what I have just said. But the matter needs to be aired because there are young men in the department who are getting the wrong impression of how things should be provided in our small-community fire department for its dedicated volunteers.

With members of St. Peter and St. Mark congregations attending, Rev. George Wirsing was officially installed as pastor of the parish. He began serving the parish in January.

EMT's Sought

Ken Carnahan, public relations director of the DeKalb County EMS, says there will be a training class this spring for those interested in becoming an Emergency Medical Technician (EMT). The course will be taught by DeKalb EMS and will be held at DeKalb Memorial Hospital. Interviews of class applicants will be held in April.

Those interested should stop at the EMS office at the hospital to fill out an application.

The exact dates and times of the class will be announced later.

For more information contact the EMS office.

Foster Homes Needed

Wayne Hapner, director of Foster Care Services, Inc., of Northeast Indiana, has announced that the DeKalb County Department of Public Welfare is interested in locating families who would like to assist a child or young person temporarily. This period might be from several months to one year. The need is for foster homes for all ages of children, but the most pressing need is for homes willing to assist teenagers.

When fostering a child, foster parents and the Department of Public Welfare share responsibilities. The department will assume responsibility for medical and dental expenses and provide the foster parent with some financial assistance toward the cost of room and board.

The department also provides Foster Parent Education Courses and caseworker services. The foster family provides for the day to day needs of the child by encouraging positive growth and development physically, mentally, emotionally, socially and spiritually.

Clubs and organizations are invited to request a speaker and film to further the understanding of foster care in the community. Interested individuals are encouraged to call or write the DeKalb County Department of Public Welfare for an information packet. The telephone number is 925—2310.

"OF ALL THE SHEETS"

Of all the sheets from East to West
The local paper is the best.
Deep is our love and deep our debt
To Record, Sentinel and Gazette.
When first I landed on this ball,
A bit of flesh wrapped 'round a squall
It welcomed me with joy and pride
My life has never justified.
It follows me my whole life through,
With words all kind and mostly true;
And even after I am hearsed
'Twill tell my best and hide my worst.

Letter to the Editor

Indiana will have the highest gasoline tax in the nation when Governor Bowen signs the new tax levy passed by the Indiana Legisuature.

Governor Bowen was the prime mover behind Indiana's new 8% ad valorem tax on retail gasoline (ex other taxes). The new tax will be effective on July 1. This is a great last hurrah, for a lame duck governor.

The tax will replace the present 8 cents a gallon levy and in 1980 should generate about 52 million. The cap on the levy for the rest of 1980 is $1.50 gal, which would amount to a 12 cents a gallon tax. In 1981, the cap is $1.75. After that the cap is $2.00.

When gasoline reaches the $2 mark, Indiana will own a total of 22 cents per gallon in taxes. That includes 4 cents federal, a 4% state sales tax and the 8% levy.

The state is also increasing the registration fee for trucks from $5.00 to $30.00, taking a surcharge on automobile excise tax and giving permission to counties to enact similar measures.

Politicians talk about our runaway inflation, they create it.

The automobile was introduced in Indiana around 1903. It took the previous legislatures 77 years to get our state gasoline tax to 8 cents per gallon. Our present general assembly has doubled the tax in the next two years.

People in Indiana were financially raped by the present general assembly. The only penalty for financial rape in Indiana is to turn out of office the politicians who voted for this tax increase. For your information not one democrat voted for this increase.

Sincerely yours,
B. L. Albright

An appropriation in the amount of $720,000.00 on account of the remodeling of and improvements to the Eastside Junior-Senior school buildings in said school corporation, including the incidental expenses necessary to be incurred in connection with said building project and the issuance of bonds on account thereof. The funds to meet such additional appropriations are to be provided by the issuance and sale of bonds by the school corporation.

Our Job.

The Indiana & Michigan Electric Company's philosophy of service was first formally stated in 1934. This understanding of our job has not changed through the intervening years. It is still our pledge to the public and the creed of every employee.

"Our job is generating electricity and getting it to where it's used. We're in this business because it is concerned with the supply of a fundamental requirement of modern living, because it's an honorable one, because we like it, and because we want to earn a living at it.

"We aim to give one kind of service to everyone...the best that's possible. That means supplying our customers with what they want when they want it. It means being courteous at all times and maintaining attractive, easy-to-do-business-with offices.

"It means doing everything we can to keep complaints from arising, and it means prompt and fair handling of those that do.

"We are a citizen of each community we serve and take an active part in its affairs. Like any other citizen, we want our neighbors to think well of us. Besides, it makes good business sense. We prosper only as the community prospers; so we help it thrive in every way we can.

"Such is our job as we see it. We are trying to do it well and to do it better all the time."

We give it our best.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

The Cloyd Andersons stopped in this week to put a card of thanks in the paper for the efforts of our firemen. They said the firemen did a great job and had nothing but praise for the department.

We've had good fire protection in Saint Joe and Concord Township for as long as I can remember—and we've been here now 32 years.

The obituary for Audrey Wade in this issue is more complete than the last-minute writeup in the previous issue. It also corrects a couple of errors.

The obituary of Dick Shook is a combination of information from the McMillan-Small Funeral Home in Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, and from Dick himself.

It was rather weird to open the envelope, read the handwritten self-obituary with the blank space for date of death filled in by someone else, the yellow legal-size sheet having a note at the top: "Please mail to The Saint Joe News."

At first I was somewhat confused; how often do you get a note from a dead man, a note written 18 months earlier about his own death?

At the bottom of the page was this note:

"Thanks Ted. I guess I failed in converting you to the DemocratIC party and, obviously, you're too late to convince me of the worth of REpublicanism. Best regards. Dick. 9—20—78."

When Dick visited on his trips "back home," he always took delight in needling me about my politics. We'd go back and forth and, as he noted at the end of his obituary, neither one of us won. But I do recall that the last time we had a political discussion, we agreed on two or three points as to their importance as "what's wrong with the country." It indicated to me how a lot of our "separation" from one another within our country is often due not to fact but to the "labels" we put on one another.

I said it was weird, receiving a handwritten obituary from the man who died. What is more weird is that, within a week before receiving the obituary, something prompted me to think about Dick—I don't remember what it was—but I do remember that it had to do with death. No, I didn't have a vision, but I definitely did have a thought about Dick and death just a matter of days before I received his obituary.

Richard Shook

Richard L. Shook, 66, a native of Spencerville, died Sunday, March 23, in Grand Strand General Hospital after a long illness.

Mr. Shook was the youngest son of the late Dr. Benjamin O. Shook and Winifred (Murray) Shook. He was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1935 and from its law school in 1938. He practiced with a law firm in Cincinnati for about five years and then moved to Washington, D.C. He worked for the U.S. Tax Court and the Chief Counsel's Office of the Internal Revenue Service until 1948 when he went into private practice in Washington. He had several clients in this area and frequently stopped by the News Office for a chat. He retired to Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, in 1977.

Survivors include his wife, Ruth Doench Shook; a daughter, Leslie Ann Dalton, of Moline, Illinois; two sons, Langley R. and Wilson M. of Washington, D.C.; a brother, Henry M. of Auburn; and four grandchildren. Another brother, Dr. Hubert H., preceded him in death.

At Mr. Shook's request, no final rites of any kind were held and there was no burial.

EMT's Sought

Ken Carnahan, public relations director of the DeKalb County EMS, says there will be a training class this spring for those interested in becoming an Emergency Medical Technician (EMT). The course will be taught by DeKalb EMS and will be held at DeKalb Memorial Hospital. Interviews of class applicants will be held in April.

Those interested should stop at the EMS office at the hospital to fill out an application.

The exact dates and times of the class will be announced later.

For more information contact the EMS office.

Riv'dale Students Win DAR Contest

Melissa Casebere, daughter of MM Curtis Casebere of Butler and a student at Riverdale Elementary School, was first place winner in the John Houlton DAR chapter's contest on "Accent On Action." Her poster was drawn on the idea of "what can I do now to be a better citizen in the future."

Melissa's teacher is Carol Busse.

Second place in the county went to Shelly Baker, daughter of MM Wayne Baker of Spencerville. She is also a student at Riverdale and her teacher is Betty Wagner.

Third place was won by Beth Washler, a Riverdale student taught by Donna Clark.

Keith Bechtel, an Auburn Eastside student, received an honorable mention as did Rocky Baker of Auburn Eastside.

The DAR March meeting opened with the regular ritual by Mrs. Ernest Harter. Mrs. Roy Baker read the President General's message. Mrs. Harter spoke briefly on women's roles in the armed services from an article by Phyllis Schafly, National Chairman, National Defense Committee, NSDAR. The DAR is definitely against the registering of women or having women in combat. The organization does not oppose women volunteering for military service for non-combat service. Israel and Russia have experimented with women in combat and have abandoned the practice.

Mrs. Yoder had the program on the "Role of the Church In Establishing America."

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

Now that our legislative session is over, I'd like to take this opportunity to thank the many residents of our Senate District who have offered their help to me as their State Senator during the last few months.

This help has come in many ways: groups of neighbors willing to spend an evening to discuss local problems, individuals willing to spend time on the phone offering their opinions, local residents taking the time to write or call with their suggestions and ideas on state legislation and on improving services.

I've received hundreds of phone calls and letters in the last few months, plus innumerable personal visits. People have offered their suggestions, ideas, support, and criticism—all of it necessary for me to do my job as State Senator representing our community.

Please do not hesitate to contact me if you have any questions or concerns in the area of state government during the interim. My address is 9735 Gerig Road, Box 303 A, Grabill, Indiana 46741. I can also be reached at 422—4736 or 627—3351.

Sincerely,
Richard Worman

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the Saint Joe-Concord Township Volunteer Fire Department for its prompt and efficient work in putting out our recent fire.

Coburn Corners Church History

A HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF CHRIST AT COBURN'S CORNERS

—by Walter H. Coburn
(written in 1937)

PART 13

When the new records are given the following were selected for the year 1915. Probably all of them served previously: Clyde Hart, Reed Place, Weslet Hart, Saxe Hadsell, granson of James. Since that time the following have been so honored: Floyd Coburn (1919), grandson of John F.; Claude Laub (1922); Abner Trostel (1922); William Maxwell (1925) he is known to have served earlier but at his own request was relieved of the office; Louis Washler (1931); Bennet Lay (1933); Marvin Poper (1933).

During the history of this congregation three names have been used to designate the office. First, the title was Bishop. Sometime near the year of 1850 the title used is Overseer which is a literal translation. In 1874 the record uses the modern term of Elder. It is not to be thought that the change was in any way official. Indeed these terms are all today understood to be proper but it is altogether a question of usage. This is probably a reflection of a general shift in usage. While in general, the office is given to older men some quite young men have filled it, notably James Hadsel.. The office is not so much one of authority among us as it is one of responsibility and trust. In later years at any rate the minister is considered to be an elder in the local church.

In the first few records of the church there is no mention of deacons. Deacons were selected, for this custom was universal in the church from the first. Generally there were but two appointed at a time. The first appointment noted is James Hadsell (1846), thus we see that the office of Elder at this time was not considered a lifetime office; Asher W. Coburn (1848); Ezra Dickenson (1848); Samuel Flint (1856); John F. Coburn (1856); Geo. W. Wilmot (1861); Chas. Coburn (1861); Byron A. Hadsell (1862); Cyrus Alton (1863); J. B. Milliman (1864); William Coburn (1864); Nelson Scholes (1865); Asa Hall (1869); Harmon Gee (1871); R. G. Coburn (1871); Washington Hart (1873); John Scholes (1874); David Andrews (1874); Camillus Hadsell (1877); Ella Wilmot (1877); B. F. Hoyt (1879); W. P. Coburn (1889) a son of John F.; Joseph Shull (1889); Charles Tustison (1889); J. E. Dermott (1890). This brings us to the end of the old record.

At the beginning of the new record the following were serving: Ora Quance; H. A. Coburn; Earl Tustison; Fred Hart. Since that time there is listed William Lenher (1916); Hiram Todd (1916); Merritt Maxwell (1916); Claude Laub (1919); W. F. Maxwell (1919); Meade Baker (1921); Alva Perry (1931); Abner Trostel (1922); Louis Washler (1922); Elmer Volkert (1924); Roy Maxwell (1924); Karl Hart (1926); Glen Hart (1927); Merwin Place (1928); Estel Coburn (1930); Roy Mann (1933); Elwood Hart (1933); George Milliman (1935); Kenneth Coburn (1937), a grandson of John F.

At least two of these have served for notably long periods. Washington Hart was elected in 1873 and served until his death in 1911. W. P. Coburn was elected in 1889 and served for a period of forty years excepting one year when with two small children in the home he felt he should be relieved of these duties. At the close of his active service he was made Deacon Emeritus for life.

The present membership of the board is as follows: Elders —J. N. Scholes, Marvin Poper, Claud Laub, Louis Washler, Floyd Coburn, Clyde Hart. The deacons are Fred Hart, Alva Perry, Claude Mason, Kart Hart, Elwood Hart, Merwin Place, Roy Maxwell, Kenneth Coburn.

Audrey Wade

Funeral services were held March 23 in the Spencerville United Methodist Church for Audrey E. Wade, 96, who died March 19 at DeKalb Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. Wade was the daughter of Daniel and Sarah (Boots) Butler and was born in Spencer Township October 3, 1883. She married Lloyd Wade December 31, 1906. He died in 1937.

Survivors include two daughters, Mrs. Janice Bowser of Spencerville and Mary Hellen Wade of Memphis, Tennessee. Another daughter, Mrs. Edith McGrath, preceded her in death. There are six grandchildren and twelve great grandchildren.

A memorial service was held by the Spencerville Order of the Eastern Star Saturday at Baidinger and Walter Funeral Home.

Marijuana Destroying 'Temples'

The results of a study, just released this week, indicate that marijuana smoking by young people is reaching down into the teenage group to a greater degree than before; that marijuana is now more potent than in the past; that the use of marijuana causes birth defects; and that one "joint" is as harmful as something like 16 cigarettes as far as our "breathing mechanism" is concerned.

Why are increasing numbers of young people AND adults smoking marijuana, or sniffing cocaine, or going into mind-altering "hard" drugs?

There would appear to be but one answer: we're getting farther and farther away from the Bible.

There is a portion of Scripture in which the human body is described as a "temple" of God. A temple is used for worship. The idea is that we are to use—not abuse, but use—our bodies with the same kind of care and respect as we use a "temple" (church, cathedral, synagogue).

Whenever we stray from the basic Biblical teachings as embodied in the Ten Commandments, we get into trouble. A good many generations have tried to disprove Biblical truth but all have met with failure.

Today, the overabundance of material wealth and possessions would appear to be the reason why people are experimenting with their minds and bodies through the use of drugs. It is written time after time in the pages of history that, once an affluent society is established, its people begin to self-destruct. Affluency brings boredom to those who have no higher purpose than self-gratification. Unless one keeps in mind that all creation is at our disposal to be used properly, the attitude grows that all creation has been put in our hands to be used—not used properly—but just used.

Marijuana can be used properly; medical science is finding useful purposes for it. But marijuana is not to be used as one sees fit, by their own judgment. Cocaine has a useful purpose—opium has a useful purpose—all drugs have useful purposes or they wouldn't exist. When God made all creation, He saw that it was good. This means everything has a useful purpose somewhere, somehow. But every human being does not have the intelligence to know how to use all parts of creation properly. We depend on one another, then, each according to his ability, to determine what we shall or shall not use.

Despite the efforts of some who promote the idea that everyone has a right to do what they want—smoke marijuana, for instance—, the scoreboard continues to show no hits, no runs but a lot of errors on the part of marijuana users. The dangers of marijuana are real, not imagined. The dangers of experimentation are real, not imagined. Those who think they can "handle it" are only kidding themselves. Unfortunately, the opportunities for self-experimentation are many because of our affluent society of today.

It is disappointing to realize that, with so many resources and so many opportunities to better oneself, the inclination of mankind is to self-indulgence and general abuse of life in total.

Too many of our temples have become dens of thieves—stealing the fullness of a useful and productive life for a few moments of short-lived self-indulgent pleasure.

Our country is going to pot in the use of marijuana.

Half An Education

Awareness of what is going on in the world is one of the pointed goals of modern education. Help comes from such sources as newspapers. For instance, the Fort Wayne Newspapers organization puts on a seminar for teachers on the use of newspapers in the schools for educational purposes. One of the Fort Wayne dailies has what it calls a "Mini-Page," a small section devoted to the interests of the younger students.

However, the last two issues of the "Mini-Page" raise some questions as to whether the greatest good is being derived from its contents.

Two weeks ago the front page of the "Mini-Page" had a headline and story about the census. Even more space was used in the other pages for information about the census. A list of the "benefits" from a census was presented and it was stated that information given to the census bureau remains strictly confidential.

I think there is as much "indoctrination" as there is "information" in the manner in which our young people are approached. A truly educational purpose would be served if, in addition to the supposed benefits, acknowledgment was made of the feeling in the minds of many Americans that the census is getting too "nosey," the government is reaching further and further into private lives with the ever-increasing numbers of questions.

If young people are to be better educated in the ways of self-government (and isn't that what we are talking about when we use the term "good citizenship," learning how to make decisions???), then they should have BOTH sides of a subject brought to their attention.

In this case, after presenting the information as it was presented, a brief paragraph could have pointed out that there are American citizens who object to the census as it has now developed and the reasons for these objections—and end the entire presentation with the question: "What do YOU think?"

Another "Mini-Page" last week had the headline, something like: "It's Income Tax Time Again."

A page devoted to the interests of elementary school students??—and we hit them with a big article about income taxes??

Somehow I just don't see the educational necessity of confronting elementary students with such a thing as the federal income tax—unless you are going to give both sides. Both sides were not given.

Once again, after describing the benefits from the federal income tax, there could have been a portion devoted to the fears in the minds of some Americans about the confiscatory and inflationary levels the entire tax structure has become. There could have been a graph to show how the federal income tax has grown since it began—and the fact that this year the average American will be working from January 1 to May 11 JUST TO PAY FEDERAL, STATE AND LOCAL TAXES.

Wouldn't there have been a more educational result if this subject presentation, too, were ended with the question:

"What do YOU think?"

The American public does not realize how much it is being indoctrinated into accepting government involvement in many areas of private life. The American public are being fed a constant barrage of propaganda from government agencies.

It is frightening to realize that thousands of young people in the tri-state area are being only "half educated" by the "Mini-Page" and that half promotes an acceptance of government control of private lives.

What do YOU think?

No Friday Mail-Or Thursday-Or---??

By hook or by crook the U.S. Post Office Department is going to have its way it seems about eliminating Saturday deliveries.

A year or so ago the idea was suggested by the postmaster-general. But the matter was then left alone because business didn't like the idea, the public didn't like the idea and Congress didn't like the idea.

Now the matter is back in the news, this time as a supposed way to fight inflation.

Somehow, I just don't get the drift of some of these "anti-inflation" proposals. The President says (as does Indiana Senator Birch Bayh) that the biggest cause of inflation is our dependence on foreign oil imports. Gasoline is the culprit, according to the President—or rather, the American public is the culprit because of its excessive demand for gasoline.

But Japan imports ALL of its oil products and its inflation rate is one-half that of the United States.

"Imported oil" is getting the blame for our financial troubles by those who shy away from the fact that the excessive demand has come from our government—demand for more money. And this has led the average worker to demand more—more money and more material wealth.

Eliminating Saturday delivery of mail isn't going to reduce the rate of inflation. With the built-in cost of living pay increases, eliminating Saturday delivery will be only a temporary treatment of a symptom. In a few years the costs of operating the post office department will be higher once again. Then what will we do: eliminate Friday mail deliveries???

APARTMENT FIRE SAFETY

Many of the same fire prevention steps apply to apartments as to private homes. Escape from an apartment fire, however, can be more complicated and dangerous.

It's vital that you be able to find your way to the nearest exit, even in total darkness, should the electricity be shut off. Before opening an apartment door to the hallway, place your hand on it. If it's not hot, open the door slowly with your weight against it to prevent a sudden rush of hot air and smoke, then get down on the floor and crawl to the nearest stairwell.

NEVER USE AN ELEVATOR. The elevator may automatically take you right to the fire—where the door may open and refuse to shut.

Try to alert others as you move down the hallway by pounding on doors and yelling.

If your apartment door is hot, don't open it. The corridor probably is already filled with too much hot air, gas and smoke to permit you to leave through the hallway.

Instead, try to stuff wet towels or a wet blanket in the cracks around the door to stop smoke from leaking in. Then open the window.

If there's a fire escape, use it. Don't jump unless you're on the first floor. You'll probably be injured jumping from the second or third floors. Jumping from the fourth floor or higher will likely end in death.

If you can't get out, wait for help. Open the top and bottom portions of the window a few inches to let fresh air in at the bottom and smoke out at the top. Hang a white sheet out the window so the fire department will know someone is in the apartment.

If smoke is entering the apartment and you can't open a window, use a piece of furniture or heavy object to smash the window.

Fires in high-rise apartments present special problems. The buildings often have windows that do not open and cannot be easily broken.

If the fire starts in another part of the building, it is probably safest to stay in your apartment and take necessary precautions until the fire department arrives and has the fire under control, or supervises evacuation.

If the fire is in your own apartment, leave quickly and close the door behind you so the fire does not spread. And notify the fire department immediately, giving them your name, address and apartment number, and what is on fire.

But do not call from your own apartment if it is on fire!

The professional role of the pharmacist is that of being a competent, reliable, confidential source of family health information. He knows his patrons and their medical and prescription histories. He can tell them how to use household health items and can provide useful information on the danger of various chronic diseases.

When his patrons voluntarily describe their ailments, the pharmacist is often in a position to advise them as to why it is imperative that they promptly consult their personal physician or dentist.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS OF ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATIONS

Notice is hereby given to the taxpayers of the school corporation known as DeKalb County Eastern Community School District that the Board of Trustees of said school corporation will meet at the usual meeting place of said Board in the Superintendent's Office, 300 E. Washington Street, in the City of Butler, at the hour of 8:00 P.M. local time on April 7, 1980, to consider the following additional appropriation which said Board considers necessary to meet the extraordinary emergency existing at this time:

An appropriation in the amount of $720,000.00 on account of the remodeling of and improvements to the Eastside Junior-Senior school buildings in said school corporation, including the incidental expenses necessary to be incurred in connection with said building project and the issuance of bonds on account thereof. The funds to meet such additional appropriations are to be provided by the issuance and sale of bonds by the school corporation.

The foregoing appropriation is in addition to all appropriations provided for in the existing budget and tax levy, and an extraordinary emergency for such appropriation exists by reason of the inadequacy of the present buildings to provide necessary school facilities in the school corporation.

Taxpayers of said school corporation appearing at such meeting shall have the right to be heard in respect to said additional appropriation. The additional appropriation, if finally made, will be automatically referred to the State Board of Tax Commissioners, which Board will hold a further hearing within fifteen days at the office of the Auditor of DeKalb County, or at such other place as may be designated. At such further hearing taxpayers objecting to said additional appropriation may be heard, and interested taxpayers may inquire of the County Auditor when and where such further hearing will be held.

Dated this 20 day of March, 1980.

'Roundup Coming

Registration day for the Kindergarten Roundup at Riverdale Elementary School is Tuesday, April 29, according to Rex, Tullis, principal at the school.

To be eligible for kindergarten, children must be five years of age on or before September 1, 1980. Verification of age is to be made by birth certificate presented at the registration.

During registration parents will receive health forms to be completed by the family physician and dentist and returned by the time the child enters school in the fall.

Indiana law requires that all children entering school be immunized against diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus, measles, rubella (German measles), and poliomyelitis. No child will be permitted to attend school for more than 30 days beyond the date of enrollment unless fully immunized or in the process of immunization. In the latter case a schedule must be obtained from the doctor indicating immunization completion dates. In addition the child must have proof of a tuberculosis skin test.

Mrs. Della Farrer, kindergarten teacher, Mrs. Alice Cole, school nurse, Rex McFarren, school social worker, Mrs. Loretta Musser, school secretary, and Mr. Tullis will be present at the roundup to answer questions.

This is an important meeting for parents. There will be a sound filmstrip suggesting practical things parents can do to help their children. A brief description of the kindergarten program will be given and health information presented.

The April 29 meeting starts at 3:00 p.m. in the cafetorium.

Deaf Man Designs Tiny Hearing Aid

Offers free model

A remarkable tiny hearing aid has been perfected by a man who has been hard of hearing for nearly ten years.

This small device has no dangling cords or separate transmitting units and is worn completely in your ear.

It was developed especially for those persons who can hear but can't understand. This hearing instrument provides "ear-level" hearing with the wearer picking up speech, sounds, television and radio at his ear. Due to the use of transistors, the user cost is extremely low.

A true life actual size replica of the smallest all-in-the-ear hearing aid ever made will be given absolutely free to anyone sending in this advertisement while supply lasts. So we suggest you write for yours now. No obligation whatsoever. Write Hear, Box 390, Garrett, [illegible] 46738. (Adv.)

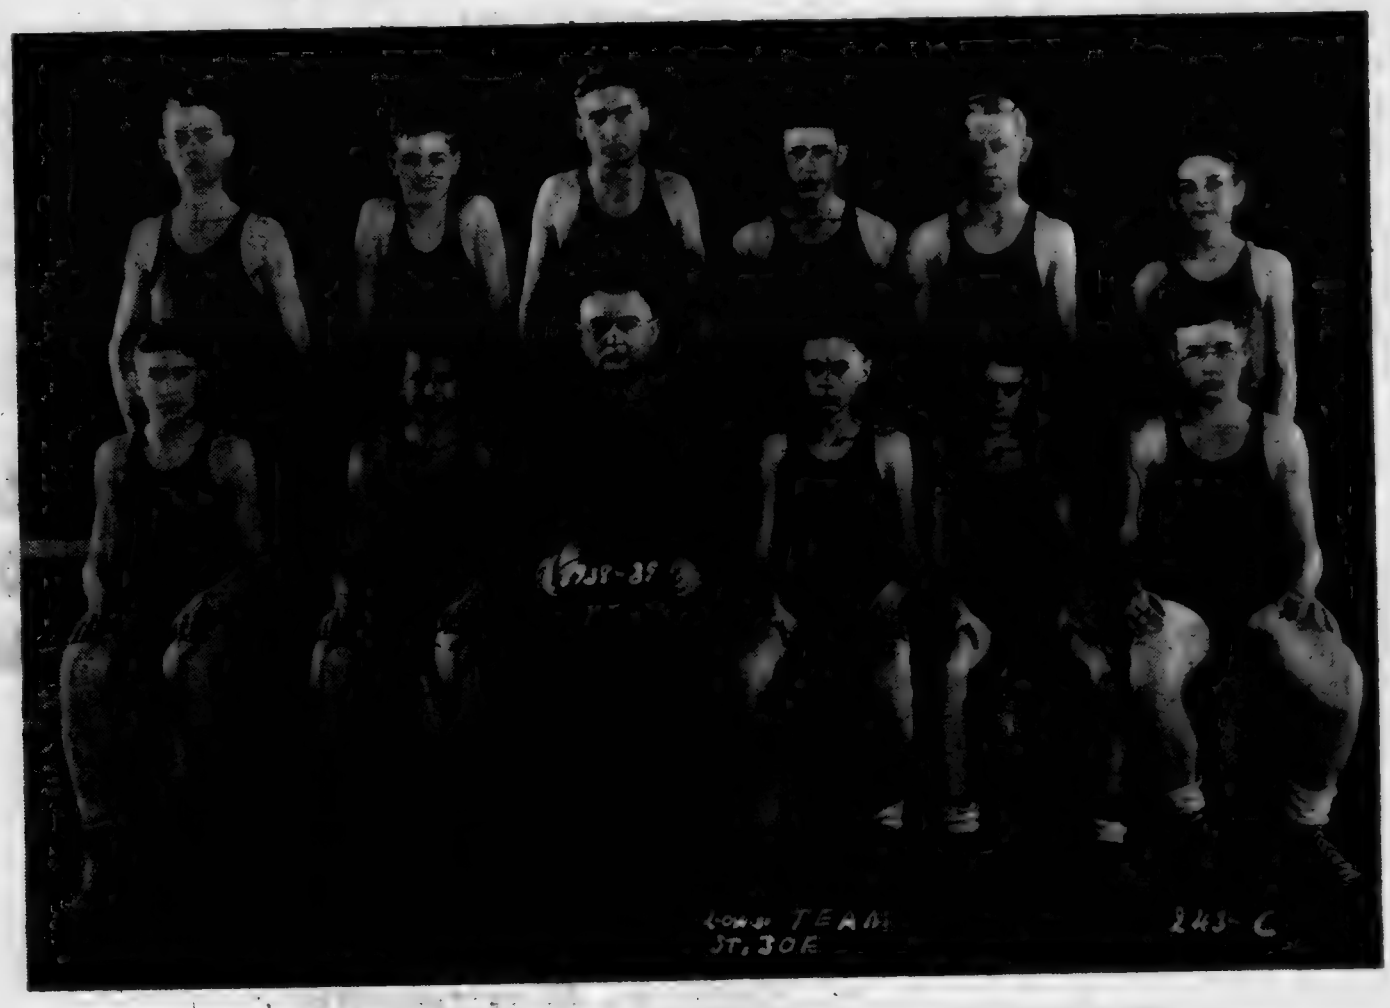
Familar Faces In Basketball Photos From The '30s



Harold Yeiser came up with a couple of old photos going back to the days of St. Joe High School basketball.

In the above photo of the second team for the 1938-39 season are the following:

And here is the St. Joe High School varsity of 1936-37:

The News welcomes old photos of local interest for publication for benefit of its readers. Some photos cannot be reproduced due to extreme fading or lack of contrast. However a significant number of old photos which seem at first to be unsuitable for reproduction turn out surprisingly good due in great part to the efforts of The News' engraver up in Owosso, Michigan.

'ABSCAM' To Be Forgiven??

National attention is drawn at the present moment to the increasing prime interest rate. It serves to emphasize public concern about rising inflation.

It seems that public attention is almost "programmed" to be directed toward one subject, even though other subjects are reported in the news.

But public attention has not been "programmed" on any subject as it was for Watergate. That scandal led to the resignation of a president. The question lingers: why have other equally scandalous matters been dropped before some sort of resolution has occurred?

What do people remember more vividly (including the younger generation with its "education")—the association of President Herbert Hoover and the depression of the 1930's or the association of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and the imprisonment of Japanese during World War II just because they were Japanese? (He is thought of by many as "the great humanitarian.")

What do people remember more vividly: the pardon of Mr. Nixon by President Gerald Ford or the resignation of President Jimmy Carter's staff medical advisor because of the latter's use of drugs and presence at social gatherings where drugs were openly used?

What do people remember from more recent events: the eight members of Congress from one particular political party who are allegedly involved in bribery schemes or the one member from the other political party caught in the same bribery affair but who said he was conducting his own investigation of corruption with the receipt of a bribe as part of his investigation? (He was the only one whose name made the headlines; his story was described even by some members of his own party as "incredible" and "unbelievable.")

In this last instance, an interesting turnabout was evident in the column written by Jack Anderson who seems to have sources of information in every department and at every level of government and business.

On March 11, 1980, Mr. Anderson's column contained comments about the FBI's "Abscam" investigation (the bribery scheme involving the above congressmen and FBI agents disguised as Arab oil moguls). Though noting that the investigation has slowed down because the investigation led "too close to home, implicating members of President Carter's personal and political family," Mr. Anderson also noted that Rep. Richard Kelly asked "does it show?" when he pocketed a $25,000 payoff as the FBI secretly filmed the scene. Two other congressmen are referred to by name as they received payoffs, but Kelly is the only one whose name appeared in the headlines for a period of time. He happens to be a member of the minority party in Congress; the others are members of the majority, as were four or five others implicated in the matter.

Then, in a column of March 31, 1980, Mr. Anderson comes up with information about Congressman Kelly's story of his own personal investigation, information which involves a psychic who Mr. Kelly consulted. She visioned danger for the congressman and had the word "Scam" in her vision. Keep in mind that this was before the FBI investigation story became public.

Here are a few quotes from the March 31 column by Mr. Anderson:

"Rep. Richard Kelly's explanation of his role in the ABSCAM operation has always had a certain ethereal quality to it. The latest evidence I've seen makes his story downright spooky."

And—

"But my associate Gary Cohn, who has been investigating the ABSCAM scandal, has obtained some confidential files that lend a weird credence to Kelly's incredible story."

And—

"Whether one believes in her psychic powers is, of course, beside the point. What's important — and amazing — is that her testimony corroborates Kelly's fantastic story. She confirmed that the memos in our possession are authentic and the information in them is accurate. The memos show that the congressman told her his version of his ABSCAM involvement months before he accepted the incriminating payoff on Jan. 8."

And—

"Kelly's weird explanation of his ABSCAM involvement led one reporter to ask if he intended to plead insanity as a defense. But the documentary evidence of his dealings with the Florida psychic shows that Kelly may, in the end, prove to be crazy like a fox."

The story serves to illustrate that the attitude and outlook prevails in which the sins of one political party are forgiveable but the good intentions and efforts of the other party are criminal and judgment is passed without trial.

'Back Home Again - -'

As the political campaigning swings into high gear in Indiana, Hoosiers are once again being "treated" to a bit of magic performed by the senior Senator from Indiana.

It has happened before, but it continues to be noteworthy that an elected representative who has voted for higher and higher spending programs by the federal government starts talking sense when he gets back home seeking re-election.

To illustrate:

From a news release dated March 24, 1980, from the office of Senator Birch Bayh:

"Every farmer I know relies a great deal on the careful and wise use of credit."

When you are talking about "wise use of credit," you are talking about "budget"—how you derive income and how you spend that income. Senator Bayh knows as does everyone else that a farmer can't go on borrowing year after year and increase his indebtedness on a never-ending basis. But that is what our federal government is doing, and has been doing for years and years under program supported by Senator Bayh.

In committee, Senator Bayh voted AGAINST a bill to require a balanced federal budget. The vote was 9-8 against allowing the full Senate to consider the bill.

So, at the same time that the Senator points out the need for "careful and wise use of credit" by farmers, he votes against careful and wise use of credit by the federal government. And at the same time he promotes back home in Indiana his "folksy" image of a farmer.

Character Shows Through

Two items caught my attention one day this week.

One was a report of comments by Vernon Jordan, president of the National Urban League. He said black Americans have failed to make progress in the past decade and are now not much better off than they were in the 1960s.

The other item contained comments by Jesse Owens, a negro and a track star of the 1936 olympics where he won four gold medals, breaking three records and tying a fourth within a period of 45 minutes.

Mr. Owens died Monday of lung cancer at the age of 66.

In 1960 his daughter was homecoming queen at Ohio State. Mr. Owens said:

"When I was a student at Ohio State I would have been turned down in any restaurant in Columbus. Yet I returned to Ohio State to see my daughter crowned homecoming queen. I know how much progress has been made."

What a difference in people.

Coburn Corners Church History

A HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF CHRIST AT COBURN'S CORNERS

—by Walter H. Coburn
(written in 1937)

PART 14

This church has not been guilty of receiving without giving. Besides those who went out from the church in various capacities in public school work, elders and deacons in other congregations there have been several regular ministers. After those mentioned Cyrus Alton, a son of Benjamin was ordained and did good work. Edwin R. Coburn, a son of John F. Coburn was ordained. For many years he served as a "preaching elder" in Mt. Pleasant, Mich. Next, Joseph N. Scholes was called. Brother Scholes served various churches in Pennsylvania and Ohio as well as others. He is quite well known particularly in these states. Since his retirement from a located ministry he has served as evangelist. He is now living in his home community and is an active elder. Latest to be sent out is Walter H. Coburn, who after serving in Iowa and Oklahoma has returned and is now pastor of the home church. The church expects still others to go.

No church can exist without an educational program whether the program be formally worked out or developed informally. Like most of the schools of its size the work has been confined, in a formal way to the Bible School although, at times week day classes have been held.

It is not known just when the Sunday School began but it has been conducted for many years. At first the school was conducted in the warm months but soon it was discovered that a winter school was also successful. Today the school is graded in its lower classes.

It is impossible to give a complete list of Superintendents or even a near complete list as no formal records have been kept of the school. Marvin Poper is the present superintendent.

The original building was found during the 90's to be inadequate so that a movement for a new building was started. As R. G. Coburn says of this house "It has answered our purpose very well until Brother Rose came among us but he has attracted such crowds that we find it altogether too small and not quite up to his style and now the talk is of a better and larger house which is much needed". This talk finally crystallized into a definite building program. The old building was turned a quarter way around and wings added to make the present structure. The frame building was veneered with burned brick. A basement was added and as time went on a kitchen fairly well equiped was arranged. The arrangement is not altogether ideal but is better than many. The house is heated with a furnace. The building was dedicated in 1908 by L. L. Carpenter who once attended here when a young man. His long career as a preacher did not begin here but the good people added encouragement to him. Just now the congregation realizes the need of classrooms and baptistry. No doubt this lack will result in a further addition to the building.

When an electric light company built a high power line past the corner, the church subscribed at once for lights. Later the church and furniture has been redecorated.

At the time of the rebuilding program W. P. Coburn who owned the land upon which the church stood, deeded an acre to the church for a building lot. The land lay idle for some time and finally was used for farming at the request of the trustees. After some discussion a plan was adopted and the grounds were set out to trees and shrubbery. The trees selected are sugar or hard maple, native elm and Chinese elm. The plan provides for an outside assembly ground with platform and an encircling drive. The whole grounds are outlined with shrubbery. Around the base of the church building shrubs have been planted for some years. Unfortunately, many of the trees died in the drouth but plans are laid for a replanting in the Fall of 1937. An interesting feature of the planting was the dedication of trees by individuals and a permanent list of the donors is on file.

The professional role of the pharmacist is that of being a competent, reliable, confidential source of family health information. He knows his patrons and their medical and prescription histories. He can tell them how to use household health items and can provide useful information on the danger of various chronic diseases.

When his patrons voluntarily describe their ailments, the pharmacist is often in a position to advise them as to why it is imperative that they promptly consult their personal physician or dentist.

'Bee' April 9

"Foods and Crafts a la Australia, Sweden and the Philippines" is the theme for the tasting bee and craft day to be held Wednesday, April 9. It is being planned by the DeKalb County Extension Homemakers. The location will be the church hall of Immaculate Conception Church at Auburn from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

There will be special displays of interest, featuring Australia, Sweden and the Philippines. A craft for each country will be taught to visitors, with a small charge for necessary materials. One craft will necessitate having a scissors, skein of yarn and number 6 knitting needles.

A tasting bee featuring foods of the three countries is scheduled from 11:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. The wide variety of foods is being prepared by the 35 homemaker clubs throughout the county and will give everyone a rare treat.

A special program will be presented at 1:00 p.m.

There will be a small admission fee for a book of featured recipes and patterns of various crafts.

The county homemakers extend a special welcome to the public to attend the "outstanding event of the year." No reservations are necessary.

COAL NUCLEAR

Two reasons your electric rates are below the national average.

It takes a lot of fuel to make the electricity our customers use. And because fuel is the major factor in the cost of producing electricity, your electric costs are directly affected by the kind of fuel we use.

The answer is coal and nuclear . . . plentiful, readily available and a lot cheaper to use than oil.

Last year the American Electric Power System which we're part of burned over 38 million tons of coal. And that saved our country over 150 million barrels of oil. In addition, Cook Nuclear Plant alone saved nearly 20 million barrels of oil.

Just as important, it helped keep your electric rates below the national average.* And that's good news for all of us.

Saint Joe and area residents have noticed the sections of new rail lying along the Chessie System right-of-way in the past few weeks. Maintenance equipment has been parked at times at a siding at the local elevator. Obviously, rail replacement is in the offing.

Preliminary work was done

Chessie Work Rejuvenates Unpublished News Photos

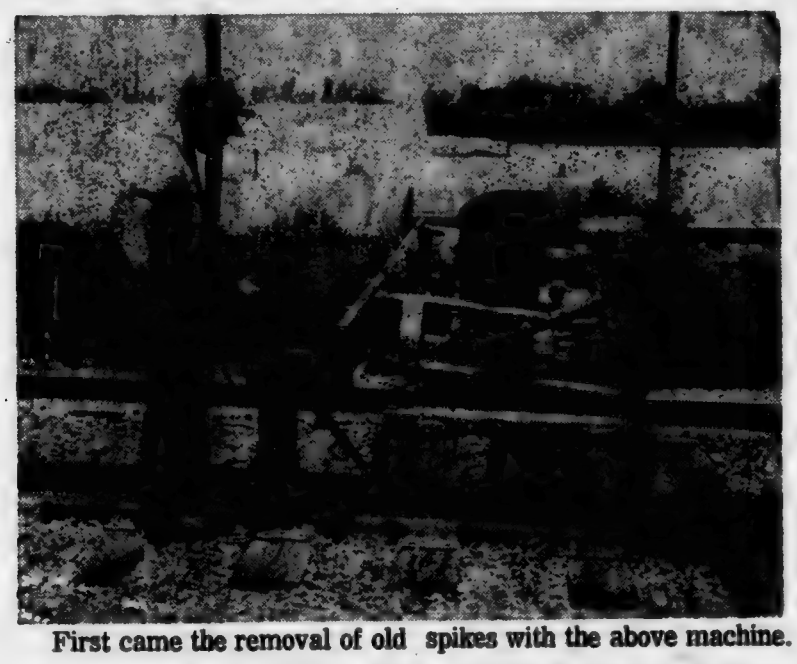
a few years ago when railroad bed ties were inspected and defective ones replaced. The News took photos at that time but somehow it seemed that publication just never was made because not enough space was available. The delay is an unfortunate one because the late Ray (Jake) Moore, a former Saint Joe resident, looked forward to seeing the photos in print. He had retired from the railroad but was interested in the work and the photos especially due to the fact that his son, Gary, was foreman for the maintenance crew.

The News regrets that Jake never saw the photos in print. But now with rail replacement in progress, it is appropriate to publish the photos and show that there is more to installing and maintaining railroad tracks than just laying a bed of stone, plopping down some pieces of wood and spiking rails in place.

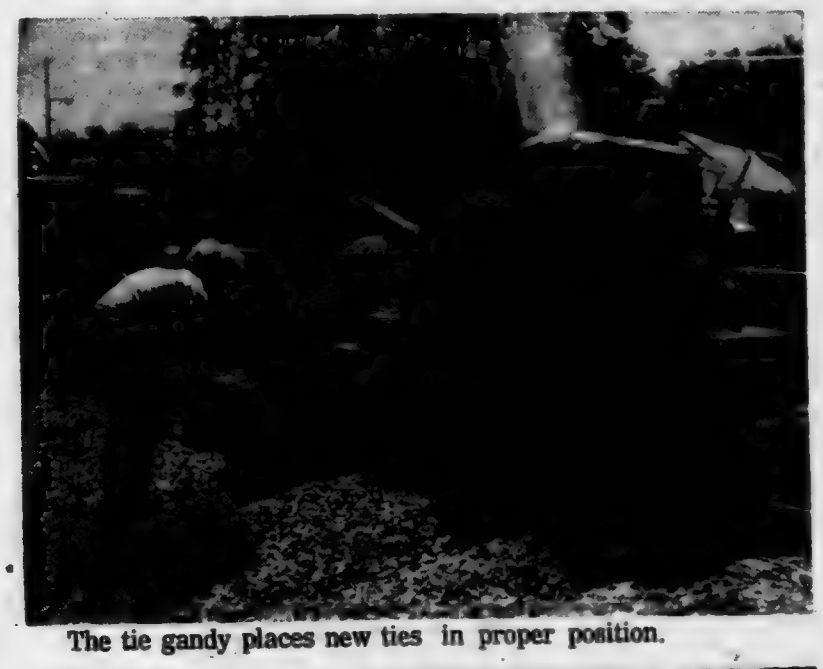
When the project of replacing some 17,000 railroad ties was in progress a few years ago, the accompanying photos recorded step by step the process of replacing defective ties.

The Editor's memory is a bit fuzzy on the proper sequence of some of the machines. But readers can get the general idea of what it takes to replace defective railroad ties.

The tie handler places new ties in position along the rails.



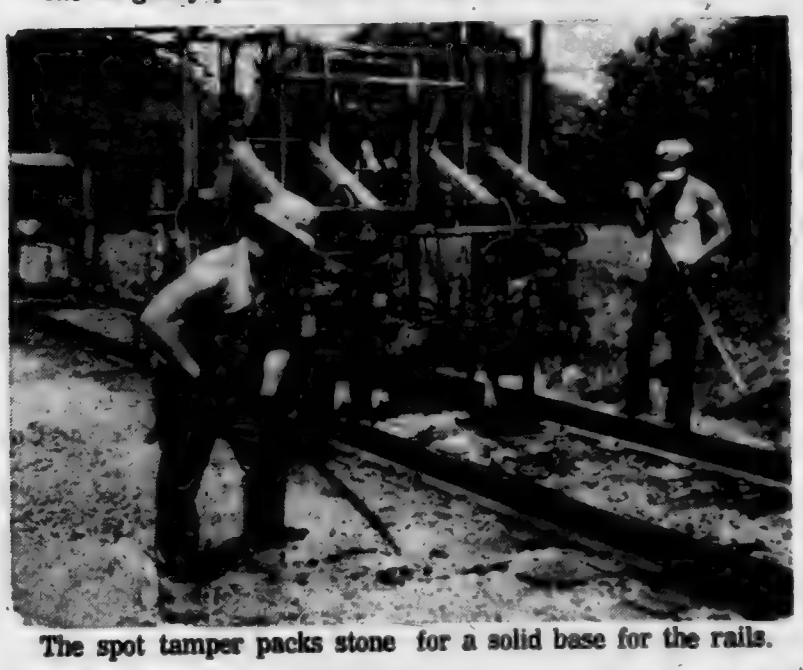
First came the removal of old spikes with the above machine.



The tie gandy places new ties in proper position.

Next the tie shear cut the ties with hydraulic jaws.

And here is Gary Moore, foreman for the maintenance crew.



The spike driver does just that—to hold rails in place.

The scarifier inserter and manual labor remove cut ties—and push away stone before insertion of new ties.

Crossings require manual labor instead of machines.

'Philosophical Conflict' -- Again??

The resignations of teachers in the DeKalb eastern school district this week make me wonder when teachers as a whole are going to establish a code of ethics on their own to make the signing of a teaching contract as binding on teachers as it is on the school board.

It appears there is little to expect from Indiana state legislators along this line; they're hoodwinked and pressured by the teachers' lobby at Indianapolis and John Q. Taxpayer back home doesn't know what is going on. All he gets is the bill.

Several thousand dollars have been spent for legal fees the past few years when the eastern school board notified certain teachers that their contract would not be renewed. A suit filed through the resources of the Indiana State Teachers Association is the usual result and a lengthy period of litigation follows. Then we have the strange later development that the teacher leaves the district anyhow even when he or she wins their case; they intended to leave in the first place.

Right now, the DeKalb central district is involved in a suit filed against the school board because it re-assigned a teacher in the district. And the ISTA and Uniserv (an "arm" of the ISTA) are providing the legal advice for the teacher in an effort to override the action of the school board.

Cordell Affeldt, president of the ISTA, has been quoted in the past as she referred to the "professional" status of teachers. Along with this go comments by other teacher spokesmen along the line that education is not getting its "fair share" of our tax dollars.

I think the ISTA president is closing her eyes to certain conditions which are not normally associated with "professional" efforts. The word "professional" in its true sense carries a meaning of services performed with expertise AND with consideration for all related circumstances. The highest compliment you can give someone when they have done or are still doing a given task is to say that they have done it "like a professional." It carries a meaning of dignity, knowledge, dedication, consistency, respect. A true professional does not resort to strikes and law suits except in very extreme circumstances.

Unfortunately, the word "professional" is used nowadays all too often when those characteristics are not all present. The word has become more closely associated with getting a wad of money than with doing one's best.

The resignation of any teacher during a school term, except under very special circumstances, is hardly the mark of a "professional." For all the expressions of concern about the welfare of students by many teacher spokesmen, there is a marked degree of selfishness in the manner in which some teachers look upon their inherent responsibilities.

One of the explanations given on more than one occasion of a mid-term resignation of a teacher is that there were "philosophical differences" with school administration. I wonder what that means. What are the "philosophical differences" that are so extreme as to make a teacher feel justified in walking out on the students during the school year? There were "philosophical differences" under the late former superintendent and under the former principal. Now there is a new superintendent and a new principal, and we still hear about "philosophical differences" that lead a teacher to resign in mid-term.

The entire matter serves to demonstrate that there is an imbalance of power, an unfair advantage for teachers in that they can resign at will with no fear of the consequences. But a school board may make adjustments in the makeup of the faculty only under the strictest of procedural rules—and even then they are faced with probable legal action against them.

It seems only fair that, if a teacher can resign at any time, the school administration ought to be able to dismiss a teacher at any time.

It is puzzling as to why our state legislators allow one team to play under a different set of rules in the "game" of education.

Others say. . . .

(The popular CBS—TV show "60 Minutes" often has a closing humorous segment by Andy Rooney. The humor is on occasion really not funny as Mr. Rooney points out some of the contradictions in modern society. He now writes a syndicated column and the following appeared in the April 8, 1980, issue of the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel. —Ed.)

There's something wrong with anyone who's never been fired from a job. If I'm ever in a position to hire someone, I'm going to be very suspicious of anyone who comes in looking for work with a resume that doesn't include the information that he or she got the ax a couple of times either for incompetence or insubordination.

What's all this resignation business? Doesn't anyone get fired anymore? You read the business pages of the paper and presidents of corporations are always resigning. From a cushy $250,000-a-year job? Come on, fellas. We're not business tycoons, but we're not that dumb. You got canned.

Last summer five of President Carter's Cabinet members left their jobs at the same time and the announcement was made that they had resigned. What happened? All of a sudden all five of them decided they didn't like their jobs? Maybe their wives wanted them to spend more time with the children, although most of their children are in their 20s and 30s.

It was nonsense, of course. They were fired and everyone knew it. Why not say so?

The whole business of resignation is false and it's part of a new philosophy we seem to have adopted. There aren't any losers anymore.

At children's birthday parties, they play games in the cellar or the backyard and the parents having the party give away prizes. It doesn't matter how well or poorly a child plays a game, he'll probably get a prize anyway because the adults don't want to damage his little psyche by making him think he might not always win in life.

Most high school teams in any sport have co-captains now. Sometimes, they have more than two. No one wants to hurt the feelings of a good player by choosing someone over him for the job. Sometimes the professional football teams have six or eight men trot out in the field for the coin-tossing ceremonies. They're all co-captains. Not a loser in the crowd.

I hope we never decide not to hurt the feelings of one of the presidential candidates by electing co-presidents. One president is plenty. With two presidents we'd have to build separate but equal White Houses.

A while ago I read where someone won $34,000 for finishing second in a golf tournament. Second! Imagine making $34,000 for losing a game of golf.

When Andrew Young resigned from his U.N. post over the PLO incident last summer, President Carter said he was "sorry" to have to accept his resignation. If he was really sorry he shouldn't have accepted it. All of us are using the word "sorry" too lightly. We're always saying we're sorry when we aren't really sorry at all. It's all part of the same refusal to face things as they are.

We're excusing everyone for everything. A boy, 17, kills the man who runs the candy store for $1.35 and a Tootsie Roll.

The boy's parents find a bloody hammer under his bed and they confront him with it.

"I'm sorry," the boy says. "I killed him but I didn't mean to do it."

The father looks at the mother with tears in his eyes and says, "At least he's honest."

The next day the neighbors are interviewed by a television reporter. They all say he was a nice quiet boy who always went to church. They don't bother to say that he was a bully, that he'd been stealing all his life, and that he was rotten through and through.

We keep letting ourselves off the hook. No one wants to judge anyone else by strict standards for fear he'll be judged by them too. No one wants to say to someone on the job, "You just aren't good enough. You're fired."

No Increase In Trash Fee; New Pickup Day Is Monday In May

Saint Joe's trash collection fee per household will apparently have no increase when a new firm takes over the pickup duties in May. This information came out at Monday's meeting of the town board.

The bid of Hess & Sons of Auburn was accepted by the board at its March meeting. A breakdown of their monthly total bid on a per-household basis indicates no need for an increase in billings to town residents. This is somewhat of a welcomed story inasmuch as other communities have had increases of up to $1.00 a month per household.

The town's contract with the trash removal firm is for residences only. Business pickups are negotiated separately and privately.

A change will be made in the pickup date for Saint Joe. The final date for pickup under the present contract will be Thursday, April 24. Thereafter pickups will be made on Monday afternoons, starting Monday, May 5. This gives town residents Monday morning to get their trash out to the curb and allows for the disposal of weekend accumulation.

Due to the termination date of the old contract and the effective date of the new contract, there will be a period of 10 days between pickups instead of one week. Saint Joe residents should put out trash for removal Thursday, April 24, skip the next full week, then put out trash Monday, May 5. Pickup will be every Monday thereafter.

Town Board Inspections Bring Unofficial Health, Safety Reports

The town board of Saint Joe is taking steps to remove health and safety hazards represented by conditions existing at certain unoccupied dwellings in the town.

At the same time that one property owner is taking legal steps to cope with conditions at an adjacent property, the board is pursuing the duties and responsibilties granted it by law in trying to cope with instances of negligence evident at certain locations.

Tuesday of this week board president Ted Haberkorn contacted the county board of health to provide information about existing conditions. Wednesday he and board members Paula Tinstman and Larry McKown took a look at two uninhabited properties and unofficially declared the presence of hazards to health and safety at the properties.

Further investigations are planned.

Maurice Kline Named Waterworks Sup't; FD Training Expenses Aired

The town board of Saint Joe met April 7 at 7:00 p.m. Present were board members Paula Tintsman and Ted Haberkorn; clerk-treasurer Emma Frank; and Steve Grogg, Steve Monroe, Fred Rayle, Jr., Ralphine Robinson, Jim Miller and John Bopp.

A contract is to be prepared for trash removal for Hess & Son of Auburn. The board met with a Motorola representative last week for discussion of electronic communications equipment. Purchase of two new root cutting tools was authorized. Mrs. Robinson expressed appreciation for the repair of a town tile which had caused a backup of water at the Robinson residence.

The clerk was asked to set up a meeting with an insurance representative concerning state insurance requirements for liability coverage for firemen. A meeting was tentatively set for April 16 at 7 p.m. in the insurance matter.

The board president said he was told on March 31 by waterworks superintendent Rich Gfeller that Mr. Gfeller was resigning. The president immediately appointed Maurice Kline to the post on a temporary basis.

Mr. Haberkorn suggested that the board give consideration to provide certain expense money for firemen attending training sessions. Mrs. Robinson suggested there be certain limitation and regulation of such expenses. The matter was carried over for future consideration.

Spraying of weeds and grass around cemetery markers was discussed with the board indicating no plans for such spraying due to the unattractive appearance of the dead foliage. The matter was carried over.

Mosquito control was discussed and it was noted that elimination of standing water is an important factor in such control.

Bills allowed included:

Roundup Coming

Registration day for the Kindergarten Roundup at Riverdale Elementary School is Tuesday, April 29, according to Rex, Tullis, principal at the school.

To be eligible for kindergarten, children must be five years of age on or before September 1, 1980. Verification of age is to be made by birth certificate presented at the registration.

During registration parents will receive health forms to be completed by the family physician and dentist and returned by the time the child enters school in the fall.

Indiana law requires that all children entering school be immunized against diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus, measles, rubella (German measles) and poliomyelitis. No child will be permitted to attend school for more than 30 days beyond the date of enrollment unless fully immunized or in the process of immunization. In the latter case a schedule must be obtained from the doctor indicating immunization completion dates. In addition the child must have proof of a tuberculosis skin test.

Mrs. Della Farrer, kindergarten teacher, Mrs. Alice Cole, school nurse, Rex McFarren, school social worker, Mrs. Loretta Musser, school secretary, and Mr. Tullis will be present at the roundup to answer questions.

This is an important meeting for parents. There will be a sound filmstrip suggesting practical things parents can do to help their children. A brief description of the kindergarten program will be given and health information presented.

The April 29 meeting starts at 3:00 p.m. in the cafetorium.

U100 insulin replaces U80

Insulin preparations in the U80 strength are no longer certified by the Food and Drug Administration. There is no cause for alarm as diabetic patients now using the U80 strength will switch to insulin in the U100 category. (U100 is stronger than U80.) This action is being taken to reduce the potential for patient error that results from having insulin available in two high concentrations.

Church League Meets April 29

The Saint Joe Church League will hold a meeting Tuesday, April 29, at 7:30 p.m. The meeting will be held at St. Mark Lutheran Church in Saint Joe.

The usual agenda for the annual planning meeting will include election of officers, discussion of fees, review of rules and consideration of any changes, if necessary.

The 1980 season will mark the beginning of the 29th year for the local church softball league. At first it was fast-pitch. Then in 1962 a change was made to slow-pitch and it has remained that way ever since.

The lighted diamond was installed in 1951 by the Saint Joe Valley Recreation Club. After several years that organization went out of existence and the church league took over maintenance of the diamond for the most part and through the years paid for and installed fences along the baselines and a permanent outfield fence. The league has received financial help from the Saint Joe Lions Club for several years in paying light bills. One town board of the past paid the light bills for a few years. A complete new system of light fixtures was installed two years ago at a cost of over $5,000.

Churches planning to participate in the league this summer should send representatives to the April 29 meeting.

Scott Nagel Wins JG County 'Bee'

Scott Nagel of DeKalb Eastside Junior High School won the DeKalb County spelling bee April 8 held at Riverdale Elementary School in Saint Joe. He won by correctly spelling the word "historian."

Runnerup was Laura Carroll of Waterloo Elementary School.

Scott will now participate in the Journal-Gazette's area contest at Snider High School at Fort Wayne April 26.

Other participants were Brenda Mansfield of Riverdale; A. J. Kroemer of McKenney-Harrison school at Auburn; Pat Koehl of St. Joseph school at Garrett; and Traci Pence of J. E. Ober school at Garrett.

Brenda represents the third member of the Bill Mansfield family to win a school spelling championship and participate in county competition. The other two are brothers Jerry and Mark.

In past years Riverdale had another three-winners family—Mike, Phil and Mark Haberkorn.

Style Bridge 17th

BeeLine Fashions in sizes 6 to 20 will be shown. Included are both women's and men's fashions.

Coburn Corners Church History

A HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF CHRIST AT COBURN'S CORNERS

—by Walter H. Coburn (written in 1937)

PART 15—CONCLUSION

A few years ago the North School was abandoned and after a time the building was sold to the church. The grounds are intended, when the need arises for a burial ground. The building is used for a community building. Each summer many family reunions and also the School reunion are held there.

The membership of the church is not so great today as formerly. There are about sixty-seven active members. Some have drifted away, others are loyal Christians in other communities. The increase of membership is largely due to smaller families. As a matter of fact the church probably reaches a higher percentage of residents than formerly.

The church is aware of this decrease in membership. Probably the result will be an evangelistic campaign which will reach farther out.

As a final word we wish to pay tribute to the church for one outstanding factor in its long history. It has never allowed a quarrel to dominate the situation. Whatever trouble has arisen has been overcome and really there never has been a long continued difference in the church. There are no social classes. The members are self respecting farmers who are determined to build a neighborhood life that is Christian in character.

R. G. Coburn concludes his historical sketch thus, "The church has had its ups and downs, its dark times and its bright times; at times it seemed to be on the decline and then again it would revive and take on new life, but in all its history it has never failed to meet for worship of every first day of the week without special cause."

The church is alive to its responsibilities today. It is vigorous and awake. In the first year of its second century it pauses to look back but its face is turned toward the future. In 1837 our fathers pioneered in a new country and solved in first rate manner, its problems. In 1937, we pioneer in a new age. We have our problems. With faith in God the congregation believes it can meet these problems. The little group in Alton's cabin could not see the century ahead but it came and the church prospered. We do not see the future but we go on in faith.

Foster Homes Needed

Wayne Hapner, director of Foster Care Services, Inc., of Northeast Indiana, has announced that the DeKalb County Department of Public Welfare is interested in locating families who would like to assist a child or young person temporarily. This period might be from several months to one year. The need is for foster homes for all ages of children, but the most pressing need is for homes willing to assist teenagers.

When fostering a child, foster parents and the Department of Public Welfare share responsibilities. The department will assume responsibility for medical and dental expenses and provide the foster parent with some financial assistance toward the cost of room and board.

The department also provides Foster Parent Education Courses and caseworker services. The foster family provides for the day to day needs of the child by encouraging positive growth and development physically, mentally, emotionally, socially and spiritually.

Clubs and organizations are invited to request a speaker and film to further the understanding of foster care in the community. Interested individuals are encouraged to call or write the DeKalb County Department of Public Welfare for an information packet. The telephone number is 925—3819.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

When Larry Mason informed me of his appearance at the Johnny Appleseed Festival to be held April 26 and 27, the conversation somehow brought up the matter of weight—Larry's weight. I think it had to do with some people's concern that Larry's weight loss would be a handicap when he handles an alligator and a snake at the same time—a big snake.

Larry pulled up the front of his T-shirt to show me an incision right down the middle of his stomach. To reduce his weight (diets did no good, he'd lose 40 pounds, then gain 50) he had his stomach "stapled." A top portion of the stomach is "stapled" to make a pouch. It does not completely shut off the pouch from the remainder of the stomach. But it is tight enough that when Larry eats, the pouch fills up and he is "full"—at least he feels that way. The food can then gradually go on through his stomach in the digestive process.

Larry said he had to do something—"My back hurt, my legs hurt, I hurt all over"—from carrying 280 pounds around full time. One time he went up to 295.

Right now he has lost 60 pounds and is "down" to 220. He says he has another 60 to go to "become a human being again."

Zay Sailer stopped in this week to pay his subscription. He reminisced about Saint Joe and the railroad and noted that years ago "this was quite a town"—before the automobile took over American lives.

He said he had to get out for a walk, he'd been cooped up for months, and the sunny day was just right for "loosening up" with a walk.

He'll be 85 pretty soon. First he mentioned how grateful he is for a caring niece, Nancy Zehrung, of Fort Wayne who visits him every week and brings prepared food. Between Nancy and neighbors like Mae Ervin, Zay says he doesn't have to do much cooking.

Church League Meets April 29

The Saint Joe Church League will hold a meeting Tuesday, April 29, at 7:30 p.m. The meeting will be held at St. Mark Lutheran Church in Saint Joe.

The usual agenda for the annual planning meeting will include election of officers, discussion of fees, review of rules and consideration of any changes, if necessary.

The 1980 season will mark the beginning of the 29th year for the local church softball league. At first it was fast-pitch. Then in 1952 a change was made to slow-pitch and it has remained that way ever since.

The lighted diamond was installed in 1951 by the Saint Joe Valley Recreation Club. After several years that organization went out of existence and the church league took over maintenance of the diamond for the most part and through the years paid for and installed fences along the baselines and a permanent outfield fence. The league has received financial help from the Saint Joe Lions Club for several years in paying light bills. One town board of the past paid the light bills for a few years. A complete new system of light fixtures was installed two years ago at a cost of over $5,000.

Churches planning to participate in the league this summer should send representatives to the April 29 meeting.

The public is invited to patronize the sale.

NOTICE

St. Joe Water Department Drinking Water Exceeds Microbiological Standards

The St. Joe Water Department water supply failed to comply with the Federal Drinking water standard for coliform bacteria for December 1979, January and February 1980. The coliform organism is used as an indicator of the microbiological quality of drinking water. Coliforms indicate possible contamination and the possible presence of disease-causing organisms.

The St. Joe Water Department is attempting to solve the problem by a thorough inspection of treatment facilities and sampling techniques.

The inconsistencies of the test samples for the above three-month period indicate a localized problem and not contamination of the basic water supply.

'Snake Man' To Give Show At 'Appleseed' Fest

Larry Mason, Saint Joe's jungle reptile wizard, continues to receive a lot of public response to his shows. He is being booked by many organizations and schools.

The next "big" booking Larry has will be Saturday and Sunday, April 26 and 27, at the Johnny Appleseed Festival in Fort Wayne. The Johnny Appleseed gravesite park is located just south of the Coliseum on Parnell Avenue.

For those who would like to attend—it's free!

Cancer Unit To Meet April 23

The formal organizational meeting of the DeKalb County Unit of the American Cancer Society will be held Wednesday, April 23, at 7:30 p.m. in the Conference Room at DeKalb Memorial Hospital.

The presentation of unit by-laws will be made and election of officers will be held.

'Calendar Clues' Winners Named

The Calendar Clue Contest has been in action for a number of weeks, according to Judy Waanders, school librarian. Students have been using a number of references including encyclopedias and almanacs to find the answers to the Calendar Clue questions.

In Calendar Clue, a new contest is started each Monday. Every day another clue toward the answer is posted outside the library door.

Answers so far have included: the song, "Yankee Doodle"; Bermuda Islands; Francis Marion, "The Swamp Fox"; and doberman pinscher.

Winners for the first seven contests are: Richard Fiedler, Jared Olson, Brenda Mansfield, Dawn Timmerman, Dawndi Rayle; Ronnie Nagel and Mark Myers.

Prizes for the winners have been awarded by Mom's Place and Bita General Store in Saint Joe, and Chaney's Restaurant and Laub Shell Mart in Spencerville.

Mrs. Waanders extends a special "thanks" to the local businesses providing the prizes.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Ted,

Excuse my writing. My mind is so very full of town history, but since my writing is so poor, ask Emma Stromback.

Saint Joe had quite a few fires!

I have wanted to say I very much agreed with your praise of Dr. Edwards!

Sincerely,
Marjorie

Fire Dept. 'Roots' Go Back To 1914

In September of 1964, the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Saint Joe Volunteer Fire Department was observed with a carryin dinner at the fire hall. 77 people attended the observance.

The late Derwood Ridgway who was one of the original members of the department, presented a history of the department at the 1964 meeting. The history was published in the September 10, 1964, issue of The Saint Joe News. A portion of Mr. Ridgway's history reads as follows:

". . . . On June 29, 1914, a representative from Obenchain Boyer Co. was present and offered to sell the town of St. Joe one double tank 45 gallon each chemical fire engine no. 70 at $600, $200 to be paid each year. The offer was accepted. On August 5th they purchased 2 40-foot extension ladders and 2 16-foot extension ladders and 2 12-foot extension ladders. 50 12 quart buckets were also purchased. The total cost of ladders was $14.80 and purchased from John C. George. On August 17, 1914, plans for a building were made to house the truck and equipment with a second floor for a meeting place. On September 21, 1914, bids were received on the building. W. A. J. Smith bid $950.00, Warner and Dilley bid $975.00, the contract being given to Smith on September 22, 1914.

"The Fire Company organized in the old Widney Opera House in the early part of September with the following members:

"H. C. Hathaway as Fire Chief, Merritt Barney was Secretary and Treasurer, Jack Sechler, Harry Shuff, Bert Jackson, Frank Meese, Jim Harter, Harry Kees, Hollis Dilley, Charley Koch, Frank Kinsey, Roy Kinsey, Chris Saylor, Elza Kinsey, Elmer Hart, Ora Reese, Aud Harter and D. B. Ridgway.

"On February 18, 1918, the town appropriated the sum of $280 to use for a truck. The two chemical tanks were mounted on the truck at this time. Craig Sheffer and myself did the labor on this. Several donations were given to the Fire Department including the bell and tower purchased by the local Dramatic Club. Looking over the records I see I was Fire Chief in 1924 and was paid $2.00 as my expense to be a delegate at the District Convention.

"On January 19, 1926, the clerk contacted the State Fire Marshall about taking the truck out of town. He said it should be settled locally. The town purchased 2 portable fire extinguishers. It was the town board's wish that the fire truck not go beyond 5 miles from town.

"On August 20, 1928, a new radiator for the fire truck was purchased costing $12.50, also a new reel for the truck at a cost of $35.

"In 1930 the town board paid D. W. Yeiser $4.40, Roy Bowser $1.90, F. R. Bowman $1.60 and D. B. Ridgway $4.20 for fire calls. On April 14, 1932, a kit for the fire truck for chemicals was purchased at a cost of $22.50.

"On August 20, 1934, a new truck was purchased, a ton and a half Chevrolet. There were nine bidders for the truck with Stanley Koch, representing Beuter Sales, Ft. Wayne, accepted on a bid of $500. After the truck was equipped the company reorganized with the following officers:

Roy Wade, Chief; Roy Reidenbach, Assistant Chief; Frank R. Bowman, Secretary and Bill Hurni, Treasurer. Other members were Vernie Monroe, William Keeler, Frank Curie, D. W. Yeiser, D. B. Ridgway, D. W. Yeiser was appointed to make a seat for the fire truck, D. B. Ridgway to make hangers for ladders.

"In June of 1935, the town purchased for the fire department 100 feet of small rope and 100 feet of fire hose, the fire hose costing $50 but no record of payment for the rope!

"In May of 1945, a contract to the American Apparatus Co., Battle Creek, Michigan for $1781.00 was given. On August 6 the job was completed and the town paid for this.

"In June of 1947, ground work for a new fire hall was started with trustees at this time, Frank Bowman, Merl Guilford and Wilbur Yeiser. After several years and lots of planning, a levy was made to cover three years at $1500.00 per year. A lot of volunteer labor was used including members of the Fire Company and many others to whom we are very grateful.

"Following the installation of the dial telephone system and the loss of our operator, other arrangements had to be made. Vernon Kline and several members of of the fire company put together a recorder system that worked very well.

"Concord Township later purchased a new fire truck and the Saint Joe fire company agreed to take care of it. With a second truck, the company was able to give better service to our community.

"A large water tank has been added, also an auxiliary pump, a 3 inch jaguar pump.

"Several years a resuscitator was given to the fire company by the Boy Scouts. Now we have two, also a large oxygen tank.

"A community Halloween party was begun in 1951. Other clubs were asked to help in this project but we did not get much response. So it became our project and we believe it has been well received and the youngsters sure have a good time along with a lot of older people.

"On Christmas the fire company has for several years been treating the shut ins. We are sure it brings a little happiness into the lives of these older people. A special basket is given to Mrs. Marjorie Ramsey for the many years of her service in the telephone office. After helping to give out this treat several years, last Christmas I was given a large fruit basket and it was greatly appreciated.

"Present members of the fire department are: Fire Chief, D. W. Yeiser; Assistant Chief, Roy Bowser; Secretary and Treasurer, Joe Robinson; D. B. Ridgway, Harold Yeiser, Donald Yeiser, Jack Bowser, Clifford Billow, Frank Monroe, Joe Walter, Maurice Kline, Dick Roberts, H. Ankney, H. Shockley, H. L. McMahon, R. Holtzberg, B. Mansfield, Jay Cee Loy, O. Coburn and R. Witte."

'Earth Day' Points Out Importance Of Soil Cons'n

The Soil Conservation Service Office at Auburn notes that Tuesday, April 22, is "Earth Day." Students across the nation will study earth resources and limitations. They will learn many new facts, the SCS says, but there is one resource which they'll show no respect. They will step on it, kick it around, treat it like dirt. This resource of little respect is—the soil.

It's called dirt, but it keeps humans alive. It grows food to nourish bodies, timber to build homes, among other things.

Civilization has always depended on its topsoil. At first, topsoil was very thin. Soil presently builds up thickness from the decay of plant and animal residues. Soil is primarily a mixture of rock particles and organic matter. As plants die, their remains mix with mineral particles to produce soil. But it's a slow process. It takes years to build even one inch of topsoil.

Certain estimates indicate that earth life is 2 billion years old. The first one and a quarter billion years, life was confined to water—the seas, rivers and lakes. Only 360 million years ago did animals and plants begin to establish themselves on land. This was the beginning of soil, the SCS notes.

Today soil is being depleted in the United States, according to the SCS. Recent projections by the SCS indicate erosion could reduce soil productivity by 20 percent within the next 50 years. If present erosion rates continue in the midwest states, corn and soybean yields would be cut 30 percent.

Dr. W. C. Lowdermilk in his USDA booklet, "Conquest of the Land Through 7,000 Years," recorded that soil erosion, deforestation, overgrazing, neglect and conflicts between cultivators and herdsmen helped topple empires and wipe out entire civilizations. He warned Americans of what could happen to human life if soil resources are not conserved.

He wrote, "In the past 150 years, our occupation of this fabulous land has coincided with the coming of the age of science and power-driven machines.

"Along the Atlantic coast in the Piedmont, we find charming landscapes with fields with red soils and glowing grain fields. But in their midst we find an insidious enemy devouring the land, stealing it away, ere we are aware, by sheet erosion, rain by rain, washing it down into the streams and out to the sea. Sheet erosion, marked by shallow but numerous rills in our fields, is blotted out by each plowing.

"If the soil is destroyed, then our liberty of choice and action is gone, condemning this and future generations to needless privations and dangers."

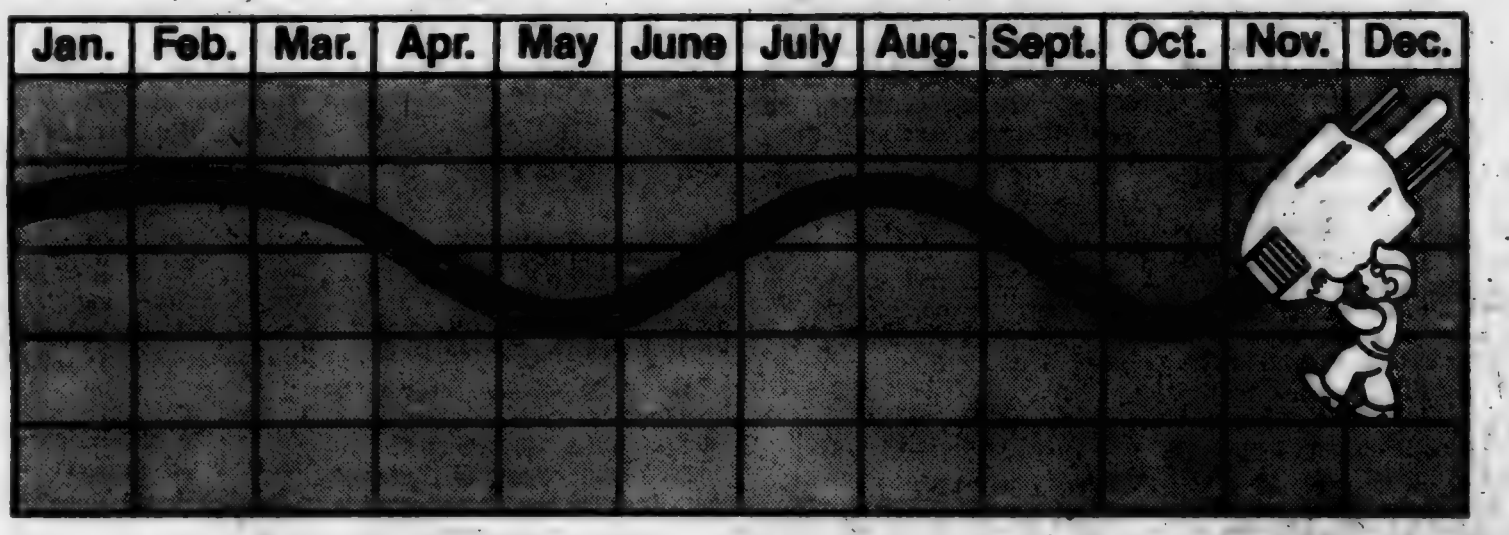
The Equal Payment Plan.



A convenient way to budget for your electric bill.

Some household expenses are fairly steady throughout the year. But your electric bill varies from month to month because your electric usage fluctuates with the changing seasons. The bill is usually higher in the winter. It dips a little in the spring months, then, for most people, rises during the air conditioning season, before dropping again in the fall.

We can't do anything about the weather, but we can help you smooth out the ups and downs of your electric bill. And that's by offering you our Equal Payment Plan.

With the Equal Payment Plan, we bill you a fixed amount each month based on your average usage.

Every six months we'll review your account so you'll know whether your electricity costs are going up, down or staying about the same. The bill at the end of the twelfth month is the "settle-up" bill.

Many of our customers are already taking advantage of the Equal Payment Plan. If it sounds like a good idea to you, simply contact us. We'll take it from there.

We give it our best.

Roundup Coming

Registration day for the Kindergarten Roundup at Riverdale Elementary School is Tuesday, April 29, according to Rex, Tullis, principal at the school.

To be eligible for kindergarten, children must be five years of age on or before September 1, 1980. Verification of age is to be made by birth certificate presented at the registration.

During registration parents will receive health forms to be completed by the family physician and dentist and returned by the time the child enters school in the fall.

Indiana law requires that all children entering school be immunized against diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus, measles, rubella (German measles) and poliomyelitis. No child will be permitted to attend school for more than 30 days beyond the date of enrollment unless fully immunized or in the process of immunization. In the latter case a schedule must be obtained from the doctor indicating immunization completion dates. In addition the child must have proof of a tuberculosis skin test.

Mrs. Della Farrer, kindergarten teacher, Mrs. Alice Cole, school nurse, Rex McFarren, school social worker, Mrs. Loretta Musser, school secretary, and Mr. Tullis will be present at the roundup to answer questions.

This is an important meeting for parents. There will be a sound filmstrip suggesting practical things parents can do to help their children. A brief description of the kindergarten program will be given and health information presented.

The April 29 meeting starts at 3:00 p.m. in the cafetorium.

U100 insulin replaces U80

Insulin preparations in the U80 strength are no longer certified by the Food and Drug Administration. There is no cause for alarm as diabetic patients now using the U80 strength will switch to insulin in the U100 category. (U100 is stronger than U80.) This action is being taken to reduce the potential for patient error that results from having insulin available in two high concentrations.

Foster Homes Needed

Wayne Hapner, director of Foster Care Services, Inc., of Northeast Indiana, has announced that the DeKalb County Department of Public Welfare is interested in locating families who would like to assist a child or young person temporarily. This period might be from several months to one year. The need is for foster homes for all ages of children, but the most pressing need is for homes willing to assist teenagers.

When fostering a child, foster parents and the Department of Public Welfare share responsibilities. The department will assume responsibility for medical and dental expenses and provide the foster parent with some financial assistance toward the cost of room and board.

The department also provides Foster Parent Education Courses and caseworker services. The foster family provides for the day to day needs of the child by encouraging positive growth and development physically, mentally, emotionally, socially and spiritually.

Clubs and organizations are invited to request a speaker and film to further the understanding of foster care in the community. Interested individuals are encouraged to call or write the DeKalb County Department of Public Welfare for an information packet. The telephone number is 925—2810.

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

The Little Hoosiers at Riverdale are delving into the history of old homes. Some local property owners have been contacted about the date of construction of their residences.

Unfortunately, abstracts contain only descriptions of land boundaries. I looked over the abstract for our property trying to find a date of construction of our house but came up with nothing except one reference years and years ago to a wood structure.

Pauline Baumgartner of Spencerville has told us in the past that her grandfather built the brick house we live in but she doesn't know when it was built.

From information that is in the abstract concerning transfer of title and the amount of money indicated, I guesstimate our house was built in 1889.

Our abstract goes back to the year 1835, before Saint Joe's time, when what is now the town was part of an 80-acre parcel of land. The 80 acres appears to have been sold a year later—for $100!

Remember—no trash pickup Thursday due to a new trash removal contract. Hess & Sons Disposal will make their first pickup Monday, May 5, in the afternoon.

Jerry Hess included an annual one-time free cleaup pickup day in his bid. The date is yet to be set. I've had a couple of pleasant conversations with Jerry who seems intent on doing a good job—as did Merritt, Inc., while they held the contract. The free cleanup pickup date includes anything set out at the curb or edge of the street—from small stuff up to large appliances.

2nd Annual EHS BB Sessions

Rick Hudson, DeKalb Eastside High School varsity basketball coach, has announced that the 2nd Annual Blazer Basketball Camp will be held from June 9 to July 3. Last summer 150 boys and girls participated in the first Blazer Camp.

June 9—13 and 16—20 will be for boys in grades 3 through 8 (1979-80 school year).

June 23—27 and June 30—July 3 will be for girls in grades 3 through 8.

Grades 3, 4 and 5 will attend the 8:30 to 10:00 a.m. session with grades 6, 7 and 8 attending the 10:00 a.m. to noon session.

Registration fee is $10 for a camp T-shirt, camp fundamental book, individual fundamental instruction, awards, free throw competition, guest speakers, certificate of participation, 5 on 5 games and tournament and 1 on 1 games and tournament.

Students in the eligible grades will receive brochures at school.

Additional information can be obtained by contacting the coach at home (868—5674) or at school (868—2186).

Other Eastside coaches assisting with the camp are Jim White and Kris Kropf.

RIVERDALE MENU

Tuesday—beef stew, lettuce salad, butter or peanutbutter bread, pineapple.

Wednesday—ham and beans, cornbread, celery and carrot sticks, fruit jello.

Thursday—submarine sandwich, French fries, plums.

Property Gets 'Red-Tag' Notice

Efforts by the town board to motivate certain property owners to clean up their properties were given a boost last week when a vacant house was inspected and given a "red tag" for hazards to health and safety by the county health department.

County health officer Dave Holder and his assistant, Luther Treesh who formerly served as health officer, noted that there is broken drain tile on the property. They also reported litter in the house. The house has had two unlocked doors for some time.

The owners have been notified of the unsafe conditions and asked to make necessary improvements.

Sp'ville FD To Offer Training

The Spencerville Volunteer Fire Department is sponsoring a four-week First Aid Course which will begin May 6 at 7:00 p.m. and continue the following three Tuesday nights.

The registration fee is $3.00 to cover the cost of material for the course.

Anyone interested should pre-register by calling Tom Mack 337—5329 or Dan Bushee 238—4242.

Streets, Roads Get Attention

The warm weather of the past week enabled the town to fill some gaping chuck holes on various streets. The past winter was generally "mild," that is, there were no intensely cold periods of several days. This made it easy on the heating bill to some extent.

However, a "mild" winter means severe strain on pavement. With intermittent freezing temperatures separated by thawing temperatures, pavement takes a beating.

The state highway department swept the main street last week and later applied tar to fill the cracks.

NOTICE

St. Joe Water Department Drinking Water Exceeds Microbiological Standards

The St. Joe Water Department water supply failed to comply with the Federal Drinking water standard for coliform bacteria for December 1979, January and February 1980. The coliform organism is used as an indicator of the microbiological quality of drinking water. Coliforms indicate possible contamination and the possible presence of disease-causing organisms.

The St. Joe Water Department is attempting to solve the problem by a thorough inspection of treatment facilities and sampling techniques.

The inconsistencies of the test samples for the above three-month period indicate a localized problem and not contamination of the basic water supply.

Scouts Hold Court Of Honor

—by Marty Loy

The newly formed Boy Scout Troop 168 for the Saint Joe-Spencerville area had its first Court of Honor Tuesday, April 22, 1980, in the Riverdale Elementary School cafetorium.

The purpose of a Court of Honor is to recognize the boys for their achievements either in advancement in Scout rank or skill awards and merit badges.

Joe Robinson, troop committee member, served as master of ceremonies. Scoutmaster John Sechler presented the awards.

Those receiving the Scout Badge were Chesney VanDyke, Tony VanDyke, Jason King, Mark Myers, Cary Voirol, Bob Glasser, Ed Farrell, Jeff Studebaker, Joe Mills, Paul Cornett and Dean Baker.

Tenderfoot awards were earned by Don Drake and Shafter Baker.

Recognition was given to four Scouts who had received their Scout Badge at an earlier meeting. They include Don Drake, John Drake, Tom Mills and Shafter Baker.

Skill awards for cooking were given to Don Drake and John Drake with Don also getting his skill award for citizenship. Chesney VanDyke was awarded a merit badge for coin collecting.

Sheriff Larry Myers showed a movie on drug abuse, which was of interest to everyone attending.

Troop committee chairman Frank Sechler as well as committee members John Mason and Joe Robinson were among dignitaries at the meeting.

Rev. George Wirsing of the local Lutheran parish made the meeting complete with his opening and closing prayers.

Afterwards, refreshments were enjoyed by all.

Oxford University Press Notes News' Editorial On Language

One of the editorials published in this paper concerning the use of the English language apparently was passed along to Oxford University Press of New York City. The following letter was received last week:

Dear Mr. Haberkorn:

On March 10, 1979, the NEWS published a story entitled, "From The Editor's Desk: 'Chairperson'??? 'Huperson'???" The prominent coverage you gave the story demonstrates your paper's interest in words and language, an interest shared by many Americans today who are increasingly concerned with proper speech and writing in schools, newspapers, government and business. We share the feelings that linguistic sloppiness has gone too far, and would like your help in doing something about it.

We would like to mail to you every two weeks starting today, "The Word From Oxford," a selection of notes on how words are best used. The notes will run approximately 125 words in length. You have our permission to reproduce them at no cost.

The notes have been devised by the team of American editors that is revising the OXFORD PAPERBACK DICTIONARY—the subject of the story you ran—for American use.

The most exciting feature of the forthcoming OXFORD AMERICAN DICTIONARY is that it not only defines words but often provides guidance on how they should be used. The new dictionary will be published in October 1980 by Oxford University Press New York in hardcover, and by Avon Books in paperback.

We hope that you will join us in the effort to help people express themselves clearly by printing "The Word From Oxford" on a regular basis. We invite you to use the enclosed notes to start a column. Interest in language usage has never been greater. A recent article in the "Wall Street Journal" noted that William Safire's weekly language column generates ten times the number of letters as his political commentaries. I am sure that "The Word From Oxford" will be received with equal enthusiasm by your readers.

Sincerely,

Byron Hollinshead
President

The first column appears elsewhere in this issue and, by coincidence, concerns the use of a word that has "bugged" us for some time—ever since Joe Garagiola was heard on commercials for a financial institution "with money to loan you." —Ed.

Lions, Scouts Collaborate On Highway Litter Pickup

A state project by the Lions Club and a project of the local Boy Scout troop were combined Saturday, April 19, in this area.

Members of the local Lions Club provided pickup trucks and adult supervisors and the Scouts provided the manpower in doing some cleanup work along State Road 1 between Leo and the junction with State Road 8.

Shown above is the crew of boys and men who filled the five pickup trucks in the photo. The amount of trash along highways is unbelievable.

The Lions Club then made a donation to the Scout troop for the help the boys gave in carrying out the project.

How Long Will Wood Last??

One of the benefits of the heating cost problem is the fact that the trend toward automatic or "push button" control of heat has been replaced by the old fashioned wood cutting log burning trend in thousands of American homes. People (some of them, anyhow) are getting some exercise in cutting wood and carrying in to their wood burning stoves.

There is something, frightening, however, in driving through the countryside—the number of tree stumps sticking up along fence rows and elsewhere, indicating recently felled trees.

I'm afraid Americans are going into wood burning for heat with the same reckless abandon seen in the use of vehicles and other gas burning conveniences. There was no restraint in the use of gas until a limit was put on purchases by retailers who operated under limits set up by distributors who operated under limits set by refiners.

Even with gas at $1.25 a gallon (for which we were "conditioned" months before by the "experts", the number of vehicles being driven each day is tremendous. From cars to motorcycles to all-terrain vehicles to motor homes to riding mowers for even just average sized lawns, we are using fossil energy at a tremendous rate. A "glut" on the gasoline market now hasn't reduced prices—and it doesn't mean there is a "glut" beneath the earth's surface.

But a lot of Americans still go on driving as before, paying for the high cost of gasoline with their automatic cost of living pay increases.

Young people go on ripping around with everything from minibikes up to four wheel drives, day after day, week after week. And the pollution of air continues.

In a few years, we may see another energy crisis—this time in timber. Unless there is a program of reforesting, the supply of trees will go down just as the supply of petroleum has gone down, in relation to demand.

A couple of weeks ago someone noted that two areas of woods not too far north of Saint Joe have disappeared—cut down for fuel purposes, presumably. Maybe someone has begun another stand of timber for the future. But maybe not.

Our land is being covered with concrete and asphalt—and then we wonder why a heavy rain floods the streets of cities. We wonder why the water table goes down and forget that if you cover the ground with pavement, rain cannot soak in.

Right now we are burning trees. That means nature's cycle of natural checks and balances is being upset. Green foliage, which changes carbon dioxide into oxygen, is an "endangered species" all over the world, but especially in the United States when fun takes precedence over necessity and we have gas driven vehicles literally tearing up the ground and its greenery. Right here at Saint Joe, the ripping up and down at an embankment along the river next to the cemetery has destroyed the root system which prevented soil erosion.

The use of wood for heating purposes is a low cost alternative for many families. They have a "right" to be comfortable in winter without the need for paying out a wad of their income for fuel. But the widespread trend to wood burning stoves and heaters must be considered also from the standpoint of what that use may mean to the air we breathe and the soil we depend on for food.

A chain saw can destroy in a few minutes that which nature has taken decades to build.

TRAINING SCHEDULE

Beginning in May, training will be given to see that members of the fire department are acquainted with the five basic requirements for membership.

The five include:

1. Driving—must know how to start and drive all department vehicles. Also operate all accessories (emergency lights, sirens, etc.) Drive through obstacle course. Know how to position truck for hydrant hookups and drafting in various situations.

2. Pumps—must be able to obtain proper water pressure using winter procedures. Also make hydrant and drafting hookups. This is with both pumpers and also grass buggy.

3. Hoses—must be able to identify all types of hoses used by our department and know when it is proper time to use same. Also know how to make hydrant and drafting hookups and multiple line layouts.

4. Ladders—must be able to identify all types of ladders used by our department. Also know the uses of each, how to handle them properly, and how to position them properly.

5. Communications—must know our procedures as follows: the passenger in the fire unit calls back to base upon arrival at the scene of the emergency and informs the base as to what the situation is, be it that they can handle it or that they need additional units or mutual aid or whatever the situation entails, the base operator should then notify DeKalb dispatch of the situation, base operator should turn on citizens band radio, radio operators sould clear after each transmission. The base operator will record all outside departmental transmissions.

These basic requirements will be covered in sessions prior to the regular business meeting on the third Monday of each month starting promptly at 7:00 p.m. Each month one of the five will be covered until all five have been gone over.

The last Monday of each month will be set up for optional items and for makeup sessions on the basics for those who could not attend the regular night.

For those who cannot attend either of these sessions a Saturday or Sunday will be set up so that they may have an equal opportunity to become familiar with the five basic requirements.

The dissenters of the 1960s-70s sometimes point to Jesus Christ to justify their actions, claiming Him to be the greatest revolutionary of all time, attempting by such comparison to give a holy aura to their own ambitions. They overlook one thing: Jesus did not force Himself nor His teachings upon anyone. He spoke, surely, positively, then left the decision to His hearers. Thus did He grant to all men the freedom God created. Today's reformers could well be admonished, as in the Scriptures: "Go thou, and do likewise."

Self-discipline is a matter of courage. Anyone can do as he pleases; but it takes courage to do as one ought.

Dissent in a free society is like the cultivation of the crops in the field. A little agitation promotes growth; too much destroys the roots.

The true essence of freedom is not in the extent to which human rights are exercised; rather, it is in the restraint exercised in pursuing those rights.

Wisdom is like good whiskey. The best of ingredients are essential; but the proof requires age.

Failures are the rungs on the ladder to success.

In unity there is strength; in diversity there is freedom.

The word from Oxford-

"Lend me $5" or "loan me $5?" While it may be better not to borrow at all, if you must do so, say "Lend me $5, please." Why? "Lend" is always a verb. Remember Shakespeare's words: "Lend me your ears." While we often hear "loan" used as a verb, good speakers and writers avoid it. "Loan" is especially incorrect when no actual borrowing is meant: "Lend (not loan) me a hand." "Her presence will lend (not loan) dignity to the occasion." Make good English easy for yourself. Avoid using "loan" as a verb.

Smoking Called 'World Plague'

"Smoking," says the World Health Organization, "is probably the largest single preventable cause of ill health in the world." In the United States, the American Lung Association is one of the major organizations trying to reduce the danger to health represented by smoking.

"Epidemics of bubonic plague and cholera, those great waves of disease, used to start in the orient and spread progressively to the West, killing millions in their path," says Dr. Keith Ball of the United Kingdom. "Today a new epidemic, starting in the West and potentially as deadly as the earlier plagues, threatens the world. Its effects are less obvious and its growth more insidious, yet its cause is known and its spread is encouraged by those whose interests are vested in its expansion."

Dr. Ball says about smoking that, although the infection has spread far and infiltrated nearly every corner of the earth, timely action can yet halt its progress and lessen he numbers of children who acquire the habit and are eventually killed or crippled by its effects. It takes generations, he says, before the catastrophic consequences of cigarette smoking are recognized, giving tobacco companies ample time to get the habit deeply ingrained into a country's culture.

At the beginning of this century, the American Lung Association worked to combat the nation's chief killer, tuberculosis, then called the "white plague." Now, 75 years later, the association is fighting another plague that kills 350,000 Americans each year. It is encouraging everyone who smokes to kick the habit, and it has developed special programs in schools to help convince youngsters to stay nonsmokers for a lifetime.

To find out the facts about smoking and fight a word-wide epidemic, contact your local American Lung Association, 802 West Wayne Street, Fort Wayne, Indiana 46804. They are the Christmas Seal people. . . . It's a mater of life and breath. . .

Around the Town
WITH THE EDITOR

Mildred Jarrett had a suggestion a week ago. She wanted a listing of candidates who will appear on the primary ballot.

Unfortunately, I don't seem to be able to catch up and so I didn't have the time to prepare such a listing.

That's bad; a good newspaper should publish such information. My main excuse is that town matters keep popping up and must be taken care of, sometimes "right now." In particular, this seems to be "the year of the drain"—or maybe more correctly "the year of the roots." And I have taken time to offer whatever assistance or suggestions I can to those having problems, even though some of them are not town board responsibilities. But I know what it is to have drain problems and I know what a help others have been to me in times of need in such matters. I'm just trying to pass along the same helpfulness. In so doing, I have neglected other responsibilities—such as preparing a list of primary candidates.

I'm sorry if my choices and decisions have been unfair to readers.

What can be listed, however, are the candidates for positions on the DeKalb eastern school board. There are two contests and two seats unopposed.

Concord Township—Keith A. (Andy) Crow.

Spencer Township—Stanley C. Washler.

Butler City—J. Reynold Johnson or John B. Meeks.

Troy, Stafford and Newville townships—Kenneth L. Franz or Jerry L. Kesner.

Sp'ville FD To Offer Training

CPR, Advanced First Aid and Emergency Care classes sponsored by the Spencerville Volunteer Fire Department will be held May 6, 13, 20 and 27. The first class will be held at the Spencerville Fire Hall with the remaining classes at the Spencerville Community Club Building.

Sessions run from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Cost is $3.00 for a textbook which is kept by the trainee.

The public is invited to take these courses.

Simulated 'Real Thing' Fire Drill Held At School

—from the Fire Department

Area firemen from Saint Joe and Spencerville responded to an alarm at 9:30 a.m. Friday, April 25, at the Riverdale Elementary School. The alarm was a well-staged practice run in which smoke bombs were planted in certain areas to dramatize the reality of the alarm.

The teachers and students as well as firemen knew nothing of the practice run excepting officers of the departments, the radio dispatcher for DeKalb County and the school principal. The secrecy of the practice run caused some teachers and parents to become upset with fire officials for not informing them of the practice in advance. The firemen are sorry that we caused such fears and tension but we feel that it was needed in order to make sure that every child would be taken care of and accounted for in case of a real fire.

The school did a super job of this. Every teacher checked attendance after leaving the building and reported if any students were missing. A few teachers were missing students, but only after firemen pulled a student out of line to make sure the teachers know if all students were still inside. The teachers did find them missing and did report it to firemen on the scene.

The practice was also to help local firemen find any problems that might develop if the school was actually on fire. The firemen found several things that they needed to do during an actual fire and one such problem was the ventilation system carried the smoke through the whole school. This would feed the fire and make the fire all the more severe. This problem we now know and can correct if a real fire should happen.

A very important problem that was seen at the school was parents that wanted to go into the school and hunt for their child. We strongly urge parents to stay back and let the firemen handle the situation. We will know if anyone is inside and if so we will get them out. The teachers are outstanding as far as checking their students' presence. The parent will just make it harder for the firemen and possibly become a victim themselves.

The Spencerville and Saint Joe fire departments who were present for the practice did very well and deserve nothing but praise for the drill. I believe our children are in good hands.

Nucor In 'Fortune 500'

Nucor Corporation, parent company of the Vulcraft plant at Saint Joe, achieved a significant milestone based on its 1979 sales, according to F. Kenneth Iverson, president and chief executive officer.

In the recently released issue of May 5, 1980, "Fortune" magazine, Nucor was ranked number 481 among the 500 largest industrial corporations in the United States.

The 40% increase in sales achieved by Nucor in 1979 allowed it to move up 81 positions from its ranking of 562 in 1978. Nucor joins seven other North Carolina based companies as members of the select group. It is the only company headquartered in Charlotte, North Carolina, to be included.

Mr. Iverson said, "The real credit must go to the over 3,000 loyal and dedicated employees at our nine operating divisions throughout the United States. In a time of declining productivity throughout our country, they continue to achieve new heights in their level of productivity year after year. They are the heart of this company."

Nucor's results for 1979 were the highest in its 25 year history. Sales were $428.7 million, 40% higher than the $306.9 million in 1978. Net earnings were $42.3 million ($6.29 per share), 61% higher than the $25.8 million ($3.91 per share) in 1978.

Through its three scrap-based steel mills, Nucor produces a variety of carbon and alloy steel products. Through its Vulcraft divisions, Nucor is the nation's largest producer of steel joists and joist girders, and also produces steel deck and cold finished steel bars.

Yard, Garage Sales Are Part Of 'Open House'

The third annual "Open House Day" for Saint Joe is planned Saturday, May 17.

In 1978, when Kay Smith reopened her newly remodeled and equipped "Family Cuts and Curls" hair care facility, other businesses joined in the open house occasion. In addition, numerous yard and garage sales were held in town and the area and the entire idea was looked upon as a type of "homecoming" by former residents and friends who came to visit. The open house was repeated in 1979.

Those who plan to have yard or garage sales at their homes should notify the News Office as soon as possible for a free listing of the locations of such sales.

In 1975 Saint Joe observed the 100 anniversary of the layout of the original plat of Saint Joe, an area covering six blocks. Those six blocks are now bounded by the Dewey White residence at the east, west to Yeiser's Standard Service, then the three blocks on the south side of the street for the same distance.

This year, then, will mark the 105th anniversary of the original plat, appropriate for the "open house" occasion.

This year will also mark the 5th birthday of Knisely Branch Bank at Saint Joe. The branch opened in July of 1975 when the town held its centennial observance.

NOTICE

St. Joe Water Department Drinking Water Exceeds Microbiological Standards

The St. Joe Water Department water supply failed to comply with the Federal Drinking water standard for coliform bacteria for December 1979, January and February 1980. The coliform organism is used as an indicator of the microbiological quality of drinking water. Coliforms indicate possible contamination and the possible presence of disease-causing organisms.

The St. Joe Water Department is attempting to solve the problem by a thorough inspection of treatment facilities and sampling techniques.

The inconsistencies of the test samples for the above three-month period indicate a localized problem and not contamination of the basic water supply.

Every Litter-Picker-Upper Helps

The litter cleanup by local Boy Scouts and Lions Club members April 19 may have served as inspiration for the younger set a week ago.

Apparently Lance Norton said to his sister, Heather, "Hey, let's take the old man's small tractor and wagon, and do some cleaning up of our own." And Heather apparently responded in the affirmative because they both showed up at the News Office as shown above. The wagon full of litter was picked up in less than a two-mile stretch of County Road 59 on just the east side of the road, between Saint Joe and the Norton home.

P.S. Mom and Dad went along, too, but they were too bashful to have their picture taken.

The word from Oxford-

National attitudes may affect the way languages develop, and the American language is no exception. It even reflects feelings passed on to us long ago by the British. So today we say things in particular ways without knowing why. Consider the word "Dutch." (Recall the old intense rivalry between the English and the Dutch.) "Dutch courage" comes from a bottle. In a "Dutch treat," everyone pays his own way. "To get in Dutch" is to get into trouble. "It's all Dutch to me" means it makes no sense. "To talk like a Dutch uncle" is to lecture with kindly severity. How many more can you recall?

When you turn on a light switch, or an appliance, or a television, chances are you don't care where the electricity comes from. But we do.

Candidates' Views-

Mike Walter, 33, of Auburn is a candidate for delegate to the Indiana Democratic State Convention, a post he held in 1976. Three delegates are to be selected jointly in the May 6 primary by Democrats in Concord and Union townships.

A vocal critic of patronage politics, Walter gained statewide attention two years ago for efforts to insert a plank in the Democratic platform calling for an end to partisan control of Indiana's 187 auto license branches.

This year Walter has targeted excessive candidate filing fees for convention-nominated offices for special criticism. The fees, which range from $2200 to $3900, are required by both of Indiana's major parties and must be paid before a candidate's name may be placed in nomination.

In an article that appeared March 28 in the Fort Wayne "Journal-Gazettee," Walter attacked the fees as an unfair obstacle to many qualified candidates for state office and charged that they violate a 1972 U.S. Supreme Court decision.

Walter says he is exploring the possibility that, if elected, he might challenge the filing-fee system in federal court.

A former Peace Corps volunteer and Foreign Service Officer, Walter is an Indiana University graduate and holds an M.A. in international relations from Johns Hopkins. He graduated from the I.U. School of Law at Bloomington in 1979. He passed the Indiana bar exam in February and will be admitted to practice on May 30.

Walter is the son of the late Carl and Mary Lu Walter, both of Auburn, and the grandnephew of the late Wilbur "Pete" Walter of Saint Joe.

That item about the bee-keepers — what do they swap — bee stings?? And why don't they call it a "bee market" instead of a "flea market"??

Signs on poles indicate there are more garage sales going on for the coming weekend than are listed in this issue.

Drains, Cleanup, Water Tests, FD Training Part Of Board Meeting

The town board of Saint Joe met Monday in a three-hour session. Present were president Ted Haberkorn; member Paula Tinstman; clerk-treasurer Emma Frank; and Jerry Hess, Jim Miller, John Bopp, Steve Munroe and Steve Grogg.

The president stated that due to certain problems, Mr. Miller was not working for the town. He also announced that James McCanna of Auburn is now serving as legal counsel for the board.

Mr. Hess and the board exchanged some comments and thoughts concerning trash removal. Monday was the first pickup day under a contract with Hess & Sons Disposal. It was noted by Mrs. Frank that the contract is for residential pickup only and that pickups from business establishments are done by private agreement between the business and the trash removal company. Businesses are not billed by the town for trash removal; only residences are billed on the utility bills.

Saturday, May 31, was set as cleanup day for the town. Part of Mr. Hess' bid included one free cleanup pickup per year from residences. He said the pickups would probably begin just before noon that day. All items to be pickup up, including large appliances, are to be set at the curb, just as is the case for regular Monday pickups.

Mr. Bopp has been making repairs at Wild Cherry Park. This includes repair of sandboxes, benches, cookout units, rest rooms and so on.

Mrs. Tinstman was asked to contact local Scout units for possible Scout community projects as carried out by Scouts in other years.

Mr. Haberkorn said that the Environmental Protection Agency had sent notice of "bad" results on tests of water samples. He called the EPA at Chicago last month and told them that a change in personnel was taking place and that it did not appear that there was any danger in the water supply but that the poor tests probably were due to the manner in which samples were taken. Maurice Kline, the new waterworks superintendent, has sent three samples since assuming his duties and all three tests were "perfect."

Even though such situations may not involve a real health hazard, the EPA requires notification of the public of "bad" tests even after "good" tests have been forthcoming.

The president asked what happened to the heavy timber side rails which were part of the pavilion at Wild Cherry Park before wind blew the pavilion down last year. It was stated that the timbers were to be reinstalled but apparently were taken for firewood.

Local drain problems, both town and private, are numerous this spring. Discussion was held about the various locations and their problems. The board is trying to assist local residents as much as possible in coping with what seems to be an unusual growth of roots in the past year. However, the board does not pay for repairs to private tile, its responsibility lying in upkeep of town tile and catchbasins.

A request was received for permission to dispose of certain materials at what formerly was the town dump. The president said that Bob Beerbower from Saint Joe Elevator had inquired about better control over dumping in the area. After an inspection of the site last weekend with Mr. Beerbower, Mr. Haberkorn recommended that dumping be banned entirely. The area was described as "a mess." It appears that people are dumping even large appliances on the elevator property The board president said efforts should be made to clean up the area and cooperate with the elevator in preventing further dumping.

Discussion was held about the mosquito problem with the president to investigate the possibility of spraying.

A request was made that the town pay for EMT training for a member of the fire department. The president noted that the board's previous discussion about paying certain firemen's expenses had to do with fire fighting. Mr. Grogg and Mr. Monroe said EMT training is a part of fireman training according to standards set by the local fire department. The president replied that the board has not been consulted as to such requirements and that the approval of officers has not been requested by the department from the board. He also said that the department should have its organization set up so that the business officers are separate and distinct from the fire fighting command. Mrs. Tinstman then suggested that the board meet with the firemen, as the department had requested early this year, and establish an understanding of what the board wants. It was agreed then that the board attend the July meeting of the fire department.

A set of rates was established for large quantities of water obtained from the town for swimming pools. The rates are:

$50 for over 30,000 gallons.
$40 for 20,000 to 30,000 gallons.
$30 for under 20,000 gallons.

These rates are for water only and do not include hauling.

Bills allowed were:

Town—Auburn Veterinary Clinic, dog disposal $20.00; Dennis Taylor, dog warden salary 3 months and dog care $126.00; Bradley Thomas, attorney fee 3 months 134.00; Paul Fetters, backhoe, labor and hauling 75.61; John Bopp, labor 152.50; Flex Rod Company, cutting tools 85.49; Roy Eck, open 2 graves 150.00; Yeiser's Standard Service, gas 64.99.

Waterworks—Maurice Kline, salary and postage 84.21; Indiana State Board of Health, water test fee 10.00.

Cub Scout 'Bike Rodeo' Part Of 'Open House'

Adding to Saint Joe's 3rd Annual Open House Day, Saturday, May 17, will be a Bike Rodeo sponsored by the Cub Scouts organization. The bike rodeo will be held from 1 to 3 p.m., according to adult leader Ruth Delagrange.

There will be a free bike safety inspection, plus games. Kids of all ages are invited to participate.

The bike rodeo will be held at the Riverdale School.

The ups and downs of the outdoor temperatures this spring could dampen the enthusiasm for Saint Joe's 3rd annual Open House Day Saturday, May 17. But some folks are going ahead with their plans, optimistic about what will come that day weatherwise.

In Saint Joe Kay Smith's "Family Cuts and Curls" will offer discounts on Redken hair care products, plus free refreshments of cookies and coffee.

The local fire department will have open house during Saint Joe's "Open House day."

Brown Furniture & Hardware will have a 10% discount Saturday on garden seeds and a brand of interior latex paint.

"September 26, 1885"—that's the date of an original copy of The St. Joe News to be given away at Saint Joe's 3rd Annual Open House Saturday, May 17.

And this may be the last time The News will be able to award a historic issue because Ye Ed says "the duplicate copies in our files are running out." Two other similar awards have been made, at the two previous open house observances in 1978 and 1979.

Registration is limited to age 18 and over.

Mary Beatty, manager of the Knisely Branch Bank at Saint Joe, says that space on the bank parking lot is available free to anyone wanting to have a bake sale or whatever. Check with her.

Yard or garage sales known of at this writing are:

Merl and Ruth Coburn residence in Saint Joe.

Iris Hudson residence on County Road 56 northwest of Saint Joe (Wednesday through Saturday).
(Plumbing and heating tools, motors, some household items, etc.)

Flea market at the Nosey Nook. Rental space available by contacting Marie Noel at 238—4383.

Youth League Selling Cannisters

The Riverdale Youth League will be selling decorative cannisters containing pop corn or hard tack candy from May 10 to May 17.

Funds will be used for equipment and installation of a new diamond.

With Little League, Pony League and girls' softball activities, the program will involve some 187 youngsters this summer.

Pictured above are Chris Ramer and Tony Emenhiser as they showed illustrations of the cannisters to Paul and Leila Moore of Saint Joe to "kick off" the fund-raising project.

Cost of a cannister is $3.50.

What To Believe - ??

It's rather confusing—trying to decide whether the public has a "right to know" in certain situations. Maybe the problem isn't a question of the public's "right to know" but rather the fact that when the public does get "informed," you don't know whether to believe what is told.

Sometimes the information is presented with words and sentences which seem contradictory to what has happened.

For instance, after the recent unsuccessful attempt to rescue American hostages held in Iran, the President of the United States said he took full responsibility for the failure. He also said that the attempt, even though it failed, served to strengthen our position in dealing with the revolutionaries holding the hostages.

It beats me how you can come up with that conclusion. How can a botched-up rescue attempt "strengthen" our position? I know it is the responsibility of any national leader to voice optimism, to keep the spirit of the people "up" and hopeful. But there are times when being honest about the situation is better than putting up a false front.

Now there is an indication that "leaks" in the state department or somewhere in our government are and have been alerting our enemies. And the President is reported as determined to eliminate the "leaks." But how are you going to do that when most people are inclined to say SOMETHING somewhere along the line when they feel a secret or surprise move is wrong, mismanaged, or whatever—even though they are pledged to silence?

It makes me wonder about our security. Here we had, in World War II, a surprise landing at Normandy, catching the German command 'way off guard. No "true" leaks spoiled that military action; some "fake" leaks DID confuse the enemy.

Now here we have a comparative handful of rescuers involved. And the thing gets all fouled up. I know—the explanation is given that a series of "bad breaks" led to the failure of the rescue mission.

Bad breaks?? If helicopters can't be relied on for flights of 500 miles, why plan to use them? If strong winds and a sand storm contributed to the failure, why weren't these possibilities covered in the desert training prior to the actual rescue attempt??

Here we have human beings shooting out into space, landing on the moon—we have space ships going millions of miles out into the universe to send back photographs (and we can make adjustments in their flight for the most part if there is a malfunction)—but down here on Mother Earth we can't fly some airplanes to a certain spot without falling into chaos.

Something just doesn't fit.

Quayle Votes Anti-Big Spending

Senator Birch Bayh of Indiana has made another dirty-dozen-type list — this one published by the National Taxpayers Union.

The NTU gives an annual analysis of the votes of Senators and Representatives in legislative matters critical to the spending of tax dollars. Bayh earned the label "Big Spender" with a 20 percent rating. This means that during 1979, the Indiana senator voted to cut spending only 20 percent of the time and voted to increase spending 80 percent of the time.
